Over the Fence and Out.

At the Gibson county fair at Princeton there are places where the fences were guarded to keep boys and others from swarming over and in, says the Indianapolis News. This year one of the amateur policemen appointed for a long strip of fence sat down in the shade and fell asleep. Ben Murphy, president of the association, chanced to see a long, gangling youth climb the fence there. "You'll have to pay or get out," he told the youth. "Get no money; guess I'll get out," was the response. "No, on second thought," said Murphy, "I'll let you stay in on condition. You go wake that policeman and tell him you climbed in over the fence."

Philadelphians may open municipal food markets.

"What?" exclaimed that individual. "Then right out to the gate." He dragged the youth toward a gate, but the youngster yelled lustily to Mr. Murphy and he came up. "I'm putting this hoodlum out," explained the policeman, "he climbed the fence."

"When I get through with the judge, I shall want to go out to the dam. Will you wait and take me?"

"Sure, I'll go with you," said Smith with prompt acquiescence. And then: "Is it as bad as you thought it was going to be, John?"

"It's about as bad as it can be," was the sober reply, and with that Smith went in to wait for his interview with the Timanony's best-beloved jurist.

It was one of David Kinzie's small appetites to make a man sit idly thus on one pretent another; it rarely failed to put the inquirer at a disadvantage, and on the present occasion it worked like a charm. "Balwin is over here," he said, "and he had the end of it into a pulp before Kinzie swung around in his chair and lashed out at the culprit."

"You and I have always been pretty good friends, Dexter," he began, "and I have called you down here this time to give you a little of my own still your friend. Where is your man Smith?"

Baldwin shook his head. "I don't know," he answered. "I haven't seen him since last evening."

"Has he run away, then?"

The Missouri colonel squared himself deeply in his upholstered chair, which was the one Kinzie had placed for him. "What are you driving at, Dave?" he demanded.

"Well, think you and I first," said the banker curiously. "Do you know that you and your crowd have come to the bottom of the bag on that dam proposition?"

"No, I don't."

"Well, you have. You've got just one more day to live."

The Missouri fellow back upon his native phrase.

"I reckon you'll have to show me, Dave," asserted Baldwin stolidly. "What report if they see so much as a rabbit jump up?"

"Good. I'm going to let Starbuck drive me around the lake limits to see it personally that your pickets are on the job. But first, I'd like to use your phone for a minute or two," and with that Smith shut himself out in the small office across the hall. "I need Martin, the bookkeeper, at the town headquarters."

"The result of the brief talk with Martin seemed satisfactory. It was concluded, Smith rang off and asked for the Hophra House. Being given the hotel exchange, he called the number of the Hophra House and the answer came promptly in her full, throaty voice:

"Yes, Mr. Kinzie, Montague?"

"Yes, I'm out at the dam. Nothing has been telegraphed. I mean, you understand?"

"Perfectly. But something is going to be done, Mr. K. has had Colonel B. with him inside the bank. I saw the colonel go in while I was at breakfast. When are you coming back to town?"

"Not for some time; I have a drive make that will keep me out until afternoon."

"Very well; you'd better stay away as long as you can, and then you'd better communicate with me before you show yourself much in public. I'll have Jibbey looking out for you."

"Dave," he said, rising to stand over the square-built man in the swivel chair, "it's like pulling a sound tooth to have to tell you the plain truth. You've got a mighty bad case of money-pain. The profit account has grown so big with you that you can't see over the top of it. You've hoisted back and forth between Stanton's outfit and ours until you can't tell the difference between your old friends and a bunch of low-down, conscienceless land-pirates. You pull your gun and go to shooting whenever you get ready. We'll stay with you and try to hold up your end—and John's. And you mark my words, Dave; you're the man that's going to get left in this deal; the straddler always gets left."

CHAPTER XXII.

Witnesses.

Driven by Starbuck in the brand-new car, Smith reached the dam at half-past ten and was in time to see the swarming carpenter begin the placing of forms for the pouring of the final section of the great wall. Though the high water was lapping at the foot timbers of the forming, and the weather reports were still portentous, Williams was in fine fettle. There had been no further interferences on the part of the railroad people, every man on the job was spurting for the finish, and the successful end was now fairly in sight.

"Well, you have. You've got just one more day to live."

The Missouri fellow back upon his native phrase.

and he said that perhaps you would— that perhaps you might want to— Her rich voice was at its frailest, and the hesitation was of exactly the proper kind.

"—yes, Miss Richlander— a disagreeable duty, you know. I wanted to ask about this young man, Smith. We don't know him very well here in Brewster, and as he has considerable business dealings with the bank, we— that is, I thought your father might be able to tell us something about his standing in his home town."

"And my father did tell you?"

