Narrow Escape As Car Strikes Buggy

SHELBY, O., NOV. 4.—While driving into Tiro with horse and buggy, Edgar C. Stephan, wife and two babies, just a few rods south of the residence of J. C. Cahill on Tiro-Galion road came nearly being seriously and possibly fatally injured when Ernest Freese driving a large touring car attempted to pass them. Freese, in passing them, attempted to get his car back on the pike too soon, the macadam at that point in the road being wide enough for only one vehicle.

When attempting to get back on the macadam, he struck the right front wheel of the Stephan rig with great force. It is said Stephan was driving 30 miles per hour. Spokes, buggy body, seats, cushions and other material of the rig were scattered for rods over the highway. Freese did not stop his car to ascertain whether he had killed or maimed the occupants of the rig, but proceeded on to Tiro. The Stephens crawled out from under the wreckage of their rig. They had gone through the collision suffering only minor scratches. The babies had not received a scratch. Bennet Winemiller, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Winemiller happened along in a Ford touring car and took the Stephan family into Tiro to the home of Mrs. Stephan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dickson. Winemiller and the Stephens stated that the Stephan rig carried a light on both front and rear as law provides. They state that the

Twentieth Century At Home of Miss Trauger

The Twentieth Century Circle was welcomed on the evening of November the eighth at the home of Miss Jessie Trauger. The subject chosen for the evening by the program committee was "Home Economics." As Mrs. Stacy Brown explained it, in our grandmothers' days this meant merely saving pennies, while in our time it includes more, the saving of pennies, time and nerves.

The following interesting program was given:
"Have you a Restful Home?"—Mrs. Brown.
"How Uncle Sam Coins the Money We Spend?"—Mrs. Seasholtz.
"Driving Poison from the Nation's Food?"—Mrs. Southard.
Twentieth Century homes will no doubt find many treats on their tables this week, for copious notes were taken at Roll Call, the subject for response being, "Your favorite recipe."

How to Play BRIDGE

A new series of lessons by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1924 by Healy, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 2

In a preceding article, reference was made to a player in Chicago holding thirteen of a suit and the statement was made that such a hand would be held only once in about one hundred and fifty billion hands. The law of averages, however, seems to have slipped somewhere in another such thirteen diamonds, this time—was held in Chicago, July 19, 1925, and is substantiated by affidavits. Why the law of averages seems to slip only in Chicago is still a mystery, but slip it does, means that the rest of us will have to keep on holding stupid hands for many years before another player gets even a chance of holding thirteen of a suit again. The incident is not only noteworthy because of the unique holding but also because of the fact that the holder of the thirteen diamonds did not win the final declaration. Here are the hands of all four players

Hearts—A, 10, 8, 7, 6
Clubs—A, Q, 7, 4, 3
Diamonds—none
Spades—10, 4

Hearts—K, 9, 5, 4, 2

The dealer, Mr. John Donahoe, bid one diamond, A bid one heart, Y passed and B bid one spade. From then on B and Z bid up the hand until Z bid seven diamonds and B overbid with seven spades, even though his partner, A, had doubled both the six and seven diamond bid. Z opened the king of diamonds and if B had trumped in A's hand with the ten of spades, discarding the ten of hearts from his own hand, he could have made a grand slam! He was so excited, however, over the bidding, that he discarded a heart from A's hand and trumped in his own hand. As a result he lost his contract by one trick. It really is a most unusual hand and one for all auction players to remember. It is authenticated by affidavit so that there is no doubt as to its actual occurrence. Another interesting point in connection with this hand is or not Mr. Donahoe's bid of one diamond was the correct bid. It was either a case of one diamond or seven diamonds. If he had bid seven diamonds, A would undoubtedly have doubled and it is very questionable whether B would have bid the seven spades. If you want to start an argument, ask your friends how they would have bid the hand. If it is a new experience, test the writer is inclined to a bid of one diamond. It conceals the strength and if forced to a very high bid is more apt to force a double. A bid of seven with such a hand gives too much information. It indicates to the opponents that the bidder has an invincible hand and practically advises: "Don't double for I can make my bid or if you want to save game, overbid and take a penalty." Think it over and discuss it with your friends.

