

An Interesting Letter From Historic France

M. M. Sloan, a Music Student in France, Tells of a Trip to Paris and Other Scenic Points.

A very delightful letter was recently received by Rev. Chas. M. Sloan, of Morral, O., from his son, M. M. Sloan, who has been studying music in France this summer, and is reproduced through the courtesy of Mr. Sloan. Rev. Sloan was a former minister of the Baptist church at Auburn Center.

The letter in full follows:

"Conservatoire Americain, Fontainebleau, France, July 25, 1926.

"Dear Father and Mother:

"I went to Paris yesterday morning and at 10 A. M. went to St. Julien-le-Pauvre, a Greek Catholic church celebrating mass according to the Melkite rite. This is the church, the site of which, has been used for a church since the third century. Their liturgy is in Greek, but it is so near the Roman that they are acknowledged by the Pope. Their music is sung by priests in unison without any accompaniment of any sort and their chants date back to the first century. It is the Arabian and Egyptian branch and the melodies, if they can be called that, are almost wallowing, so wondrous and oriental. Not particularly moving, but curious. From there I journeyed to St. Serenin but there was no music so I left and strolled over to Notre Dame, but mass was just over.

"I went over to the other bank of the Seine and quite by accident got into St. Gervais, the church which was struck by the German's 'Big Bertha' when they bombarded Paris 70 miles away. There were seventy people killed when it was struck, but it has been repaired. The church was filled with worshippers. I think the French go to these churches to worship because it is almost impossible to worship in the large and famous churches on account of the tourists. It is very distressing to have someone walking around and talking all of the time. It seems queer to walk into a church where the people are sitting in the pews and walk up and down the side aisles to the side of the altar by the choir and stare at them and then saunter out again. It seems rude but everybody does it.

"Well, at St. Gervais, I heard the 'sweetest, blindest old organ' in the world. 'Big Bertha' had to come if it wouldn't have been a bad idea if it had hit that. It was awful. The organist was good and played Bach chorales continuously. These churches are so large that the priest and the altar boys make himself heard and the altar boys rings a hand bell when the people are to kneel and stand and etc. While the priest is reading the mass the organist plays just like a recital one number after the other to entertain the people.

"From there I decided to stop at La Madeleine. When I got there it was 12:25 and there was to be an organ recital at 12:30 so I went in. It is the fashionable church of Paris and I had to pay twenty-five centimes for my seat. All my loose change disappears on Sundays for collections and chairs. Old, very old women keep the chairs in repair and during mass come around and collect and make change. The priest who takes the collection is preceded by a man wearing a swallow tail blue coat and a hat like George Washington, but only two projections, one on each side, and he carries a big staff which is as tall as himself. He lifts this and lets it fall on the hard stone floor so that you know when the priest is coming. The organ here is like that and had made a clicking sound. I should judge about 900 people were there.

"In the afternoon I went to the church Sacre Coeur. Sacre Heart is in the north of Paris on a hill about half as high as Lookout Mountain. They have an incline to get up there. It is a mammoth church, all white stone and built in the style of a mosque. It is the only new church of Paris having been built about thirty years. Some men's organization was holding a service and the place was packed to overflowing, perhaps 2,000 people. Of course, all around the side aisles people were moving all the time. I never have been in such a beautiful

Crestline Sees Improvement

Pennsylvania Railroad Has Appropriated Large Sum for Purchase of Land.

Based upon well found report that the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., has appropriated $200,000 for the purchase of additional land, it is a known fact that the company has recently secured options on large tracts of land in the vicinity of the Crestline engine house. The Crestline Advocate believes that the company is planning to make Crestline one of the most important terminals on the Pennsylvania system.

The Advocate says the railroad company recently closed deals for large tracts of land west of the Crestline engine house and will ultimately own all of the land on the north side of the tracks between the engine house and the Bucyrus street road.

"This additional land could be wanted for nothing else than the extension of their railroad yards and tracks in this city and vicinity," says the Advocate, "and, quite naturally, the increased yard facilities will be wanted for the purpose of taking care of increased freight and passenger trains. These new trains can come only from one place, the Toledo division of the Pennsylvania railroad."

This assumption is based on the fact that the Pennsylvania has long been wanting to eliminate its Toledo division between Toledo Junction, where the Toledo division runs into the main line, and a point in the vicinity of New Washington. The Advocate further points out that there is no particular reason for selling the Pennsylvania has an unusual affection for Crestline as a town; that the proposed improvements, whatever they will be, are strictly a business proposition, and make the further assertion that Crestline needs the Pennsylvania and should encourage its developments there.

The entire situation is now shrouded in a fog of mystery always thrown about such projects by reason of the well known refusal of railroad officials to talk, but persistent rumors and an ear to the ground can usually be depended upon to reveal the prospect beyond.

B. & O. TAKES ON MORE SWITCHMEN

WILLARD—Indications for a good fall business were evidenced here the past week when the Baltimore and Ohio railroad called five switchmen for yard duty here. It is expected that more will be added at a later date. The earlier part of the summer about thirty-five railroaders were laid off. However, fifteen of them were called back for service ten days ago.