"Well—yes; he—er—he says Smith is a— a grand rascal; a fugitive from justice; and we thought— David Kinzie, well hardened in all the processes of dealing with men, was making difficult weather of it with this all-too-beautiful young woman.

Miss Richlander's laugh was well restrained. She seemed to be struggling earnestly to make it appear so.

"You business gentlemen are so funny!" she commented. "You know, of course, Mr. Kinzie, that this Mr. Smith and I are— friends; you've probably seen us together enough to be sure of that. Hasn't it occurred to you that however well I might know the Mr. Smith my father has written you about, I should hardly care to be in public with him?"

"Then there are two of them?" Kinzie demanded.

"The young woman was laughing again. "Would that be so very wonderful—with so many Smiths in the world?"

"But—er—the middle name, Miss Richlander: that isn't so infernally— a very common, I'm sure."

"It is rather remarkable, isn't it? But there are good many Montagues in our part of the world, too. The man my father wrote you about always signed himself 'Montague,' as if he were a little ashamed of the 'John.'"

"Then this Brewster Smith isn't the one who is wanted in Lawrenceville for embezzlement and attempted murder?"

"Excuse me," said the beauty, with another very palpable attempt at another her amusement, "you could only know this other Smith, J. Montague, as I remember him, was a typical—"

"He says Smith is a Grand Rascal!"

"Call society man—the kind of man who wears dress clothes even when he does not go to the office, and who would let his beard grow overnight for a king's ransom. But wait a moment. There is a young gentleman here who came last evening direct from Lawrenceville. Let me send for him."

She rose and pressed the bell push, and when the door came back, he was sent to the lobby to page Jibbey. During the absence of Jibbey, she skillfully made to talk about other things. Jibbey was easily found, as it appeared, and he came at once. Miss Richlander did the honors promptly.

"Mr. Kinzie, this is Mr. Tucker Jibbey, the son of one of our Lawrenceville bankers. Tucker—Mr. Kinzie; the president of the Brewster City National. Then, before Kinzie could be seen: "Tucker, I've sent for you in self-defense. You know both Mr. John Stanton and the Brewster City National. J. Montague Smith, sometime of Lawrenceville, and now of goodness only knows where. Mr. Kinzie is trying to tell you out that they are one and the same."

Jibbey laughed broadly. He stood in no awe of banks, bankers, or agitators. "I'll tell you, when I see him, again, and take a chance on being able to run faster than he can," he chuckled.

"Tippie good luck to you," said Kinzie, glancing at his watch and rising.

"Then you know both men and are in—"

"Like a book. There's no more mistle like black and white. Our men here is from Cincinnati; isn't that where you met him, Verda? I recollect you didn't like him at first, be-

Their makers are afraid to prove their claims by telling what their medicines contain. The only way to be honest with the people is to let them know what they are paying for. Here is the Vinol formula. When the doctor knows what a medicine contains, it ceases to be a "patent" medicine. Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol, as named above, will enrich the blood and banish anemia and create strength. When the blood is pure and rich and red, the body is strong and robust. You can prove this at our expense because your money will be returned if Vinol does not improve your health.

 Rev. Dr. John Montgomery, of Piqua, Ohio, son-in-law of Mrs. E. Bevier, of West Broadway, this city, was seriously injured in an automobile accident in his garage on Saturday afternoon last. He was making the car out of the garage and it is supposed the electric starter failed to work, when he attempted to crank the machine without throwing it out of gear, with the result that it started and caught him between the bumper and wall of the garage, breaking his bones in both of his legs above the knees. The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. Montgomery in Plymouth are pained to hear of the accident and hope for him a speedy recovery. Dr. Montgomery and the members of his church, the First Presbyterian, were engaged last week in celebrating the centennial of the congregation, and Sunday was to have been the closing day.

The Atties fair drew large crowds from Plymouth and vicinity this week.
 The Liberty Loan Primer.
 Many thousands of America's loyal, well-meaning and worthy citizens do not just quite understand the reason for these liberty loans. All their lives they have regarded the United States as the richest, the most prosperous and greatest nation on earth. To them it has been a land of peace and plenty, "the home of the free and land of the brave." In a word, "God's country."
 And now that war has come eight or ten thousand miles away, it seems inconceivable that it should be necessary for a nation of such boundless wealth and such varied and thriving industries and commercial interests, to be asking its citizenry without resort to wealth or station to contribute to the support of the armies it must send far afield.
 America, like its people has been prodigate of its riches. Probably the least sad of the past centuries, because of national government, the better. You are largely responsible, for you have seen the acts of your representatives at Washington without protest.
 But the fact is that of the trifle more than a billion dollars of revenues annually, nothing has been saved. No surplus has accumulated in the treasury. And the rainy day has come for the nation as it comes for its individuals.
 Now we need $20,000,000,000 for this first year of war. It will go for loans to our allies; for the equipping of the navy and the arming of our forces; for munitions of war and big and little guns; for army and navy pay; for the purchase and forwarding of the tremendous food supplies necessary for the army support, and for army insurance to support stricken families.
 Meantime our normal sources of revenue are interrupted and our expense of government increased. And we need about $12,500,000,000 more ready cash this year than last.
 And the size of your Liberty Bond purchase will measure your real worth to your country as a citizen.

