A Former Plymouth Girl Married

The New London Record of Wednesday has the following wedding notice: "On Thursday, August 31, Miss Ruth M. Knowlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Knowlton, was married to Robert Knapp, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Knapp. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Johnson, of the First Christ church, at the parsonage in New London, in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom, the ring ceremony being used."

Mr. and Mrs. Knapp left immediately after the ceremony for Columbus, where they spent three days.

"They will make their home with Mr. Knapp's parents, four miles north of town, during the winter months."

The Record joins with many friends in extending well wishes."

The many friends of the bride here extend to her and her husband hearty congratulations.

Auto Tours.

The ideal month for a motor trip is September, and the auto service afforded by the Lincoln Service from Cleveland makes the delightful touring territory adjacent to Buffalo in Western New York and Southern Ontario particularly available for the tour of two days or longer.

The $5.00 Auto Rate takes you east by auto from Cleveland to Buffalo and back for a two days' motor trip; this very low rate being made for all cars less than 128 inches wheelbase.

You may leave Cleveland any evening at 7:30, arrive at Buffalo at 7:30 next morning, spend the day in touring to Niagara Falls, East Aurora, Toronto or other attractive points and return from Buffalo the evening of the second day at 9:00, reaching Cleveland 7:30 the following morning, thus making an ideal outing trip at a small cost.

Five Parties on the Ballot.

Five state ballots will be up for consideration by the voters of Ohio this November. They are Republians, Democrats, Socialists, the Labor and Prohibition. In addition the announcement of Rudolph Mack, of Cincinnati, that he will be a candidate for governor against the regular Republican candidate, Governor Willis, and the ticket of a new born party to be known as the Law Enforcement party, provides six gubernatorial candidates for the electors to choose from. Mack's will be the only name to appear upon the ticket of the newly announced party.

Progressives will not have a state ballot this year, but the Republican and Democratic tickets will provide candidates for United States senator, these being, respectively, former Governor Myron T. Herrick and Senator Atlee Pomerene.

Blunders of Print.

Notice on a door of a residence: "Please knock the bell out or order." Sign in a Chicago drug store: "Save your coupons and get an art plaque free."

Advertisement of an institution in South Dakota: "Memory Hospital. Female patients only."

Manitoba Free Press, in quoting Ralph Connor: "I who have never set foot on my native shoes."

From a New York paper: "Emily was a queer girl, and so, for that matter, was her father."

A western boy announces: "We make the interest of our depositors our interest."

Newspaper speaking of a deceased financier: "He is reputed to have made six million dollars in as many years."

Card of cleaning company: "Don't take the life out of your rugs by beating them. Let us do it in a more sanitary way."

Tax Collections are Proportioned

The total tax collections in Huron county for the last half of 1915 amounts to the big sum of $79,638.52. To this amount is added $1,553.49 personal tax, which was not collected in 1914.

Of the sum the schools are given the big amount according to the division which is $13,582.50, county $86,192.10, townships $85,678.30, schools $105,226.30, cities and villages $65,377.23, special assessments $23,941.72, dog tax $92.26, auditor and collector fees for funds credited $905.46.

A rebate from the state of $7,984 for the common school funds has been credited to the school district.

Notes to Hunters.

The Rogers farm northeast of town in New Haven township, is not a public hunting ground or game preserve, yet many sportsmen seem to think so. This notice is to warn all persons against hunting or trapping thereon, and they will be undeceived if caught in these premises without the proper credentials, from this date on.

FRANK ROGERS.

Presbyterian Church.

Since the interior work of our church is not yet finished, we will hold preaching services only next Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Lutheran church.

Methodist Notes.

Four united with the church last Saturday in numbers of transfer. Two come from our church at Shelby and two from Crestline.

Why go to church? Because the thought and speech on high themes, the noble and dignified music are used to offset the slang, profanity and ragtime with which we are daily account.

Next Sunday will be the last Sunday of this Conference year. The pastor will preach morning and evening. Sunday, September 17, will be Conference Sunday and there will be no preaching service.

The Annual Conference will be held this year at Steubenville, beginning Tuesday afternoon, September 12, continuing to the following Monday. Bishop Anderson, resident bishop of Cincinnati, will preside at the Conference. About five hundred ministers will receive appointments at the close of this conference.

The Epworth League had a very enjoyable Labor Day picnic at Monroe Park, on the grounds of the home of John Kentstrick, just west southwest of Plymouth. The trip there and back was made in a hay wagon, with Mr. Ira Ross as "chauffeur." Thirty-three were present and greatly enjoyed the unusual event.

Sale of Billstein Furniture.

The Billstein furniture, which was seized by a creditor of the Honey Creek Poultry Farm, and held illegally, has been awarded by the court, to its rightful owners, the Billstein here.

This furniture will be sold on Saturday, September 16, at the rear of the furniture rooms of Charles G. Miller on Plymouth street.

Sale begins at 10 o'clock a.m.

Republians Name Executives.

The Huron County Central Committee met at Norwalk last week Wednesday and held a business session by electing the following central committee to act as executive committee:

Frank A. Knapp, chairman. Irving Carpenter, secretary. J. G. White, Wakeman. T. W. Lathan, Monroeville. C. A. Hamilton, Plymouth. Ivan Hull, New London. W. N. Keeley, Richland.

Time of Seeding Wheat.

As an average of 14 years work to compare dates for seeding wheat from August 31 to October 27, the Ohio Experiment Station has found that the most common dates have been obtained from seedings made September 21-22, while those made a week later than this made second rank and those made a week earlier stand third. In central Ohio the most satisfactory date to plant is probably the latter part of September, while the first week in October may not be too late in the southern part of the state.