Labor Day Activities

School Board Favors New Hi School Here

Tentative Plans Were Discussed at Meeting Held Tuesday Night.

Complete plans will be made in the next few months for a new building to be used as a high school and a large auditorium that will seat several hundred people. This action was decided upon at a meeting held by the school board here Tuesday night.

The board voted unanimously for tentative plans of the new building and preliminary work, it is said, will start immediately. The preliminaries will include a suitable site, a drawing of the proposed building and estimated costs and other items that will be necessary to get full details before it is presented to the people next year.

Current conditions and other obstacles have made it necessary for the board to take some action. The present school building is overcrowded and is inadequate in taking care of various departments of the high school work. It has taken quite a sum of money to keep the building in shape. The present structure was erected in 1855.

Other villages and towns have made tremendous strides in erecting school buildings to meet the demands of their respective communities, and the past few years Plymouth has been rated far behind in an improvement of this nature.

The fact that the school board has taken some effort toward getting a new school for Plymouth will be welcomed by hundreds of citizens who have often made the expression that Plymouth needs a suitable building. While it will take some time before any definite plans can be given out, it is known that the board is very sincere in its effort and that this line of work is working harmoniously to this end.

J. W. McIntire, as president, J. L. Judson, Mrs. Wesley Ritter, G. W. Pickett and J. E. Nimmons compose the board, and they are to be commended for the action they have taken.

Their combined output is valued at $18,000 annually.

SHILOH LAD HAS NARROW ESCAPE

SHILOH—A fatal accident was narrowly averted here Tuesday night when a man, whose name could not be learned, snatched Stanley Gribben from the tracks of the Big Four just as a fast express came roaring by. Young Gribben was crossing the tracks, pulling a small wagon and in some way he slipped and fell. Before he could get to his feet and clear the tracks the train was upon him. It was only through the quick and clear thinking of the hero that resulted in the saving of his life. The engineer hit the boy on the track was so sure that his train had struck the lad that he brought the locomotive to a stop.

One Elephant Gray And A Cardinal Red

One elephant of gray to a cardinal of red are nature's dictates in color combinations. Notice how sparingly red in its highest intensity is found in the landscape, and compare it with the large areas of neutral gray. It is safe to follow this principle of nature in combining colors for the wardrobe.

Red, bright green, and blue-green should be avoided by those with florid complexions. They tend to make the wearer appear dowdy. Edna Callahan, extension specialist in home economics at the Ohio State University points out, and intensify the red of a florid complexion. A rich, deep yellow-red or a soft gray-green may be worn by the brunette with vivid complexion. She often looks best in soft violets or blues. Brilliant red, however, may find its place among the sport clothes of the wardrobe. Soft shades of rose and green are becoming to the pale brunette. Vivid colors, bright red, green and purple make the skin more pale. Many complexions may be classified as average, says Miss Callahan, but every person has at least one physical characteristic which would emphasize by the color she wears. Lavender will intensify the gold in the hair by contrast, a gray-blue emphasizes blue eyes by repetition, and soft gray-greens add color to the cheeks.

Blue eyes may appear gray and faded if the blue worn is too intense. Orange may make the yellow of blond hair look faded or, it may bring out the golden lights in dark brown hair and eyes.

Color as dictated by fashion may not be becoming to you. Then don't wear it.

1927 Buicks On Display

R. W. Irvin, Shelby, Buick dealer for this territory, has several models of the 1927 Buicks on display at the show rooms in Shelby, and they are drawing much comment from automobile admirers. Here are some facts that will interest the motorist:

The 1927 Buicks on the 128 inch chassis offer custom features usually found only on cars of much higher price.

Interior fittings, equipment and exterior appearance conform with those of custom built cars. Upholstering is mohair or broadcloth in the closed models and Spanish leather in the open cars. Closed car colors are soft shades of green and blue Devo developed especially for Buick. The open cars are finished in a two tone combination of cream and brown Duco. Tires and rims are jet black. The wheels are dark natural wood finish with contrasting stripes.

The dash instruments, besides the usual speedometer, oil range, ammeter, etc., include a gasoline gauge and a temperature indicator. The instruments are finished in walnut with German silver inlay. Lighting is indirect and designed to light the transmission lock.

The closed bodies are fitted with vanity cases and smoking sets. Paneling is in walnut. The hardware is especially designed with satin finish. The automatic windshield wipers are extra powerful and the blade is kept tight against the top of the visor when not in use.

A five passenger coupe has been added to the line. The driver's seat and the auxiliary seat are very comfortable, according to the Buick body engineers. The brace on the auxiliary seat is nickel plated.

The models on the 128 inch chassis are:
Five passenger coupe; seven passenger sedan; Two passenger country club coupe with dicky seat; Five passenger brougham; Two passenger sport roadster with dicky seat; Five passenger sport touring.

These models are designated as Deluxe models by Buick. They carry the new Buick radiator emblem and many extras.

The new Buick engine is said to be without vibration periods throughout the speed range. This result is accomplished by a counter-balanced, four bearing crankshaft with torsion balancer, light pistons and heavy flywheel.