J. G. O'Heron transacted business in Tiffin Tuesday.
 Alvin Slinger shipped several carloads of stock to the eastern markets from Plymouth last week.
 Frank Davis and family have moved from the Akers property to the Hankamer house on Broadway.
 After playing awhile with a black and white kitten, little Miss Miriam Root asked her father, "Is this a Hobstein kitty?"
 James Moore, who lives west of town, is to be the successor of Mr. Jas. Atyeo in the stock buying business this vicinity.
 D. W. Ellis is improving the pleasant days this week in laying a new sidewalk in front of his handsome bungalow on West Broadway.

Save Your Cabbage, Tomatoes, and all Vegetables.
 If you cannot sell your cabbage as soon as it is ready to cut, store it in shallow boxes, on shelves or on old boards in your cellar or store room. Keep it dry and cool and so that the air can circulate between the heads. If you put it in a store room, you can keep the room cool by closing the doors during the warmer part of the day and then opening them at night. In the northern part of the state it is not too soon to pit cabbage. For information as to the best way to pit it, write to the Welfare and Defense League, Department of Industrial Welfare, State House, Columbus, O.
 You can keep tomatoes until late in the winter by wrapping the perfect green ones separately in paper and storing them in small boxes or baskets in a cool dry place. Be sure to leave a short stem on each one. They will ripen in a day or two if placed in the sunlight.

SAUTE! ROOKIES AT CAMP ARE TOLD

LACK OF COURTESY AMONG CAMP SHERMAN'S OFFICERS IS AT AN END.

"COM." OFFICERS WEAR BANDS

So That Selectives Won't Have Any Excuses—Jenny Tells Commanders That Discipline is Primary Requirement of a Successful Army.

Western Newspaper Union News Service. Camp Sherman, Chillicothe—Discipline is the biggest word in the dictionary of Camp Sherman.

At a meeting of all commissioned officers of the command, Major General E. F. Glenn impressed upon subordinate officers that the same degree of respect they show to their superiors should be shown to the men which they may expect from men in their commands.

In three sentences General Glenn drove home the idea of discipline as the primary requisite of a successful army. He deplored the lack of courtesy between commissioned men, existing on the ground, and distinguished the lack of courtesy shown by drafted men for their commanders.

"When you give a command see that it is obeyed if you have any officer who is not a commissioned officer in your company to enforce it," General Glenn told his juniors. "Insist upon the military salute." He held out lack of courtesy existing on the Mexican border last year when "Get Villa" was the slogan of the army.

Since the establishment of Camp Sherman there has been a noticeable absence of courtesy between officers in some branches of the service. This has been remarked again and again by visiting officers from the regular army.

As a result rookies coming here from the fields and offices of Ohio have been more or less lax in respect for their superiors.

But this has changed. Every officer in the camp was instructed to wear a white hat-band one inch high, in order that selectives might distinguish them from noncommissioned men and others not entitled to the courtesy of a military salute. Each commander instructed his men on the etiquette of saluting.

As a result officers salute each other when they meet in the street, regimental headquarters, mess halls, etc. Enlisted men stand at attention and raise the right hand in salute when an officer comes near. Correspondents who wear regular uniforms, with the decorations and hat cords, pass groups of enlisted men unheeded. All of which is well.

The boy from Indianapolis, if there is one here, is just as quick and anxious to go out of his way to get in a salute to salute an officer as is the lad from Newark, Ohio. The sergeant rank and file heard it was the right thing to do they lost no time brushing up on salutations.

Secretary's Misfortune.

Columbus—Bad luck has followed the Secretary of State's office. Assistant Secretary Thomas M. Glavin was compelled to take Mrs. Gregory, his bride of two weeks, to Christ Hospital, director in which she underwent an operation for appendicitis. The operation of State W. D. Fulton, who just arisen from a sick bed, also had a misfortune, but escaped with but a few scratches when his auto was struck by a street car.

Rebekah Lodges Elect Officers.