MACK, FOR ELECTED, GETS OUT OF RACE

Glaring Irregularities Alleged in Petitions Filed in Cincinnati.

Disappointed Office-Seeker Will Now
Attempt to Form an Alleged
"Law Enforcement League"—Moves
Amuses Those On the Inside.

Columbus, Sept. 5.—Following almost immediately upon disclosures reflecting upon the integrity of nominating petitions filed in his behalf, Rudolph A. Mack of Cincinnati Saturday evening withdrew as a candidate of the alleged "Law Enforcement party" for governor of Ohio. Mr. Mack, a disappointed office-seeker, is to continue his fight against Governor Willis, who refused him appointment, by attempting to organize a so-called "Law Enforcement league." His attempts have been repudiated by the Anti-Saloon league and the Hamilton County Dry Amendment league.

Mr. Mack was a candidate against Governor Willis for the Republican nomination for governor at the August primary. According to Columbus newspapermen, Mr. Mack and his close friend, Eddie Gerish, a disappointed office-seeker, held numerous conferences during this campaign with Robert F. Wolfe, the close supporter of ex-Governor Cox, and certain it is that Wolfe's bitter anti-Wills newspaper gave Mack unprecedented support. The report made by Mack revealed the fact that his chief financial backer in the August campaign was Charles H. Gerish, well remembered in the 1914 campaign as the maker of an affidavit in which confessing himself to have been a laborer Gerish sought to reflect upon the integrity of the governor. Gerish had been disappointed in not receiving party office desired in that campaign, and has been reputed to be the political agent of Wolfe.

It is extremely interesting to think of a moral law enforcement cause having backed by Bob Wolfe and Charles Gerish," said a Columbus friend of the two men Sunday. "Everybody knows that the only political consideration of interest to these two men is the re-election of ex-Governor Cox. They hope to use the alleged 'Law Enforcement league' to catch the unwary."

A SUNNY TEMPER.

A sunny temper is a talisman more powerful than wealth, more precious than rubies. If you wish to attract friends and to do your best work, keep your mind filled with sunshine, with beauty and truth, with cheerful and uplifting thoughts. Busy people are often unhappy and discordant, everything that cramps your freedom and worries you. Busy it before it buries you. Adopt the sunbird's motto, "I record none but hours of sunshine."

A Famous Old Structure.

Santa Barbara, probably the most visited city in California, presents a picture unique in scope and in the mission style of architecture. Established Dec. 14, 1782, this is the only mission still in the hands of the Franciscans, who founded them all. This structure is situated in the city of Santa Barbara, in the foothills two miles from the ocean.—Argonaut.

According to announcement made by the promoters, Crestline will have its annual base ball tournament this year on Thursday, September 28th. Some excellent talent is promised and one of the competing teams will be the Akron Indians. The Indians will be looking forward to land one of the amateur teams from this city which have figured in the contest for the world's championship amateur title. Cash prize amounting to $240 will be distributed among the teams and the winning team will be expected to attract good money. In addition teams in the surrounding towns are expected to "head up" with big league stars, who always prove a big feature of the fall tournament in this vicinity.—Crestline Advocate.

SYNOPSIS.

Alan Wayne, a boy away from Red Hill his home, by his mother's side, as a mortal failure. Cries rung after him in a tangle of voices. "It's all over," said the doctor. Wayne tells Alan of the failing of the Waynes. The doctor tries to heal him. The birthday. Judge Healey defends Alan in his business with his employers. Alan and his mother are at home. Nancy Stern, Alan's sweetheart, has come to see him. He is taken to taste it by Gerry, her husband, for her. She comes to Alan and dedicates her love. As he walks with Alan and dedicates his life to him, she kisses him. They are happily engaged, bathed and dressed.

The Zanzibari handed him a cup of hot tea. By the time the tea was drunk the table was freshly laid, and Alan sat down to a steaming bowl of broth, and dinner.

After dinner Mr. Boniface joined them for a smoke. For half an hour they sat wordless. Darkness fell.

brought out the lights of their softly glowing pipes.

From the men's camp came a subdued chatter. The men were feeding. As they finished they lit fires—a fire for every little group that smelt the wood fire trumpeted over every other.

Douglas had met Alan first in a bare room at an African seaport. The room was furnished with a chair and a table. At the table sat Alan, busy with final estimates and plans for supplies. Douglas had been sent to him when he was shown.

Douglas had waited for a job and Alan had answered, "Get out."

Douglas had repeated his request and the rest of the story he told the next morning before the resident magistrate in the chair and Alan in the dock.

"Awee, your honor, it was this way:

I went into Mr. Wayne's office and asked him for work and he said, 'Get out.' I asked him again and he said,

"I'll give you two to get out—One for me and one for the girl." And he smiled. She slipped back at him but trouble was still in her eyes.

Gerry left her to start on the work of fitting the ponderous sluice-gates of her own log. He had prepared for a triumph of the greatest pitch. It was a triumph of the greatest pitch. He never had evaded it without the aid of a giant ironwood swarmer torn from the wreck of a cotton press. The screw was so heavy that he and Boniface could hardly carry it.

At the end of three days the great estate of Mr. Wayne and Boniface toiled like sailors at a captain. They drove the heavy barrier down into the sand with a last turn of the screw and shot out the river. Margarita came and saw and was pleased.