Oil filter, air cleaner, gasoline strainer, thermostatic temperature control and crankcase ventilator are standard equipment. The crankcase ventilator was developed by Buick engineers to prevent crankcase dilution. In combination with the oil filter and gasoline strainer, it keeps the engine oil clean and full-bodied for a long time. Buick engineers recommend a complete change of oil only four times a year.

Exceptional silence is claimed for the new Buicks because of the balanced engine, a silent transmission, rubber inserts which insulate the engine from the frame at three points of suspension, and a new exhaust and muffler system.

The W. F. M. society will hold their annual all day meeting at the Hudson home east of town on Wednesday, September 8. Make your arrangements accordingly. We wonder sometimes what would have become of this old world of ours if every one professing to be a follower of the Judson teacher would follow the advice of an advertisement we saw some time ago, reading thus: Let the gold dust twine do it and yet we take invoice of the general conditions in the different departments of the positive command of the great teacher: Go and work in My vineyard. This, indeed, is a call which strikes at the very groundwork of our Christian life. No outward profession, however beautifully phrased, will suffice; no church connection, no denominational distinction, but he who doeth the will of the Father who would that all should come to know him, are the favored of the Redeemer. But you say: How can I best reflect the will of the Father? There can be only one answer given, couched in a few words: He who reflects the mind of Jesus, whose mission was to save; he who takes the words spoken by Him the regulator of every act; He who makes the uplift of fallen man, the grand end of his life; in a few well chosen words: He who lives in God, for God and with God! And it is certain, such a one will listen to the call of the erring sons and daughters of man and will work in harmony with the mind of Christ. If it is considered a worthy ambition to be loved by the good and pure, what must be the joy to know that the love of God is ours. If we follow his commands, serve God with all our heart and mind and our fellow as ourselves? Come let us get acquainted at the church of the glad hand. A hearty welcome awaits you.

GERMAN MAY BE TAUGHT
The teaching of German may be resumed in The Bucyrus High school at the beginning of the school term, Sept. 7, providing the superintendent can find a way to do it without curtailing French or Latin studies. It will be recalled that the study of German was withdrawn from schools throughout the nation during an early period of the World War.

"Let's Get Married" Has More Than It's Share Of Muscular Men

As Richard Dix romps and battles his way from dilemma to predicament in his new farce comedy, "Let's Get Married," which comes to the Opera House, Shelby, Sunday, he is accompanied by a bunch of "regular guys" of his own selection.

There is "Gunboat" Smith, an expuglist who has played in many films with Dix and exchanged blows with him. "Gunboat" is the detective who dogs Dix's devious detours in "Let's Get Married."

Dix has, as his boon companion in the picture, Nat Pendleton, wrestling champion of Europe. He rose to this eminence after winning the intercollegiate title for Columbia University in 1924. Later, he won a place on the Olympic team. Nat's versatility has been displayed before in both histrionic and directorial capacity on the screen.

With Dix and Pendleton, we find Douglas MacPherson, former football star of the Detroit High School, who has the role of Tommy. MacPherson however, modestly disclaims any particular right to fame as a football player; but admits he's pretty good at checkers, and expects someday to take up golf. This is his first picture in several years, having devoted himself recently to the Broadway stage.

Trailing this trio through the thrills of life or if you will, reading, through the reels; are an organ grinder and a street sweeper. Both of them are hefty lads who would be handy to have around in an emergency, but neither of them is professionally proficient in the rugged pastimes.

The cast of extras, is also well sprinkled with exponents of agility and prowess. They include Phil Bloom who acquired his callowfaced ears in many a ring battle; and Char-He Young, a vainglorious tumbler whose business it is to get through a window. Sort of a "picking up" business.

Richard's tough gang in "Let's Get Married" is not due entirely to his liking of young fellows who are able to argue and back their arguments; but also to the fact that "Let's Get Married" calls for more robust scrapping than any picture he has made lately. Lois Wilson, who is featured, contributes her part in injecting some feminine beauty to offset all these pug-nacious men. Gregory La Cava directed for Paramount.

SAME ALL OVER COUNTRY
We saw a man drive by in a new auto the other day who owns many of the merchants of the town for the necessities of life and we also find his name on the wrong side of the Spectator ledger. If he would pay his debts he would not have enough money left to buy gasoline to carry him a rod. It would not do to express in print our opinion of such a man.—Spectator.

church. The altar was beautiful beyond description. I think it must have been a patriotic meeting for fifty men grouped about it carrying large flags on long poles. There was an organ, but there was no choir that day as the whole congregation sang. The organ is the finest I have heard in France. All the people sang the melody of those old Gregorian hymns and the powerful organ filled in the harmony. They had a procession while singing. Each man carried a candle stick which had an oil wick on the end which was lit. There were three lines in the procession. Two lines of men with lights with a line of flag bearers between. The music was so thrilling and the people were so earnest that one could not help but sing enthused. You can imagine what it would be like with 2,000 people singing at Celeryville. When I first went in, the man in the swallow tail coat asked me if I wanted to sit in the middle. He was going to put me there. Wouldn't that have been an experience to march around with a lighted lamp and all those dignified looking men?