No score, first game, Z dealt and bid one spade. A passed, Y bid one no-trump, B passed and Z bid no spades and A opened the ace of hearts. He then played the queen of spades. How can Z so play the hand that he can win the balance of the tricks against any defense? Z should win the trick with the king of spades and lead the queen of diamonds, winning the trick in Y's hand with the king. He should then lead the ten of hearts from Y's hand and trump with the queen of spades in his own hand. He should lead the ace and eight of spades. If he does, Z can set up Y's heart suit. A is forced, therefore, to discard either a diamond or a club. It makes no difference which he does for Y must discard the same suit that A discards. Y must discard the ace and eight of spades. A discards the queen of clubs and trick six. Y should discard the eight of clubs and B follow suit. Z should now lead the five of clubs, the suit A discarded, winning the trick in Y's hand with the king of clubs. Y should now lead the ace of clubs and follow with the queen of hearts. B should discard the nine of diamonds and Z should trump with the five of spades. Z should now lead the six of spades. A cannot discard a heart for if he does, Y will discard a diamond and his heart is good. A must, therefore, discard the four of diamonds. Y should discard a heart and B is now up against the discard. If he discards the jack of diamonds, both of Y's diamonds are good. If he discards the jack of clubs, Z's seven of clubs is good. In either event, therefore, Y-Z must win the balance of the tricks. As an interesting variation, have A discard the ten of diamonds at trick six instead of the queen of clubs. It is a clever little problem and should be carefully analyzed.

Too Much "Acid?"

Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints, a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

The World in Panama

The 20-mile journey down Southampton harbor is interesting. The shores are lined with beautiful summer homes and watering places. Ships from every country in the world ride at anchor close to the channel. It is the world in Panama. Tugging at her anchor, as she rises and falls to the gentle tide, is an American Shipping Board vessel from which floats the stars and stripes. American bands instinctively reach up and touch hats in salute. Small harbor boats and excursion steamers blow blasts of welcome. Great crowds line the docks as the big liner is warped into her berth by the snorting, puffing little tugs. The customs officials come on board. Passports and landing cards are examined and as the passengers file down the gang-plank the noisy little boat train engine, as if impatient at the tedium of disembarking, began to blow its shrill little whistle which sounds for all the world like the whistle on a portable saw-mill outfit. A customs official makes a hasty examination of my baggage, chalk-marks on it a queer design and waves me toward the stein. It is out of the rush and feel back. My overcoat is on my arm and as I pass out of the gate a uniformed official stops me and in cockney English, which is almost as unintelligible as Arabic, asks me if I have any tobacco or whiskey in my overcoat pockets. The question is so ludicrous which sounds on my ears like the man stares at me in astonishment. "Whiskey?" I ask in a tone full of amazement. "Why should a man coming from America want to smuggle whiskey into England?" He laughs a good-natured laugh, says something in reply and waves me on. It is one of the many useless age-old customs to which the English cling with dogged persistence. I am comfortably seated in a compartment with four congenial fellows whom I met on the boat and in a few minutes our little toy-like train is whirling toward London.

Tour Abroad

utes the ship, now resembling a deserted banquet hall, takes up the last leg of its journey across the Channel to Southampton. The journey across is without incident. It is only five hours and the Southampton passengers busy themselves packing baggage and getting passports and landing cards ready for the customs officials at the English port. It is late evening when our ship reaches the mouth of the harbor. Americans on board are gathered at the starboard rail gazing in silence at the golden sun as it dips beneath the horizon. Melancholy is written upon many faces and thoughts are upon home

L. O. Simmons Sells Monroeville Paper

After a continuous term of over 40 years as editor and proprietor of the Monroeville Spectator, Mr. L. O. Simmons finds it necessary, on account of bad eyesight, to relinquish same.
 In all this time Mr. Simmons has never lost sight of one ideal and motto and that was boosting his home town.
 He has disposed of the office and subscription list to a Mr. A. J. Xdy-clott, of Miami, Fla., a man who is thoroughly conversant with the news paper business.