Gerry started opening the silt gates, the lowest first. The water gushed out into the main trench and from there was distributed. At first the thirty soil swallowed it greedily but as the water rose it became more and more sluggish and finally it was held up and farther down into the valley. Under the blazing sun they looked like streams of molten silver and gold.

Margarita came running up to them from the house. Gerry put his arm around her and made her face the army. "There's a little girl," she said and smiled. She slipped back at him but trouble was still in her eyes.

Under the broad dome of a mango tree on the banks of an unnamed African river Alan Wayne had pitched his camp. The tent, a long, low, projecting veranda, was faded and stained. The bobbinet mosquito curtains were creamed with age and serice.

Two camp chairs and a collapsible table, battered but strong, were placed before the tent. Over one of the chairs a green tent cloth was snatched a take-down bath tub, half filled with water. In the deep shadow of the tree the pale green rot-proof canvas of the tent, the fly, the chairs and bathtub gleamed almost white.

On the farther side of the great tree a small tree stood. On its spreading branches a kitchen, three stones and a half-dozen of forked sticks driven into the ground. On the sticks hung a few pots and pans, a saddle of buck, bits of fat and a disreputable looking coffee-pot. Between the stones was a bed of coals. Before them crouched a red-faced Zanzibari.

From under a second tree, fifty yards away, came the dull, rhythmic pounding of wooden pestles in wooden mortars. The pestles could just distinguish the gleaning naked torso of a woman who was singing a barbarous chantey. There were singing a barbarous chantey. There were singing a barbarous chantey.

It was a dark night when Alan waited for a light and drew from a worn leather case the correspondence that his runner from the coast had brought that day. He glanced over official communications, blue prints and business ledgers and stuck them back into the leather case. One fat letter, note paper size, remained.

"McDougal," said Alan, "push up the camp-tell 'em it's nine o'clock."

McDougal arose and picking up a big stick strode over towards the men. There was a shriek of surprise, a shrill noise, and then a yell, excited cry, and then the men popped into camp. A yell of talk, held in check for hours, arose. Glimmering black bodies danced to jerky, fatuous steps. Songs, shouts and impatient cries to the cooks swelled the medley of sound. Through the camp stirs the

I really caught her looking at the while I was sitting on the old stone bench down by the pond. I was after her all the way down Long Lane and up the Low Road to where the red cow broke her tail and the black bull followed her. I heard her laugh and had to come away without her and now I feel no queer desire to see her again.

"Somehow I can't blame her. She didn't leave to leave the Hill in the sorgent mood of the just reared behind. Do you remember—

This is the sorgent mood when last Mount to the gods is myriad summer—

A few hours ago when I was doing my milks on the cowhouse I almost got run over and Man's wife gave me an awful scolding for being so absent-minded. It was a true woman's mind that absorbed me so that even though my mind was off chasing the other half. And then I came back and then I saw her again. I was so surprised at her staring at me more than they ever have before. I suppose it was because I was out hunting with chasing in mind. Good-bye, Alan.

—CLERM.

Alan sat in the circle of light from the hanging lamp and stared into the darkness. From the river came the sound of sucking mud, then a heavy tread. A monster hippo blundered through the bushes in search of food. On the other side of the river the Zanzibari was working. The fire was burning out at the men's camp. Once more the odor of their bodies hung in the air.

Alan arose and dragged his chair to the outer edge of the madga tree. He sat down, with hands locked and elbows on knees, gazing into the darkness. He forgot the sounds and smells of Africa, the black-green of overhanging leaves, the black shadows of the swirling river, the black-bronze tones about him. For an hour he sat there, thinking of the world he would to wander over the beloved hills in New England where summer died in a burst of light.

Red Hill, crowned with mountain peaks, looked to him as a torch in the night to a lost wanderer. The thoughts that had passed him since last he saw its budding promise were

"Awee, your honor, it was this way: I went into Mr. Wayne's office and asked him for work and he said, 'Get out.' I asked him again and he said, 'I'll give you two to get out—One for me and one for the girl.' And he smiled. That's all, your honor, said' the Kafir who was looking for water me and a rose bush, turn by turn about."

"I suppose," said the magistrate, covering his twitching mouth with his hand, "that was the Kafir I signed a bond with for last night."

"It may be so," said McDougal dreamily. "It may be so."

"Well, McDougal, I think this is a matter that can be settled out of court—"

McDougal held up a vast hand in triumph. "Before you pardon, your honor, there will be no settlement of this matter out of court between me and Mr. Wayne and myself."

"Justice and the prisoner in the dock surrendered to laughter. McDougal stood grave and unperturbed.

"I suppose," said the magistrate, when he recovered, "is that Mr. Wayne will probably give you a job and call it all square."

"That's it," said Alan.

"I asked Mr. Wayne for work and if it's granted it will be giving me I'll make a bond with the Kafir," said McDougal, and forthwith became Ten Percent Wayne's gang-boss and understudy in the art of driving men with both fists and a knife.

McDougal knocked out his pipe.

"The 'hell' of a country is this," he said.

"It may be so," said McDougal dreamily. "It may be so."

swept away. He imagined those very budding leaves at the end of their stems, the deep name of the steadfast tree, the fainting fire of the brave maple.

Maple House arose before him. His lawn carpeted with dry leaves. From the leaves floated an income dusty pungent. The cool shadows of the maple, the fainting fire of the brave maple.

Gerry turned to his work of filling the gap. He cut the best of the cane and planted it in the earth with a blunt knowledge of himself. He cut the bolls of cotton. The women stripped the fiber and when it was long, silky and tough they picked out the seeds with care and hoarded them for their time was not yet come.