"I forgot to tell you that my lady-lady shines my shoes. She keeps every pair shined up when I am not wearing them. Over Sunday she puts white stuff on my tennis shoes to cover up the dirt. That's one way of having white shoes. I always tried to clean the dirt off.

"July 19. Last week was the French national holiday. Ansel—who's father is a Methodist minister in Albany N. Y., went with me. We wanted to see the celebration at night. The Sultan of Morocco is visiting Paris. He came over to dedicate the new mosque right near us in the Latin quarter. The Sultan was to be present at the fireworks at the Pont-Neuf, one of the bridges over the Seine. We rode in the subway. It is possible to ride all night for one cent, as long as you are down under ground you are a passenger of the company. You only have to pay when you enter. The whole place is as light as day and you can't get lost. We arrived at the Pont-Neuf at 11 o'clock and the celebration was at 11 o'clock and the celebration was over. The Louvre was lit up with gas. The gas jets are about two inches apart all around the outlines of the building and the constant flickering made it very beautiful. We went to different places but saw nothing but crowds of people. So we took the subway and changed to the elevated and at Montmartre came up in the midst of a carnival. We rode in a tub that went over bumps and twisted around at the same time. Also I got on a merry-go-round for the first time in my life. We mounted some pigs but they didn't gallop so while the merry-go-round was in motion we got off and mounted the ones ahead that jumped up and down. About two o'clock in the morning we sat down to eat in the front of a cafe. Everybody eats out on the sidewalk at little round tables. We had ham sandwiches, oranges and mineral water. The latter is more healthful than ordinary water. Practically every tourist is vaccinated for typhoid before leaving for the States. I haven't seen very many good looking French people. Dr. Ware says that the finest looking race in Europe is the Holland Dutch. I have great respect for the French young people. There was absolutely no joyless. They would sit in groups at the table eating and drinking and when the orchestra struck up they would quietly walk out and dance. There was a policeman at each end of the street to keep the taxis from crowding in. The orchestra was made up of an accordion, a banjo, a guitar, a violin and drums. One man played a violin with horn attached to amplify the tone. There was no jazz.

From there we went to the wholesale market section. We had a map so we started to walk there but the subway stopped at 1 a.m. About 1 p.m., we sat down on the opera house steps to rest. After walking four miles we arrived at Les Halles, the wholesale markets. I wouldn't have missed seeing that for anything. There were hundreds and hundreds of slaughtered animals being cut up ready for the market. And I never before seen so many vegetables in one place. They bring them in, in one horse wagon. The wagons have little tiny wheels in front about 3 feet high and those in the back are about 6 feet high.

Since the war they use a 24 day ton. From noon they count right on. One o'clock is thirteen o'clock. Eight o'clock is twenty o'clock. I find this way of counting time a great convenience. I always find myself subtracting 12 and then I know what time it is.

One evening I went to the opera and I was late. Got the last seat near the stage and they folded up against the wall and only six inches square. I could not see the stage when I sat down so the only time I used it was between acts. I didn't get the hang of the play but it was the most marvelous acting I have ever seen in my life. In one place the heroine had every one crying. The heroes were weeping all over the house and the blowing of noses was terrific. When a Frenchman blows his nose one can hear it two blocks. A lot of Moroccans were here at the palace last week. They were a gorgeous sight in their robes and headgears. Each one wore seven or eight robes. The palace of Fontainebleau, where I take my music lessons, is beautiful beyond description. I cannot find words to describe it. I am sending you a number of postcard views of it. Your loving son,

 M. M. SLOAN

The Old Mill

We are all interested in oddities. Here you can your desires fill; It was once the center of industry; A relic now, an old stone flour mill. You say we live in swift ages, in which we travel so fast. You can only measure progression by considering things we passed.

You must give your parents credit. Many are numbered with the dead. For their good healthy methods in which they prepared their bread.

In viewing the surroundings of this historic stone mill. At present out of commission. And the machinery standing still.

The water which furnished power from the Huron river did spare. Has changed his course course. And is doing work elsewhere.

Water as well as some people only do work when it must. Got on a regular rampage. And the bonds it finally burst.

The dam that held the water was not all to blame. Could not hold the strain longer it finally burst—what a shame.

A good business has finally ceased. The mill is standing still. For the want of another mill. To hold water to run the mill.

When the mill ceased running. You failed to get any grist. Like so many good people. When dead, are so much missed.

Man has figured on many inventions. From the steam to electric power. The good Lord has beaten them in the way of water power.

Water can readily be harnessed in steam, or it's very weight. Has converted wheat into flour. Of which we often ate.

Of all the mail you ever got. None are truer than this letter. Written to Mr. A. W. Grandon. —By W. H. PETERS, Plymouth, O.

A SATURDAY NIGHT CONVICENCE

A new type of shower bath curtain that requires no laundering is now being used in many homes, hotels and clubs. It is made of a special quality fabric called "whit" has been developed for the purpose. The fabric is coated on both sides with prooxylon, which makes the material water-proof, dust-proof, stain-proof, mildew-proof and resistant to wear. It is finished so as to give the appearance of soft silk. It is embossed in a block grain design and furnished in white and an attractive shade of green. The material is also fade-proof and is said to retain its color over long periods of service. The new curtain dries quickly and has been found especially valuable in the bathrooms of hotels and clubs, after departure of a previous guest.