BOOST FOR ADVERTISING
Ice cream manufacturers report that as a result of advertising, the consumption of ice cream has doubled since 1910. The manufacturers in their advertisements have pointed out the food value of their product, proving that its high protein, mineral and butter fat contents are as necessary to the human body as its cooling flavors are appealing to the palate. They have set an example which manufacturers of other commodities may follow with profit.

SMALL LOANS DON'T PAY
Bankers and Industrial Lenders have found out that there is no profit in small loans. Many banks now make a minimum charge of $1, no matter if the interest amounts to less. Industrial Lenders say that, after making an investigation, which is necessary in every loan, the interest on a $50 loan does not pay the expense. Industrial Lenders loan up to $500. Listing of credits as security. They operate in Ohio under the Lloyd act.

LAWNS AND DRIVES
According to real estate men, a pretty lawn and a neat drive make an ordinary home as attractive and add many dollars to the value of the property. The kind of grass to use may depend to a large extent on the nature of the soil. Crushed stone, however, never fails to make an attractive driveway, real estate men say. There is nothing about it to crack or crumble. In many of the most fashionable suburbs, crushed stone drives, which always look fresh and clean, are used exclusively.

DRUGGISTS WILL VOTE
Ohio druggists are going to vote on a location for the proposed American Pharmaceutical Headquarters. The building will house the offices of the various pharmaceutical organizations and also a laboratory. Three Ohio cities have been proposed, Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland. Others mentioned are Richmond, Washington, D. C., Des Moines, Buffalo, St. Louis and Minneapolis.

IT'S A FAMILY AFFAIR

THE STONE QUARRY
In reading of this poem Do not be in a hurry Wish to say a few words Concerning the stone quarry.

In writing of this article We will take our own time To give you our thoughts And to make it all rhyme.

The election is now over We knew how it would go, When the people of Plymouth Had another chance to say "No."

To the board and Village council Are you fully satisfied In that you failed to unload That which was cut and dried?

We want good drinking water For all purposes it is nice Never can be had at quarry Regardless of its price.

The council is not all guilty, But by a majority it goes You can see their records Of their voting "Yes" and "No's."

We have asked by ballot From the quarry to be free It would be proper by the council To make the town an apology.

FAVORS IMPROVED AUTOMOBILE LEGISLATION

Legislation destined not only to protect the motorist of Ohio from indiscriminate increases in taxation is included in the legislative program of the Ohio State Automobile Association this year, but there is a concerted effort on the part of the motoring organization to increase traffic safety by eliminating many of the hazards which are known to have caused accidents in the past.

This is the announcement of President A. E. Mittenfjord and Secretary Chas. C. James of The Ohio State Automobile following approval of the report submitted by its Legislative Committee through Senator R. Gardner, Chairman, and a subsequent unanimous endorsement by close of two hundred presidents, secretaries and other officials of automobile clubs in all parts of the state who were assembled in Columbus recently.