One day more and he would be released another. The days passed rapidly.

Conversally, McDougal was a companionable silence. Alan could feel him sitting there in the dark, raw-boned and dour but ready at the word of command.

It was a dark night when Alan waited for a light and drew from a worn leather case the correspondence that his runner from the coast had brought that day. on my way and they're trying—starting. I came down to make a deal. I've picked out a hundred and twenty head with bone in 'em—horns and cattle. If you'll take 'em and feed 'em through to the raths I'll give you ten per cent of the value. You can't go far to save the cost."

Gerry looked at his tiny plantations which showed up meekly in the great expanse of waste pasture. "I'm sorry," he said. "But I'm afraid I can't. You see, I can't afford to fence."

Lieber stopped his horse. His eyes widened and he said: "What's it?" "It's not right," he said. "I've got a lot of wire that's no use to me and a lot of leasers to tear it down and put it up. I'll fence as much pasture as you say and throw in the fencing on the deal."

"That's mighty fair," said Gerry; "but you know you don't have time to do it. You won't come down to the house and have a bite to eat?" He turned and Lieber started to follow. "By the way," said Gerry over his shoulder, "you're not a German, are you?"

Lieber stopped his horse. His eyes widened and he said: "What's it?" "I'm not an American," he said. "I don't think I ought to be." "I'm a German," he said. "The sooner the better. I'll do all I can to help."

The next morning the men came accompanied by oxarts loaded with fencing, posts and all. Lieber was with them. He sat on his horse and defended his own. "All right, Mr. Lieber," he said. "The sooner the better. I'll do all I can to help."

The men had come early. They sat down on the ground with hands locked and elbows on knees, gazing into the darkness. They were silent. Gerry took up his work again. so cherry. "He says," the foreman remarked with a leer, "on making the presentation, you can ride anything you can catch."

Gerry felt the foreman needed persuading in place. He went into the house and requested carrying something in his pocket. "The horses rates," he said and looked. Some were lazy after working him. They stopped a few yards off and scrutinized him as though to divine his intentions. Then they approached him with heads lowered and refused to play the game of fear to a

His Idea.
"You're charging us city prices for these raspberries," said the summer resorter to the farmer.

"Yes. You're city folks, ain't you?"
"Of course."

"And used to paying city prices?"
"Yes. We're city people, we pick these berries ourselves."

"Well, isn't that the fun you came out here to get? You don't expect to get your fun for nothing, do you?"

Too True.
"John, dear, I wish you'd leave me some money today. I've got a lot of shopping to do."

"What do you want money for?"
"You've got charge accounts at three different stores."

"For goodness sake! Don't you know yet that you can never find what you want at the store where you have a charge account?"

Verified.
"What did you mean by recommending that summer resort to me? Why, it's positively the most deadly uniform I ever saw."

"That's the way it struck me, too, old chap. I rarely wanted to have my opinion corroborated."

The next national convention of the Knights of Pythias will be held in Detroit in 1917. This was decided at the convention of Pythians held in San Francisco last week.

The democratic state platform it said, will declare the party in favor of apportioning a large part of the liquor tax and license money to the state instead of putting them into the state treasurer. The plank will be inserted as a remedy for the present bankrupt condition that prevails in several counties.

Mail Zepelins will soon be in service between Berlin and the United States, Morris Epstein of Chicago reports. He tells of having seen two huge Zepelins at Berlin intended for this purpose exclusively. "The new merchantmen were 700 feet long and unarmed and each is capable of carrying 60 tons," he stated.

State auto licensees are now selling at half price, bringing joy to the hearts of new auto owners. The concession is made by the state law for the benefit of auto owners who buy their license before January 1st must get a new license at the beginning of next year. Until January 1st licenses for gasoline cars cost $2.50, electrics $1.50 and motorcycles $1.

Saturday afternoon a meeting of Huron county farmers was held in the court house to consider the plan of the state convention. Although a large attendance was had as was expected, but committee reports were given and a general discussion was entered into, with the result that the matter was better understood and interest in the plan spread. At some future date another meeting will be held for more decisive action.

There seems to be plenty of activity in the Richland-Ashland gas fields as a portion of this week's review of the field says: "Down in Richland and Ashland counties the Logan Natural Gas company and the Ohio Fuel Supply company are drilling a number of wells, anticipating a big supply. In the same time the latter county has completed more wells the past few weeks than for some time past, but none of them have been large producers of gas, and a few have been dusters."

Blockade running seems to be worth something over 300 per cent, according to reported figures incidental to the Deutscheschland dash across the Atlantic. The cost of blockade, of course, the expense of operation, overhead charges, cost of cargo and administration expense, the outlay was slightly over $1,000,000. The cargo is said to have marketed on this side for about $3,000,000, which would leave a net profit of nearly $2,800,000. The percentage of profit on the cargo alone was something like 500.

Frightened and fearing for their safety when William Bedell ran off their lookout with a double barrelled shotgun, yeggmen who attempted to rob the Farmers and Citizens bank at Milan, shortly after 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning, escaped completely, leaving the bank intention to blow the door of the vault. That the charge of explosive is still in the vault door is the belief of the bank officials, for two wires are protruding from the wrecked combination, and an expert has been summoned to examine the door and to possible remove the explosive without discharging it.