MINING THE FARMS

In some parts of Europe the same land has been farmed successfully for hundreds of years. Europeans are able to do this because they take care of their soil. European agriculturists who visit the United States frequently say they are shocked at the number of run down and abandoned old American farms. They say that in the United States there is a tendency to "mine the land," rather than to maintain it for agricultural purposes.

Ohio Ranks Second In Improved Roads

COLUMBUS, (Special)—The State of Ohio, when it comes to building good roads and maintaining them, is no "piker." If anybody says the State is niggardly, shoot a hole through them with these official figures:

Every working hour of every working day in 1925, the State is spending more state money on good roads than it spent of them during the entire year of 1924.

Has public sentiment for good roads grown rapidly in the Buckeye State?

It is an overwhelming public sentiment that now approves an expenditure of $10,000,000 of state money every working hour for improved roads, whereas the legislature, back in 1904, thought it was keeping up with public sentiment and demand when it blew trumpets and appropriated $10,000,000 for state aid to road construction for an entire year.

And the amazing thing about it all is the fact that the State isn't building roads fast enough. The demand apparently is insatiable.

To spend $30,000 every day in the week, except Sunday, on road work is a man's sized job. That means around $24,000,000 for the year 1926. "I want a man as State Highway Director," said Governor Donahay, last summer, "who will see to it that the taxpayers get a dollar's worth of road roads for every tax-dollar spent."

He gave the job to George F. Schlesinger. Schlesinger was already an oldtimer in the road building game. He had been graduated from Ohio State University in 1907 in civil engineering, after which he gained some years of valuable experience as a division engineer with the Rock Island Railroad in Kansas and Missouri. But Schlesinger was too good an engineer to be held out west indefinitely.

Ohio State University had been watching his rapid rise and, in 1913 brought him back to Columbus as a member of the faculty of the Department of Civil Engineering. As a professor during the year until America entered the Great War, he trained many of the engineers who are now building Ohio's roads.

During the war, Schlesinger was called by the federal government for employment as an engineer on the construction of the vast Columbus Reserve Depot. After the war he entered the State Highway Department as Division Engineer in the Cincinnati District and later was promoted to Chief Engineer of Construction. He resigned during the administration of State Highway Director Herrick but returned to the department in 1923 as State Highway Engineer under Director L. A. Boulay.

When Governor Donahay, at the expiration of Boulay's term, in August, 1925, elevated Schlesinger to the directorship, the popular verdict was that the promotion was a richly deserved one and that Donahay had demonstrated his ability as a "picker" of men.

Schlesinger had a vision. He sees the day, maybe not far distant, when Ohio will stand at the very top of the 48 states in the number of miles of improved highways, and when the roads already built will be the best maintained in the entire country.

He doesn't have to go far to reach this goal because Ohio today is surpassed by only one other state, New York, in mileage of improved roads. And in 1925 only one other state, Wisconsin, constructed more miles of new roads than Ohio.

The so called "state system" of roads in Ohio is limited by the law to 11,000 miles. Of this number more than 2,200 miles are already roads with about 1700 miles of traffic bonded roads which are constructed of gravel, stone or slag.

"We expect," says Schlesinger "by July 1, 1927, to have completed or under construction 7,000 miles of paved roads and about 3,000 miles of traffic bonded type, which will make about 10,000 miles of paved roads and traffic bonded road under state maintenance on the state system."

To keep the roads already built in repair is one of Schiesinger's big, long problems. To this end there has been developed an organization that now totals several thousand workers. They can be found day in and day out on the state roads, dragging, smoothing, replacing and repairing.

Last year some $9,600,000 of state money went into repair and maintenance.

It is interesting to know where Schlesinger gets all the millions he has at his command to spend on roads this year.

The last legislature made a direct appropriation of $7,000,000 to the Highway Department to spend during the biennium ending June 30, 1927. Then comes Federal aid, which amounted in 1925 to $2,700,000. In addition, there's the gas tax, which is estimated to produce $25,000,000 during the two year ending June 30, 1927, and of this the State gets 45 percent for maintenance and repair purposes. Fifty percent of the motor vehicle license fees, commercial bus and truck fees go to the Department, totaling several millions more.

Then, in new construction work, the State co-operates with the counties and townships both of which put up a part of the funds needed; and property owners in the benefited areas bear assessments ranging from five to fifteen percent of the total cost, exclusive of rates and culverts.

"Yes," says Schlesinger, "the Ohio Highway Department has become a vast business enterprise. It is working more smoothly every year. If the public will just be patient it won't be long until Ohio will have the best roads in the world."

NEW YORK AND AMERICA

Harry Alnoworth, editor of "The People" one of the largest Sunday papers in London, has come to America only to find that New York is not really an American city after all. Mr. Alnoworth has made a real discovery and one which is at least partially true. For if can at least be said in all fairness that New York City is the last place in the United States where a stranger may learn what the American people are really thinking.

A great many of Mr. Alnoworth's fellow-Europeans go to New York City for a visit and then go back home to tell the people what America thinks and feels. When they attempt to do this they are only feeding to their fellow-citizens some of that well known American dish known as "apple sauce."