Briefly, the association's program will be heard on the following recommendations, Secretary James declared:

1. That the association is opposed to any legislation which will in any way increase the burden of the motorist or which will cause the diversion of any portion of the tax funds which are collected from the motorists for road maintenance purposes.
2. The association will favor the introduction of legislation which will cause to be reduced the license tag fee to a sum not to exceed $1.00 on all passenger cars.
3. The association will support a driver's license law which will be fair and equitable not only to the motorists but to the public at large. In connection with this portion of the program the association plans to inaugurate a state-wide campaign for a drivers license law which will involve the payment of a fee no higher than is necessary to administer the duties in connection with these licenses. It will also attempt to have enacted a driver's license law which will be easy for the motorist to obtain but which will be difficult for the careless, reckless and drunken driver to keep.
4. The association's legislative program favors a legislation reenacting the half mill tax levy on the general tax duplicate, the funds to be used for the purpose of constructing highways.
5. The association will give serious consideration to legislation which will cause the motorist to be identified in case of personal injury of property damage caused by him. In connection with this portion of the program, Secretary James said, the state association will attempt to protect the general public against reckless and income'ent drivers but at the same time it will not tolerate any legislation which will cause any additional financial burden on the careful drivers.

James further declared, that the indemnity law, which the association will favor, will provide that no insurance will be necessary until a motorist is convicted by a court of record for causing any personal injury or property damage while driving.

6. The association will favor an amendment to the Blue Sky Law so that it will include in its provisions the grp organizations appealing to motorists under the supervision of the Ohio Securities Commission. This is a measure which will save the motorists Ohio thousands of dollars annually which grp organizations have succeeded in melting from them through the failure of the law to supervise that type of "fly by night" organizations.

7. It will favor the introduction of legislation which will amend the statute for the incorporation of corporations not for profit, so as to eliminate the liability of the trustees of such corporations.

8. It will promote legislation amending the present liquid measuring law so as to set out definitely the specifications of those devices in order that the motorist will be assured of full measure when he purchases those products. In connection with gasoline and oil, the association also will conduct an investigation for the purpose of determining the advisability of introducing legislation for fixing the standard of qualifications of gasoline and oil.

9. In connection with its war on the sale of inferior oil, which has been costing motorists hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, the association will advocate legislation which will require the posting of a placard on all containers which will designate the brand of oil being sold. The association will insist that when oil bearing no particular brand is sold that those placards will contain such information, in order that the motorist may be privileged to ascertain what kind and grade of oil he is purchasing.

10. The program also includes legislation designed to make the operator of "drive yourself cars" responsible for accidents arising from the negligent operation of those cars.

11. In order to abolish the incentive on the part of mayors and other municipal authorities to find all motorists guilty of violations of the motor vehicle code, because of the personal gain which is derived from such an incentive, the association went on record in favor of legislation which will stipulate that the costs, as well as fine, assessed owners in all municipalities will be paid into the treasury and will remain the property of a placard on oil containers which will designate the brand of oil being sold. The association will insist that when oil bearing no particular brand is sold that those placards will contain such information, in order that the motorist may be privileged to ascertain what kind and grade of oil he is purchasing.

The association also went on record in favor of the regulation of open air parking spaces. This recommendation is based on the fact that at the present time owners and operators of parking stations are not responsible for damage or theft of cars left in their care. There is no reason, Mr. James points out, why the owners and operators of parking stations, who are paid certain fees by motorists should not be responsible for the property left in their care. In the past, huge losses have been suffered by the motorist public because of this lack of regulation.

The program also includes that the restriction of county commissioners as to the width of the construction of county highways and bridges be removed; that private establishments which erect many colored lights near the highways for the purpose of advertising their business be restrained from erecting the type of lights which will cause confusion to the users of the highways. It also went on record in favor of legislation which will require all police officials to wear uniforms while engaged in the enforcement of traffic regulations. In an effort to eliminate dangerous traffic hazards, which are caused by long lines of heavy trucks and trailers, the association favors legislation which will require that those vehicles be operated in traffic at an interval of 100 yards or more apart while on the public highways outside of municipalities, except where a vehicle is about to pass or is in the act of passing another vehicle. In explanation of this latter recommendation, Secretary James explained, that at the present time large fleets of trucks traverse the highways, particularly at night, and operate so closely together that it is dangerous and almost impossible for passengers vehicles to pass them. The records of police departments, he said, show that many accidents have resulted from this condition.