Sometimes it does seem that taxes are too high. Occasionally it is maintained that rents are exorbitant. Once in a while one can be easily convinced that the people are being oppressed by the soulless corporations. On the other hand have you ever seen the average citizen who is willing to work seven hours a day and can keep his mouth shut is getting along quite well, and has a comfortable home, a neat bank account and a contented family, in spite of adverse conditions? The fact is, that this nation of ours, in which we like to live, even if conditions are not always perfect, Heaven is the only place where conditions are perfectly perfect.

The glad time of year has arrived when the country newspaper man is offered multitudes of chances to give free advertising to fairs, exhibitions, fall festivals and other schemes for making money—for the other fellow. And so the paper men go to great lengths for getting print paper free, having our work in the office done free, induce Uncle Sam to carry our paper through the mails free, obtain a free pass to the grocery and meat market, arrangements with the city for free water, and the like.

And so, with the telephone companies for free service and the light company for free juice—just as soon as we get these little details arranged we are going to throw our columns open and accept advertising free.

The case of Elva E. Young and Cora Welsh against Mrs. Julia Ann Hofstatter, of Shelby, has been settled out of court. Several cases were started in the common please court of both Richland and Huron counties, but were dismissed by Jacob P. Hofstatter to set aside his will and to cancel deeds executed by him for his real estate. His wife, Julia Ann Hofstatter, was named as executrix of the estate. A few months after his death, the heirs began a process to set aside the will and Mrs. Hofstatter removed as executrix of his estate. In one of the petitions the heirs claimed that their father was physically infirm at the time the will was made, that the attorney in whose office it was drawn up was dead or incompetent, and that Mrs. Hofstatter removed as executrix of his estate.

The result is a showing to the people of the real merit of the Willis administration, which has struck terror in the camp of the State Democrats. Every issue of the radical anti-Hull papers have been in the lead in attacking the administration.

Already the managers of the fair have set their mark for a fair in 1917 with an attendance of at least 200,000.

Many new plans are already under consideration.

And additionally, it may be of interest to know that Ohio's agricultural interests under the Willis state board of agriculture cost just $30,000 for the year ending July 1, 1916, as compared with $128,000 for the same period under the centralized Cox regime.

Today the shadow of the state fair is merely an example of the changed conditions, relative to cost and efficiency, everywhere in state departments, under the administration of Governor Willis.

A single gallon of gasoline will burn 200 cows,耗费 four tons of hay, mix 35 cubic yards of cement, move a ton truck 14 miles, plow five acres of land or generate sufficient electricity to illuminate a farm house for 80 hours.

OHIO PROUD OF GREATEST FAIR

Willis Administration "Delivers the Goods"—Great Credit Due to Careful Officials.

State Board of Agriculture Understands Wishes of the People and Meets Them—Also Makes Big Savings in Managing Agricultural Affairs of the State.

The greatest state fair in the history of the Buckeye state was given the people of Ohio last week by the administration.

In point of attendance, the fair of 1916 exceeded even the largest hopes of its promoters. The total was over $60,000 a day—a total for the fair over $10,000 in excess of any previous state fair.

In number of live stock exhibits alone, this year's fair exceeded every previous year.

In the courtesy of its management and the quality of the service given those in attendance, the parallel is even with the best in the country.

"Our administration," says Governor Willis, "has done more for the state fair than any other administration in the history of the state." The spirit of courtesy that has been instilled into it by the new management, said the Columbus Citizen-Press.

In the quality of its attractions, it gave to the patrons of Ohio's great fairs such merit as has never before been seen on the state fair grounds.

"The Ohio fair this year is second only to Toronto's world-wide famed exhibits," said Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture of Alberta, Canada.

Taking it all in all, never was there such a state fair in Ohio. Everybody is enthusiastic about it and prouder than ever of the great state which it represented.

State fairman were unanimous in their sentiment when he said Friday: "I have been attending Ohio state fairs since 1882 for the purpose of writing them up. Unquestionably the fair this year is the largest and best of them all." The same sentiment was expressed by the Columbus Citizen-Press.

In the quality of its attractions, it gave to the patrons of Ohio's great fairs such merit as has never before been seen on the state fair grounds.

"The Ohio fair this year is second only to Toronto's world-wide famed exhibits," said Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture of Alberta, Canada.

Taking it all in all, never was there such a state fair in Ohio. Everybody is enthusiastic about it and prouder than ever of the great state which it represented.

The credit for this state fair—the greatest in the history of Ohio—is due to the work of the state board of agriculture, a board of ten practical farmers who were appointed by Gov. Willis and board of theorists. The ten members of this board, appointed by Governor Willis, reach every section of the rural and manufacturing interests of Ohio, and are in close touch with the people.

Most of the people who have been led to believe that can be known was there a better demonstration of the ability of such a board to ascertain the wishes of Ohio people and meet them than the fair last week.

To the members of the board, the success of the fair has been a source of great satisfaction. The members have been present, and that it evidences the popularity of Ohio's present governor, is fine.

An interesting fact connected with the fair is that the largest attendance came on "Governor's Day." Governor Willis' birthday, which was observed among the people of Ohio and enjoyed a splendid representation of their work.

The greeting accorded him was one of the most notable in the history of any Ohio fair. And yet, as under former governors, there was no large expenditure of the people's money for political purposes.

Another board of theorists can be known was there a better demonstration of the ability of such a board to ascertain the wishes of Ohio people and meet them than the fair last week.

To the members of the board, the success of the fair has been a source of great satisfaction. The members have been present, and that it evidences the popularity of Ohio's present governor, is fine.