Every American of course is proud of New York as the financial center and metropolis of the country. He admires its mammoth buildings, and its bustling spirit and he may even be dazzled a bit at first by its bright lights.

But he does not let New York do his thinking for him. A great many European statesmen have been seeking to hide in the past because they thought New York was doing the thinking for the nation.

Questions of national and international moment too, so far as America is concerned, will continue to be settled by the boys and girls in the outlying districts, in the east, the north, the south and the west.

MORE EVIDENCE WE SHOULD "HOE OWN ROW"

The discussion of an economic boycott by European countries against America will furnish the thoughtful American with another good reason why we ought to direct more and more of our attention toward the development of the Western Hemisphere, according to the National Republic, which comments in its current issue in its Department of the Trend of National Affairs, on the subject of economic boycotts as follows:

"There is talk in Europe of an economic boycott directed against the United States. There is bitter complaint because American financiers are investing billions in Europe and seeking to reduce the continent to economic serfdom. It is evident that more and more the United States should 'hoe its own row.' We have the world in this hemisphere, and even within the boundaries of the United States. We produce as much of the staples of industry as all of Europe combined. We could live and prosper if the wish of Thomas Jefferson that the Atlantic Ocean 'were a lake of fire' were realized. With the present tremendous export of American capital to Europe, and the importation of European goods and immigrants, we should think a little less of Europe's prosperity, as Jackson once said, and a little more of our own. Our helping Europe has brought us only ingratitude and deep hatred. The more help we give the more hatred and ingratitude we may expect. Therefore the sensible thing to do is to attend strictly to our own business, and let Europe attend to hers. If Europe finds American tourists distasteful, the granting of passports for tourist travel in Europe should be suspended."

WHY NOT A NATION OF THINKERS

A remarkable man died in this country a short time ago. This man was not a "super-man." He was just a plain everyday American citizen, with an abiding faith in humanity, and the deepest respect for American democracy and freedom as guaranteed and protected by our constitutional form of government.

He had a broad vision. He built up his business by helping others to build up their business. He knew that if his manufactured articles were to have the greatest sale, consumers had to be able to buy and willing to buy. He could see that in order to sell a pump for irrigation purposes, he had to do a whole lot besides build a pump. It was more necessary at first for him to encourage the teaching of scientific agricultural methods, so that farmers could use pumps and have the money with which to buy, than it was to build a pump factory.

And so it was throughout his business career. He saw the value of building up the buying power of the people as the surest way to build up his own business.

He could see that exorbitant taxes, radical legislation and disturbing governmental politics were detrimental to the laboring man and business, and that the laboring man suffered most by any policy which crippled industry and destroyed employment.

This man started with nothing but a clear vision and an understanding of basic principles which underly both individual and national prosperity. When he died he was the head of the greatest business of its kind in the world, and his products were sold in every nation.

The question will be asked, "What has all this to do with my job or my business?"

It has everything to do with your business or job, whatever it may be. You have the same brain to think with as the man mentioned, although you may not have the God-given insight into human nature which he had. But you can profit by the record which he left. It doesn't take great intelligence, for the shoe merchant to see that he will sell more shoes if conditions are good, nor for the insurance agent to understand that prosperous people are better prospects.

Get over the idea that you can make prosperity for yourself alone, and realize that you depend upon the "other fellow" for your business.

The United States is a world leader in many ways. For this reason, it should become a land of "thinkers." We should not be at the mercy of political agitators and legislative buccaners. The country editor should understand that an unsound piece of legislation or taxation which interferes with some industry three thousand miles away, may take an advertisement out of the local store of his paper or create unemployment which will cut down his subscription list. The local grocer may lose his business, because an un-sound tariff policy destroys the market for local farm crops. The banker feels the effect immediately when any business is hurt, and it goes without saying that the day laborer is the first man to "get the ax" when business suffers.

The lesson to be learned from this man who has passed on, is plain and simple. He lived his life largely in the interest of the "other fellow"—not from a purely charitable spirit, but from the standpoint of "good business." As we go to follow his example, many business problems and world controversies will disappear.

With a record of approximately 40,000,000 pies to his credit, Richard Webb, of Toledo, Ohio, is said to be the champion pie baker of America. Webb, according to the American Gas Association, has been baking pies for 29 years and has averaged more than 3,000 pies a day during this period. Some days production has run at the rate of 11,000 pies a day.

Webb was born in Brighton, England, in 1858. He came to the United States in 1881, and went to work with a Toledo baking concern. The oven he uses for pie baking is a gas-fired, rotary brick oven, 20 feet in diameter, 8 feet high, with a concrete foundation 7 feet deep. The walls of the oven are more than 2 feet thick and the entire structure contains as many bricks as a full-sized brick house.

This Actress Has Never Visited A Night Club

Rae Samuels
You let a lead your reader, you'll have your own—s, let's talk about my friends one

NEW YORK CITY—If you happen to hear Rae Samuels that rollicking song of vaudeville, singing "Let's Talk About My Friends," her latest hit, you may get the idea that the singer is one of those actresses you read about who help to make Broadway gay when more sober citizens are in bed. But prepare for a shock!