This entire legislative program will be backed to the fullest extent by every one of the 81 automobile clubs in Ohio which are affiliated with The Ohio State Automobile Association and a concerted effort will be made by the clubs individually and as a whole in order that the Ohio Legislature, at its next session will enact such legislation as will be participated in by the entire public.

Many of the recommendations in this program are based on the results of exhaustive studies into motoring conditions which have been conducted by The Ohio State Automobile Association and by some of its individual clubs in the past year.

EDITORIAL

Time is the most valuable gift ever given us. It is the most precious, and offers the most possibilities. There is no distinction of class in the bestowal; one individual ranks as high as another. Proverbs have been handed down during the ages concerning time, so we know that the most ancient philosophers were acquainted with its value.

But although time is a gift, we are checked by it. It was given for the purpose of using; and all are rated by the way in which they put it to use. It is up to the individual to choose his method of getting the most out of time, and by that choice he decides his own character.

Every minute should be a minute of achievement. Even small things accomplished in a small space of time, are things to be proud of. After something is completed, a satisfaction comes in saying, "It is finished." One may use his time, to his own advantage or for the advantage of others; for personal gain, or for an selfish motives. However, it is acknowledged by the world, that the time spent in some ways is entirely lost.

What about the time lost loafing on the streets, students? How much of your time is spent in the evening, around billiard parlors, street corners, etc.?

Have you ever noticed the number of younger boys, that have followed your example, and who may be found on the streets between ten and eleven? When spare time is spent in such a manner, do you think any good can come from their character and yours?

Nothing respected or beneficial, can ever result from such waste of time. If you do not wish to correct this defect for your own good, think of someone besides yourself.

"A man's character is determined by the way he spends his spare time."

THE LOST CHORD

The new books for the Girls Glee Club have arrived, and while we were listening to a rehearsal last Monday, we heard a chord which we had never heard before, and now are sure that it is the one that was lost. It had a sweet and harmonious sound which impressed us with the fact that the girls are getting to be real song birds. The efforts of those who are sacrificing their preferences and are singing parts where they are in need of most, are especially appreciated.

The boys new books have also been received, and were given a tryout Tuesday afternoon.

Glee Club Makes First Appearance Sunday Eve.

Time was taken up last week by hearing with the Glee Clubs, of the two numbers which the combined forces of the two organizations sang at the Peace Declaration Contest, Sunday evening. Considering the fact that this was their first attempt at anything in the line of mixed choruses, we think they did exceedingly well. The only suggestion we have to offer is that everyone (including the accompanist) watch the director more closely. This is necessary for the production of any finished performance. Let your motto be "Follow the Leader."

However, if as many compliments are received in the future, we will be assured for Sunday night, our future is assured.

Architecture in Leaves

From the architecture constructed in the leaves on the school lawn, by some of our Sophomores, we should judge they have returned to their childhood days or else show a marked talent.

Lecture Course Purchased, Tickets to On Sale Soon

A lecture course of three or four numbers has been purchased by the high school from the Sorenson Lyceum Bureau, and will be given during the winter. More information will be given in the next edition.

1. November 29 (Monday evening) - Musical number "Uncle Sam and His Family."
2. December 20 (Monday evening) - Footie Trio, Musical numbers.
3. January 18 (Tuesday evening) Brush, magician, considered one of the three most foremost with Lyceum Company.
This course is going to be a success and we're going to make it say.

Public Speaking Course Proves Most Interesting

To outsiders, at least, the class in Public Speaking, evokes the most interest. Students who are supposed to study in Room 7, while this class is being conducted, spend most of their time listening to the readings, speeches and recitations of the class members. Last week many clever impersonations and sketches were given. If any one cares to visit this class they will be welcome to do so from 1:45 to 2:30 any day in the week.