There were no passes this year, save to the old veterans and the soldiers at the Columbus Barracks and Camp Williams. Judges were selected from the various sections of the state, and the work was done upon the strictest lines—not because, as in former administrations, a governor wished to reward political friends. There was no flashing of political pictures upon the screen for effect in the forthcoming days, and the exhibits were considered to be the best in the history of the state fair.

The result is a showing to the people of the real merit of the Willis administration, which has struck terror in the camp of the State Democrats. Every issue of the radical anti-Hull papers have been in the lead in attacking the administration.

Already the managers of the fair have set their mark for a fair in 1917 with an attendance of at least 200,000.

The kiddies are back to school. Camping season is mother's busy day.

The kiddyards are already chanting of frost.

It really did rain last night and this morning.

Fall election is less than two months distant.

Anyways, the hay fever season is about to its end.

Easy to fill—Parker Pens, at Judson's Drug store.

One week of the school year has already been rounded out.

Type writer ribbon and carbon paper at Judson's Drug store.

The open season for shooting squirrel begins next week Friday.

The old straw hat isn't all in yet either. Nor the white shorts, b'gum.

The 8-hour day law will doubtless be akin to the snow ball that went south.

Don't worry. We had enough of rain Wednesday forenoon to be noticeable on the pavement.

Say, the girls will look the part in those nifty new fall suits. All trimmied with fur and dollar bills.

Anyway, if the railroad strike had been pulled off, it might have compelled some people to buy at home.

Another thing to worry about: The portmanteau of failure? Therefore the fall in your price will be lessened accordingly.

For Sale—The house and lot known as the Mrs. E. Kurtz property. Good water, etc. For price and particulars call on Chas. Silliman.

Farmers are up against a hard proposition in their fall plowing, on account of the brick-like condition of the ground, caused by the drought.

It just took three rounds at Cedar Point Monday for Kilbane to give Chaney a lacing and for him to claim the featherweight championship.

For Sale—The Allan Layer property on Bell Street. Possession given on October 1. For particulars write or phone at the above address Springhill street, Mansfield, Ohio.

M. C. Sutton of New Haven, one of Huron county's most progressive farmers, purchased of the Wise, Ridge garage, a very fine Buick-six touring car for the pleasure of his self and family.

President Wilson, Sept. 1, signed the child labor bill, making it illegal to transport any products of child labor from one state to another. "That takes one of fond dreams come true," said he as he affixed his signature.

Somebody has figured out another stab at the barber. He said that if a man shave himself for 50 years, and puts the money thus saved out at interest every five years, at the end of the period he will have $11,100 in cash in the bank.

The hunter who wishes to hunt on land not so own should remember that it is having a license to hunt should also remember that to play safe he must have the written consent of the owner on whose premises he wishes to hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hoyt, who have been the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Reed, for several days past, were called suddenly back to their home in Toledo. Yesterday evening, by a telegram which announced the death of Mr. Hoyt's mother.

The Board of Public Affairs has hired B. H. Miller of Cleveland as assistant electrician and engineer in the light and water department. His household goods are already here and he expects his family daily. They will take up their residence in the McKinley flat.

At Woodville, a big machine dropped up to a garage and obtained a gallon of gasoline. "Ox-wes," said the driver, as he reached in his pocket, "we must have some oil." While the garage man went to the back of the garage for the oil, the big machine hot-footed it down thepike.

Plymouth was pretty well deserted Labor Day, and with most of the business houses closed, had the general appearance of a dead town. Most of our people went to the Labor Day celebrations at New London and Monroeville, while others went to Cedar Point and elsewhere to spend the day.

While the marriage rate of Huron county was lowest during July, happiness boomed a trifle during August and during the 31 days 22 licenses were issued for marriage. This month should see an increase, as the divorce court attaches say, for September like June is much favored by those contemplating matrimony.

At the beginning of the new school year, we should again think of medical inspection. All schools begin to see the need of such work. Inspection, with a view to preventing not only physical disease, but also recting physical defects, which are largely responsible for a great number of truants and moral delinquents.

Bessie Marie, the six-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Trauner residing southwest of town died Monday morning of spinal meningitis. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the home burial taking place in Greenlaw cemetery. The sorrowing parents have the sympathy of their many friends.

This is the week of the Bucyrus fair.

And again the candidates are on the stage these days.

The teacher has the center of the effects of the drotches.

This month has the letter "R," even if we don't get the oyster.

If it doesn't rain soon they will be raising the price of a bath on account of the scarcity of water.

Attica closed her chautauqua with a surplus of $72.00. They certainly have the right spirit over there.

President Wilson, Sept. 1, signed the child labor bill, making it illegal to transport any products of child labor from one state to another. "That takes one of fond dreams come true," said he as he affixed his signature.

Somebody has figured out another stab at the barber. He said that if a man shave himself for 50 years, and puts the money thus saved out at interest every five years, at the end of the period he will have $11,100 in cash in the bank.

The hunter who wishes to hunt on land not so own should remember that it is having a license to hunt should also remember that to play safe he must have the written consent of the owner on whose premises he wishes to hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hoyt, who have been the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Reed, for several days past, were called suddenly back to their home in Toledo. Yesterday evening, by a telegram which announced the death of Mr. Hoyt's mother.

At Woodville, a big machine dropped up to a garage and obtained a gallon of gasoline. "Ox-wes," said the driver, as he reached in his pocket, "we must have some oil." While the garage man went to the back of the garage for the oil, the big machine hot-footed it down thepike.

Plymouth was pretty well deserted Labor Day, and with most of the business houses closed, had the general appearance of a dead town. Most of our people went to the Labor Day celebrations at New London and Monroeville, while others went to Cedar Point and elsewhere to spend the day.