"I have never been inside a night club in my life," declares Miss Samuels. "You read a lot about stage door meetings and men who take actresses out to supper. I wonder if I'll be believed when I say that the only supper I have ever had with the theatre, I got out of my own ice box and shared with the husband I've had for fifteen years!"

"I know this is against all tradition, but I can't help it. Moreover, while I am shattering illusions, I might as well confess that I believe the part of stage people in the gay life of Manhattan or any other place is highly exaggerated. Actors get a good deal of excitement out of their work—more perhaps, than the people of any other profession. They don't need the stimulation of supper clubs, and the like. Folks who lead dull lives do and they are the ones who go in for that sort of thing.

"There is another thing. You can't carouse all night and sing eight or ten songs twice the next day to the satisfaction of two highly critical audiences as I must do. Furthermore, you can't drink and smoke and expect your voice to stand up under the strain. Those who have tried have soon found out their mistake."

Miss Samuels is known to her adoring public as the wise streak of vaudeville. In private life, a life that holds checked aprons and a real kitchen she is Mrs. Marty Forkins. The couple have no children, but are making plans to adopt a little girl. Mr. Forkins is a well-known theatrical man.

"Wanderer" Has Gripping Scenes

Paramount Story of First Black Sheep a Master-piece of Screen

Thousands of persons killed in the blinking of an eyelash! One moment taking part in a scene of pagan revelry—the next feeling the wrath of God!

That is one of the powerful situations which develops in "The Wanderer," beloved parable of The Prodigal Son, a Raoul Walsh production for Paramount, which may be seen at the Shelby Opera House, Monday and Tuesday of next week.

As "The Wanderer," William Collier, Jr., plays a part in which he blends comedy with tragedy and sympathy with hatred. Seldom has there been a masculine role that has called for the variety of emotions enacted by the prodigal son in "The Wanderer."

The plot of the story is a simple one, simple yet possessing a theme of tremendous force and sweep.

Jesse (Tyron Power) has two sons: Jether and Gaal (William Collier, Jr. and George Rigas.)

Jether, the younger, grows weary of the monotony of his shepherd life and longs to see the city beyond the hills. Despite the pleadings of his mother (Kathryn Williams) and the maiden, Naomi (Kathryn Hill) he takes his portion and leaves for the city. With him is a dissipated spendthrift, Toia (Ernest Torrence.)

In the city, Jether learns to drink and dice, and he soon falls into the snares of the siren, Tisha (Greta Nissen). Squandering his portion upon her, he soon finds himself unable to buy her a necklace, thus her affections toward Paris, a giant sea captain (Wallace Beery.) Jether leaves her house in anger.

But the hypocrite lure of Tisha is too strong. On a night when the doors of the courtesan's house are flung open, that all who will may worship at the shrine of her pagan God, Jether follows the throng that crowds to the feast.

As the crowd worships the God, the curtain behind Jether is rent with a flash of lightning and a prophet appears and denounces the idolators. Inspired by Tisha, the mob attacks the prophet. Jether springs to his defense. In aiding the man of God, the prodigal son, escapes the vengeance of Heaven, as lightning cleaves the sky, the statue of the pagan god crashes to the ground, the pillars of the banquet hall titter and the roof thunders down upon the apalled throng.

The experiences which befall the Wanderer following the destruction of the city, his long journey back to the home of his father and the reception accorded him there all go to make up a production that will amaze and thrill screen-lovers throughout the world.

LAUGHS A PLENTY IN "STEEL PREFERRED"

Not since the inception of the motion picture industry has any production come to the screen with so much dramatic action and wholesome comedy, as are seen in "Steel Preferred," a Metropolitan picture which will be on view at the Shelby Castamba, Saturday.

The story deals with a young steel worker who, despite great hardships, forges to the front and not only wins promotion but the love of the daughter of his employer. Drama and genuine comedy abound, the latter being supplied by such screen comedians as Charlie Murray and Ben Turpin. Many of their scenes are in the vernacular, "a scream."

Activities Will be Resumed Monday After Summer Rest

The regular fall term of the Plymouth schools will begin next Monday morning when several hundred children will enroll in the grade and high schools here. After an ideal summer vacation the youth of the nation will assemble once more in the study rooms and the daily tasks of "reading" and "writing" and "rithmetic" will have begun.

Local boys and girls have taken advantage of the vacation period, some going away on tours, while others busied themselves during the months of school rest.

Practically a new staff of teachers in the high school have been selected. However, Superintendent Berry has not made known any assignment of the new teachers. The teachers who have been employed to serve this year are as follows:

Miss Leora E. Garber,

Miss Martha Fish,
Miss Stella Nye,
J. B. Derr,
Miss Mary Anne Karcher,
Miss Faye Hamman,
Miss Marion Gooding,
Miss Mildred Walter,
Theodore S. Jenkins,
Superintendent Berry.

When the children assemble Monday morning a short session will be held and the remainder of the day will be given over to them.

Local merchants have made an effort to supply the demand that will be made on them by the school children, and those whose names appear on this page and elsewhere in this issue have gone to much expense in securing the articles that will be needed in school work. Pupils will find most everything they need at these stores.