Information Wanted On "Lady of the Lake"

The Sophomore English Class have been having a heated argument concerning the age of the heroine, Ellen. One confining believes that she was but eighteen, while others are fairly sure that she was over twenty-five years old. If anyone can produce proof for either of these beliefs, any member of this class, or the instructor, Miss Garber, will be only too glad to receive it. We'd like to have the discussion on this question closed before the debates become too heated.

Advancement of Learning In Biology Class

Students of Biology class are no brighter, as a whole, than any other class but they are surely working hard and getting results. On Friday last, fourteen students took a quiz in Biology and Mr. Jenkins reported that 9 out of this class made grades of A and the other five, B. Since A means superior work and B, above average, this shows that P. H. S. is taking seriously the motto, "Studies First."

NOTICE
Does the editorial this week apply to you? It may be dry; you may consider it stale; and if your attention is thus you may certainly say, it does apply.

A SUGGESTION
Why not a contest between the Physical Education classes sometime in the future?

Emeline Fate Wins Local Declaration Contest

By unanimous decision of the three judges, Miss Emmeline Fate, Junior of P. H. S., won the bronze medal declaration contest Sunday evening. With the subject concerning world Peace, "The Indispensable First Step," by Judge Florence Allen, and her delivery she scored the highest in points.

The winner of this contest will be asked to participate in the silver medal contest. If Emeline proves herself worthy, she may achieve a four-year college course in the last state contest.

In the past, she has presented her talent by readings, etc., in the present by the declamation; and we wish her all the luck in her attempts in the future.

Girls Showing Advance Over Boys In Marching

The girls in physical education have at last learned to march. Mr. Jenkins says that if the boys could ever watch them march, they would certainly be ashamed of themselves. The boys hate to admit it, but it is a fact the girls can "out-march" them.

While engaging in an active game in physical education, Eunice Henry dislocated her elbow. She will be unable to write English literature themes for a few days.

The basketball girls find that it is hard to keep training rules but they are doing their best. To them candy and midnight lunches are things of the past.

Students

How much of your time at night is spent on the streets? Is this your example that you wish others to judge your character by? A certain percent of time can be devoted in such a way it is acknowledged; but how much higher than that percent do you go?

Basket Ball Practice Begins; Teams Organize

Basketball is once again the major sport at P. H. S. regular practice has begun with eleven boys forming the first squad. At present the first squad members are: Willard Caldwell (captain), James Rhine, John Root, Morley Stork, Ross Hills, Deryl Gramer, Kermil Myers, Wilson Day, Wayne Sommerlott, Deryl Stork, Raymond Hatch. strenuous workouts are putting the squad into fine condition and we are expecting big things from the team of '26-27.

Boys, although we hate to say it, the weaker set of P. H. S. are in advance in Physical Ed. What are you going to do about it?

SHORT STORY THE REAPPEARANCE

George Washington recalled his little cocked hat, put on his coat carefully over his freshly laundered wings, brushed a speck of dust from his coat and strode proudly up the Golden Street. Here and there he spoke a few words of his acquaintances, tipping his hat politely to each of them. His hands he clasped on his stomach and walked in a dignified manner. Soon his feet grew tired so he prudently spread his shabby wings—look his white—high-tailed with a golden ribbon, and buttered toward St. Peter's Palace, where the latter stood very near at the Golden Gate. St. Peter, who George and had told him to come along at the time the Golden Gates were closed for the night, George wondered for what reason he had been sent. St. Peter's palace loomed up so quickly that he nearly ran into the ladder that reached from the top of the Vatican to the moon. He cautiously stepped his right wing faster than the left and propelled himself toward the garden, the Golden Gate and St. Peter. They were good friends and so George took the liberty to plant a seed in which he might tease St. Peter. George circled around the gate and seated himself on the sign "No watch man on duty after 6 p.m. But St. Peter was a good fellow and he decided to reward his good friend. "Go into my waiting room for a few minutes." So George flew into the room and was waiting for St. Peter towards that St. Peter John George where he was talking to Angel Gabriel. The latter sat on the library table possibly waiting for St. Peter.