While the marriage rate of Huron county was lowest during July, happiness boomed a trifle during August and during the 31 days 22 licenses were issued for marriage. This month should see an increase, as the divorce court attaches say, for September like June is much favored by those contemplating matrimony.

At the beginning of the new school year, we should again think of medical inspection. All schools begin to see the need of such work. Inspection, with a view to preventing not only physical disease, but also recting physical defects, which are largely responsible for a great number of truants and moral delinquents.

Bessie Marie, the six-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Trauner residing southwest of town died Monday morning of spinal meningitis. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the home burial taking place in Greenlaw cemetery. The sorrowing parents have the sympathy of their many friends.

A. F. Humel of Cleveland, secretary of the Ottawa Shooting Club, organized a shooting club at the Ohio Gun club sportatorium in which he called a meeting to message the club have received from Chief Hatchet of the Biological Survey, Washington, in which the government officially says the Federal open season for ducks in Ohio is from Sept. 16 to Jan. 31 inclusive.

We are unloading a consignment of celery for shipment at 8 A.M. on Thursday morning. Peter, Ned's horse took flight at an engine, and wheeling around beat it up a merry clip to Mills Avenue to the alley at the corner of the Bottenden residence, where it headed north and finally brought it to a standstill at the pole at the rear of the Kirkland residence, the only damage being done was to the harness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Gerhart, who for the past twelve weeks has been making her home with her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Rowan on Walnut street, died Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock, aged 79 years, 5 months and 17 days. Her funeral service was held at the Rowan home Thursday morning, after which the remains were placed aboard B. & O. train No. 4 and taken to her old home in Bellville for burial.

The Farmers Farm company sold quite a heavy load and damage Saturday morning at 8 A.M. at the temperature semi-milky below the frost line and completely destroyed thirty-seven acres of potatoes and seriously injured their corn crop. Others in the vicinity of this farm also suffered considerable frost. On the up-land, however, there was no frost, but here heavy rains brought night day were not the least uncomfortable and frost was freely predicted.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. O'Heron of Fremont, found in town several days this week completing plans for making Plymouth their home. On account of the O'Heron's health, having just left a hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis, he is obliged to give up the baking business, and consequently has taken a position on road salesman for the Pillsbury Flour Co., and in order that he may be nearer to relatives have concluded to return to Plymouth, which will be welcome news to their many friends hereabout.

The chautauqua closed Saturday evening with Samoloff and Vivian Holt the star attraction. The program throughout the five days was of the highest and greatest enjoyment by all who took advantage of hearing the fine attractions given by the Colt-Alber company, in which they more than fulfilled their claim as being one of the strongest five-day chautauquas on the road. Fine though it was not a success, but the quartermaster made a profit without a murmur, but at this time do not feel inclined to promote another for the coming year, and neither can they be criticized, for when they give of their time and energy and work in effect of this kind, and the people do not stand back of them, they do not feel like promoting something the people do not care for. This should be a chautauqua center, and could be if the people would support it as they do.

True, the people are so situated in that they can't afford to hear these attractions at $1 to $2 per person and think they have their money's worth, but when asked to buy a course ticket that their more unfortunate neighbors can't hear the attractions at 25 cents a number they balk at the idea, and will not support it even to the extent of a $2.00 season ticket. The Colt-Alber Co., fulfilled every promise, and at the Friday evening program, the latest treatise on the subject by the presence of Mr. Colt, head of the Colt-Alber Co., as was also Link Dick, both of whom gave brief talks in regard to chautauqua work. A more pleasant gentleman would be hard to find than Supt. Miller, who is the manager of the chautauqua, and much credit is due him and his staff, all of whom made warm friends here during their short sojourn in our little city.

The remains of Mrs. Lee Rock, mother of Mrs. Abram Trauner, died who is remembered by many of our residents, and who died at her home in Crestline Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 5, were brought to Plymouth Thursday afternoon, and buried by the side of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Abram Frys.

Mrs. Smith was in Marion Tuesday visiting her husband, the Rev. G. C. Smith, who for several weeks past has been taking treatment at the Richland County, Ohio, and after Sept. 1st, 1916. All such persons will be arrested and fined if they come within the limits of the village.

Beginning tonight (Friday) the first instalment of Peg O' the Ring, the great serial movie, will have the first showing at the Deisler Theatre, an event we'd never witnessed until coming to Crestline. In addition, it is said to be one of the finest film productions ever shown, costing an immense fortune to produce it. You'll want to see it. So do not miss the first instalment.

Mrs. Louise S. Culp, who was called here from Mt. Clemens, Mich., by the death of A. Minard, who had been occupying her residence at 104 West Main street for five years, will not return to Mt. Clemens, but will take possession of her home here for the present. Mrs. Culp, who is an sufferer from rheumatism, did not receive the hoped-for benefit from the treatment she received at Mt. Clemens, and will remain in Newark until late in the fall, when she expects to join her son, Henry Culp, who is located at San Antonio, Tex.—Norwalk Reflector.

Laura Jeanne Libbey's TALKS ON HEART TOPICS

CLOTHING FOR THE YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL

GETTING READY FOR COMPANY.

"To a night to engage me, if anything can be done upon the perishing pleasure of man! Show us as we are, our enjoyments, I see a still shorter life, and die sooner than we."