Mysterious Light Remains Unexplained

TULSA, Okla.,—They have stalked it through the graveyard and streets of the deserted village of Old Ruby, but "they," which includes numerous newspapermen, and dozens of ghost detectors from this city have not solved the riddle of the red-orange ghost light that moves over the prairies of the most thinly settled section of Nowata county.

Mac A. Hawkins, skeptic writer of the Tulsa World, attempted to lay the uneasy light to rest, and came to the conclusion that the mystery was beyond powers.

The Rev. W. J. Scantling, pastor of the Christian Union church has attempted to solve the light, and failed.

Hawkins describes his view of the phantom:

"An orange red glow, that did not throw any reflection, such as an automobile headlight might have thrown. To the watchers it was visible below a small catalpa tree at the graveyard entrance, so it must have been close to the ground.

"Lon Bryant and one of the other reporters rushed to the cross roads. There was nothing to be seen—a light shower that had settled the dust had made it perfectly impossible to see any tracks that might have been made, but there were none."

So the spook of Old Ruby will continue to wander through the deserted streets, and caper in its playground at the graveyard until someone finds an explanation of its existence.

Variety Adds Cost Onto Fertilizers

Three-fourths of the mixed fertilizers sold in Ohio are included in the Ohio Standard Fertilizers. If the manufacturer could restrict the manufacture of fertilizers to the standard mixture and satisfy the buyer, he could materially decrease the mixing charge.

A leaflet just published by the department of soils at the Ohio State University and the department of agronomy at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station suggests uses of standard fertilizers under various soil conditions and crops. Recommendations are made for sandy soils that have had regular manure treatment of 3 tons or more of well preserved manure on the immediate crop, for sandy soils that have had a crop of clover plowed down once in every 4-year rotation; and for soils that have had neither clover nor manure on them regularly.

Peas and mucks, light colored soils other than sands, and dark colored soils other than peats and mucks are also listed, with recommendations similar to the sandy soils. Cereal crops, hay crops, pastures, fruits, and vegetables are listed with fertilizer requirements for each of the various types of Ohio soils.

Fertilizer mixtures are outlined by specialists for the various crops when weather conditions are unfavorable for the crop, or the season is late. A copy of the leaflet may be obtained by writing to the editor, College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, Columbus.

Judge Irving Carpenter, who filled the pulpit for Mr. Gibson Sunday, is reported to have given many things well worth carrying out in practice.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Conser and children of Toledo, who have been visiting their parents at the parsonage, went home Monday evening. We all enjoyed their visit.

Mr. Gibson, for the first time, attended the Gibson family reunion which was held in a beautiful grove on a hilltop in Belmont county. Members of the "tribe" were there from Cleveland, Youngstown, St. Clairsville, Marietta, Martins Ferry, Barnesville, Caldwell, and other points. A family tree is to be started, and it is found the Gibsons of this family came from Calvert county, Maryland, where the fore-fathers settled when our country was very young.

The records of the first family have been lost by the burning of the court house of said Calvert county, Maryland, in later part of the 16th century or early in the 17th. It is interesting to trace the spreading of a family that runs back to early days.

To Build Cozy Country Home

Mr. and Mrs. George Verbeck of Marvin, avenue have purchased five acres on the Plymouth-Shelby road, a five acre tract off the J. A. Seltzer Lebanon Stock farm at the south end of the farm on the east side of the road, located at the corner of the Plymouth-Shelby road and the Dempsey road.
On this tract they will build a modern home setting back from the road with shrubbery, trees and a large lawn to beautify the front. The country home will be known as "Sunset View" and will have 500 feet on the Plymouth-Shelby road and will extend back to the Blackrock.
The ground has been staked off already and workmen will be on the job in the next two or three weeks and the home will be constructed as rapidly as the contractor is able to push the work. The home will be modern in every detail with electric lights, bath, toilets, etc.
George Verbeck is one of Shelby's veteran mail carriers and he will be retired from the service in about one year and a half. He plans to have Sunset View completed and expects perhaps a short time before his retirement date to be living in his beautiful country home.
Mr. Verbeck has spent many long years tramping through snow and rain delivering messages of joy, happiness and sorrow to our homes. He has given Uncle Sam and the people of Shelby 100% service and the Globe joins his hundreds of friends in wishing that he live many, many years to enjoy life at Sunset View—Shelby Globe.

Junior Aid Festival at Home of Chas. Keller

The Junior Aid of the Presbyterian church held a very successful lawn festival last Wednesday night, August 25. About one thousand people were in attendance. The committee in charge had many automobiles parked on Mulberry. Plenty of good things to eat were given the large crowd. A varied program was carried on through out the evening. The Glee Band and the church orchestra furnished excellent instrumental music. The young people gave a lawn play entitled "Two Goings Spliced and a Ford Honeymoon Trip" with plenty of thrills and frolic. Mr. Albert Howard of Norwalk gave a very interesting talk on "Lights and Side Lights from Florida." He also sandwiched some very interesting impersonations, that were quite entertaining. There were folks from Shelby, Mansfield, Norwalk and Cedar Point. The owner of the beautiful lawn says, "Come, again, folks."