Port Clinton—The annual convention of the Seventh District Rebekah Lodges of Northwestern Ohio in session here, elected the following officers: Mildred Johnson, president, and for secretary, J. P. Freeman. Large delegations from Oak Harbor, Fremont, Helena, Clyde, Belle, Geneva and Port Clinton were in attendance. The 1918 convention goes to Helena.

Operates Without Franchise.

Columbus—During the week before the Public Utilities Commission on a readiness-to-serve charge of $1, which the Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co. wished to challenge, the company, it developed that for 30 years the company has been operating without franchise. This fact is said to have been known to only a limited circle in Toledo.

Truck Men Cheating State.

Columbus—State Automobile Registrar W. A. McCurdy has caught a number of automobile truck men cheating. Between Columbus and Chillicothe there are 150 State motor trucks, and it has been found many of them are running only with dealers' licenses instead of the regular tags.

Highway Officials Panned.

Columbus—As the result of a special examination conducted by E. H. Murray, Engineer in Charge, Bureau of Accounting, and C. P. Godfrey, examiner, large findings were reported against George B. Ferrine, Highway Superintendent of the Hartford township, Trumbull county, $2,665.29. The finding is composed of charges for use of township property for highway contracts and also the use of the material. The officials, including the township trustees, are criticized severely.

SAVE SMALL ITEMS!

Columbus—The State War Board says: Cut the expense corners. Save the small items.

Enough pennies make a dollar. Many farmers' wives have small quantities of good home-prepared products for which they have no market.

City folks many times search the market for just such things, and can't find them. The farmer, therefore, if you live in the city and don't want to deal with strangers get in touch with rural friends or relatives that you remember only at vacation time.

If a farmer, write to city friends or acquaintances and solicit their trade.

For information in regard to containers, methods of packing, rates of postage, etc., write C. O. Hawbaker, care Ohio Defense Council, Statehouse, Columbus, Ohio.

TONNAGE IN OHIO IS ASKED

Food Administration Asks to Stimulate Business and Not to Injure It, Crotton Declares.

Columbus—The Ohio Defense Council, through the State Coal Clearing House, have sent this telegram to the mayors of more than 80 Ohio cities and towns.

"What coal tonnage is now in the yards of your city, and what additional tonnage will be necessary for winter-hold, hospitals and schools this winter?"

It is the intention of Governor Cox and the State Defense Council to have all information and data available on the subject promptly submitted to the United States Fuel Administration, which is expected to appoint a fuel administrator for Ohio shortly.

The tonnage capacity of mines throughout the state is known. The fuel administrator, it has been announced, will be in cooperation of the Government Priority Board, the National Car Service Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and other agencies at Washington in obtaining prompt shipment of coal to communities where needs are most serious.

Meetings will be held in the near future with company men, who are in foodstuffs, jobbers, wholesale men, retailers and representatives of the general public. This explanation was given by Fred C. Crotton, State Food Administrator.

"It is the plan of the Federal Administration of Foods, which is in direct charge of Herbert C. Hoover, to stimulate business, not to injure it," Mr. Crotton said.

Chance For Road Contracts.

Columbus—Eight miles of the Toledo-Napoleon highway contract are to be offered in a highway letting of October 12. This letting will cover trucks aggregating more than a million dollars. In Darke county 2.63 miles of the Dayton-Greenville road will be offered. In Clermont county 2.04 miles of the Cincinnati-Adelphi road will be offered. Many of the roads are in Northern and Eastern Ohio.

Are You Eating To Win the War?

This Newspaper recommends Today's Housewife to every patriotic woman who wishes to help win the great war

Today's Housewife is especially needed by every homemaker in the present war-crisis, because the seven Courses in Domestic Science now running in the magazine help housewives to better select, prepare and conserve food supplies, to cut down waste, and at the same time to add to the health and welfare of the entire family.

Today's Housewife is the only magazine that maintains a model home where cookery, new household devices, cleaning methods, etc., are put to practical tests, before their appearance in the pages of the magazine.

The monthly lesson on "Cookery, Feeds and Nutrition" under the direction of Caroline Hunt of the Department of Agriculture, is always worth the price of a ten-year subscription not only to the woman who follows each lesson but to the government of the United States is helping to win the terrific war with the Central Empires of Europe.

Favorite Magazine of Home-loving Women

REMEMBER, better home-making is the ideal back of TODAY'S HOUSEWIFE. Its means for enhancing its quality planned for the homemaker in its largest number with the scientific and practical methods of the day. Its home-making is the best of its kind. Its home-making is the best of its kind. Its home-making is the best of its kind.

While Today's Housewife stands in a class by itself in its practical value to homemakers, it is also noteworthy for its clear, helpful, and instructive articles, its beautiful illustrations and covers by leading artists. Over one million women receive their copy of TODAY'S HOUSEWIFE every week. The price of 10 cents per copy.