If there's anyone who needs to take the lesson of preparedness to heart,

It's the girl who is all anxiety and trouble before hand when company is coming. This is the girl who must do her share of the housework; who is poor, but strives her best to make a good showing. She would rather go out and have a good time in the afternoon instead of housecleaning. Still, she waits, other girls do not stop, or going to the movies won't get work done, but she does not give a thought to that until she receives a note from a nice young man, stating that he would be pleased to call on her at her house, and she presents himself punctually at her home uninvited. In the interim, he has word from her to cause him to change his plans.

From that hour on such scurrying is there in that household. Young men are keen-sighted; it would never do to have the parents at the door, or on the picture frame. There's the worn carpet to take up and turn about, the seat of the old sofa to jack up when it sags, a hole in the curtains to darn, the chairs to dust and the lamp wick to be trimmed and put in shape to be lighted. Then there's the clothes to wash and iron. The last time she wore it was at a molasses candy pull. The front breadth bore evidence to that in a long stain, to say nothing of a huge rent at the bottom of the skirt. She had waited hours in a laundry room, causing quite a stir among the other girls, before she could get out of her clothes in order to dress again. Mother was too busy to even lend a hand. All the tasks rested on the shoulders of the girl, who was so unprepared. Her mother made no attempt to conceal her hurry, reminding the girl that she had urged her to come to the party, and the doors, and on the picture frame.

TELL A SECRET TO A WOMAN.

Let no one fondly dream again that how and all her shadowing trials will not decay.

Fleeting as were the dreams of old, Fleeting like the tale that's told, They pass away.

On the eve of his marriage to a friend you know, a man has faced the problem whether or not he was in duty-bound to lay bare to her all the incidents of his past life, good, bad or indifferent, his boyish fancies, the follies of youth and the temptations of manhood that emanated him. To tell or not to tell—there was the rub.

I am dumbfounded over the vast number of letters from brethered men asking frankly the question: "Should a man who has been a wild, devil-may-care sort of fellow, who has turned over a new leaf when he married, tell his past to reveal it to his fiancee?"

I answer quite as frankly: It all depends upon the seriousness of the dikes which have been cut up. The seriousness of an error depends entirely upon its consequences.

If a man loves his wife, let her trust him, one or the other, through the course of time growing weary of the bond that in the beginning was so alluring, the parting of the ways closed the incident as far as the outside world is concerned. (What his companion has to do with it is quite another story, which I am not touching.)

It is useless to unfold to a fair young girl a picture of the seamy side of life of which she knows nothing. It would not disturb the tranquility of her person more than the two halves of the man and maid are involved in the ruthless breaking of his vows of constancy, the story of that past which an entirely different significance.

I am not entering upon a man's right to take upon himself new master and maid, the justice or injustice of it. I am merely raising the query, "Should, or should he not tell his fiancee in the latter case?"

The lesson of the trials of being unprepared comes home to the girl, who would have never learned it so completely under any other circumstances. Every home should be in such ample order that company could drop in unexpectedly at any time without creating discomfort, confusion, fuss or flurry.

The dress required remaining almost, between packing and ripping out, twisting and turning, sewing, so far into the night she lost her beauty sleep and her good turn to a bargain.

To be sure the young man arrived promptly, but he was puzzled beyond words to what could possibly have happened to an unusually pretty girl into a positive fright in two days' time. She was too tired to speak, but her eyes were glowing with excitement and wonder, or comprehendable. Therefore, the young man cut his call as short as possible. He had found that hour so irksome, he shirked calling again.

YOUNG GIRLS OF TENEMENTS.

Speak gently, kindly, to the poor. Let no harsh term be heard. They have enough they must endure without an unkind word.

There never were true words than "One half of the world does not know how the other half lives."

Do the women of wealth luxuriating in millionaire homes, hotels given a thought to the young girls of the tenements in the hot cities they live in? Let them behind them? If they but knew of the surroundings amid which thousands of such girls exist they would wonder not why so many are wrong, but how they manage to keep to the straight and narrow traversed by the good and pure among such lamentable surroundings which fairly bristle with temptation.

In the daytime at their toll these young girls are safe from harm. It is when night falls that graveills men them. When the thermometer is hovering close to the hundred mark, breaking in the front rooms, where the whole family is crowded because almost unbearable. There is but one hope for relief and that is the roof.

They find almost every inch of room pre-empted. The young songbirds who board in the basement allow the girls who live in the top floor part of the space they have secured. There is little or no cessation of the terrible heat. The months of the last year have been particularly hot. Moquitoes and other insects are attracted to their torment. They cry out that their thirst must be quenched. Water is not forthcoming, but the drink that numbs the brain and makes them forget their misery in stupor. It is forced upon the young girls and they are often sickened by the sun rising upon many a hapless girl who will live to rue those hours during all her life.

Amid such surroundings and influences the summer nights are spent, and there is no one to raise the mighty cry. "What can be done to save the young girls of the tenements from wise associations?"

The beautiful summertime is crowded with joys for the daughters who receive tender, watchful care, but full of dimmed and plighted eyes, the innocent girls of the poor who are in need of protection and a chance to go right. If the parks of the great cities were open to girl tollers, and to them only, during the torrid nights of the summer, the problem would be partially solved. Better the safety from harm ensured. Better the safety from the sins close to the bosom of kind Mother Earth than the sunbaked roof of the tenement, where each and every family has equal rights, but where the strong dominate and the proper respect for girlish innocence may not always be given.

Women off summering who have left closed-up homes and spacious grounds well fended in behind them could do their share of bettering the condition of the young girls of the tenements by a few of them to camp at night on the grounds. An ounce of prevention in averting evil is worth a pound of cure.