"Well, George," began St. Peter, stroking his flowing white beard and smoothing his long, pure shirt. "You've been such a good fellow that the King and Gabriel and I have decided to grant you one wish. It may be anything."

George's blue eyes opened wide. (Also his mouth.) Suddenly he closed his right wing faster than the left and said, "I wish I should consult Martha." He gazed questionably at St. Peter. He changed his position. "No, George," Washington, didn't you have enough of letting your life think for you when you were on earth? Angel Gabriel reached for his harp and played "The Flight is On." George clapped at him; then his eyes brightened. He clasped his hands together. "Oh, St. Peter! he was awaked. "I've a novel idea! I wish I could visit the good old earth again, as a mortal man."

"No sooner said, than done!" exclaimed St. Peter, and George found himself descending the Golden Stairs with the Man-in-the-Moon peering after him. St. Peter stood at the gates waving farewell with George's wings which he had removed. The angel shut turns on the stars, smiled down from his step-ladder, while the Cloud-Ripper stopped his work in amazement that the much loved George Washington was leaving his happy home, as a mortal man.

On the way to earth, George met many good old souls ascending the Stairs. "Have you been below?" he asked them all, shook their heads.

SHORT STORY

"Better go there first. Anyhow! the gates are closed now."
 The bottom of the stairs rested on Mr. Sinal, and while George stood surveying the landscape and breathing the deliciously fresh air he exhaled "Ah! Just as I left it! But a queer buzzing noise reached George's ear. It grew louder and louder almost becoming deafening and George wished he had brought vivian along. Then he saw an odd bird circling around in the air. It landed on a flat, rocky surface somewhat near him. George mused. "The Lord never made a bird like that! He stood spellbound. A figure alighted from this strange fowl and strode up to him. Are you Jonah? And is that whale?" questioned George thrusting his hands into his pockets. The aviator regarded George's strange clothes with open humor and answered: "Now, my name's John Smith. And what whale do you mean? This is an air-plane!"

George disregarded the last statement of the man's and asked "Captain John Smith of the Plymouth colony? When did you come back to earth?"

"Now, I'm Captain J. Smith of the Plane Fleets. I just came to earth now. Didn't you see me?"

George, smiling George, "Where are you from?"

"To Washington. Do you want to go along?"

"Naturally George wanted to see where he once had ruled, and so upon the direction of the aviator, he climbed at home by coaxing through all the rooms. In the corridor he met Calvin Coolidge, where they stood looking at each other.

"I'm George Washington," announced the owner of the name extending his hand.

"So's your old man!" lunged back Coolidge and led him to a room where he proceeded to call the Hospital on the phone. George was astonished to see this strange man talk into such an absurd thing when no one else besides the two were in the room and Coolidge was not speaking to George.

"What are you doing?" Washington pressed his companion.

"Making reservations at the Hospital to save what mind you have, my poor creature!"

"Indeed," said Washington indignantly and left the amazed president. He was he was run down by an auto, street, where in the attempt to dodge one of those "dangerous looking" automobiles, he was knocked on the sates!

He wasn't hurt (as it is impossible to harm a spirit) but he allowed the people to do as they pleased with him (out of curiosity). At the Hospital they placed him on an operating table, gave him a whiff of ether and again, "George Washington's wings in" in the doctor's hands exclaimed in a hoarse voice, "Enough, St. Peter!" and he disappeared.

He was on St. Sinal, now ascending the Golden Stairs, two steps at a time; he was knocking on the sates! St. Peter, upon opening them, caught the figure in his arms and as he fast closed "Ah! Just as I left it! But a queer buzzing noise reached George's ear. It grew louder and louder almost becoming deafening and George wished he had brought vivian along. Then he saw an odd bird cir-
