Byrd Divorce Unusual One, Says Judge

Much interest was centered on the Byrd divorce case at Mansfield last week as several Plymouth people were on the stand during the trial. Mr. and Mrs. Byrd were former residents and their case, as Judge Galbraith says: "was an unusual one."

The following is taken from Sunday's issue of The Mansfield News: Expressing the belief there would be more hope of Donna Hoak Byrd and her husband, Harold Byrd, becoming reconciled, divorced, than held by the marriage ties, Judge Galbraith granted the wife a divorce Saturday on the grounds of cruelty, but at the same stating the testimony did not prove extreme cruelty.

Judge Galbraith in giving his decision, announced from the bench this was in some ways the most unusual divorce case he had heard in his nine years on the bench.

This contested divorce case began Friday afternoon and was not completed until 12 o'clock Saturday noon. The wife was represented by Attorneys C. J. Anderson, of Shelby, and George W. Biddle, of Mansfield. Byrd had retained Attorney L. H. Beam, of Mansfield, Ohio and Attorney Olin, of Morrow county. The youthful couple had lived in Plymouth, Shelby and Fredericktown during their three years of married life.

Relatives Interested

The testimony showed the relatives had been unduly concerned in the marital affairs of the Byrds. One woman, called "Aunt Grace," a kinswoman of Mrs. Byrd, played an important part in the dissensions, the husband testified. He openly charged that most of his grief was due to the influence of this woman.

Byrd testified "Aunt Grace" came to Fredericktown, accompanied by Mrs. Byrd and a Shelby policeman, and demanded the belongings of the young wife, Marshal Stillwell, of Fredericktown, testified he was called in on the matter by the Shelby officer. He said he ordered the woman not to touch anything in the house until he had notified Byrd. The marshal said Byrd told his wife she could have all of her clothing, and all that belonged to the baby, but could take nothing else. Marshal Stillwell stated that the demand for the clothing was made to him by the woman known as "Aunt Grace."

Mrs. Byrd testified her husband would make her go to a sugar camp near Greenwich where he would keep her for a long time, during which he made charges against her. A Shelby electrician was the man of whom Byrd was supplied after the first time when her husband made her go to a sugar camp, he kept her in a shack four or five hours, not allowing her to leave the place or even to look out of the window.

There was no violence on the part of the husband, except to take hold of his wife, she testified. She claimed he left the imprints of his fingers on her arm at one time. This was a few months before the birth of their child, who will be two years old in February. Mrs. Byrd said it was always the same man her husband accused her of being interested in.

When Byrd took the stand he admitted having been suspicious of an electrician, Ernest Phillips. He had a talk with Phillips and all seemed to have been settled so far as the two men were concerned. They were on such good terms after the trial that Phillips confided to Byrd his own approaching marriage.

Hook Baby Away

The strongest evidence brought out against Byrd was that he took the baby, when it was only four months old, from the mother at Shelby and drove alone with it to the home of his parents at Mt. Gilead. Byrd said his mother told him to take the baby back to the mother that night. One of his sisters accompanied him back. The reason for the father taking the baby was because he had planned to take his wife too, but her relatives influenced her not to go, he claimed, so he took the baby without the mother.

Mrs. Byrd was granted the custody of the child, $500 alimony and $4 a week for the support of the child. The father may visit the child at any reasonable time and may have it with him when it becomes school age.

Frank Tubbs Recalls Thrills of Western Frontier Life

Pioneer Resident Tells of Many Hardships and Incidents of Early Days.

When any mention is made of the heroes of the Civil War, our minds usually form a picture of the south, with its marches and counter-marches, the heat and the swamps, and the incursions into a hostile country.

But there are other heroes of this same war. They too went into a hostile country and an unsettled one as well, their foes an uncivilized people, demonic in their methods of warfare, fiendish in their treatment of prisoners, whose weapons, although arrows instead of cannon, were just as deadly.

To this latter class belongs Frank Tubbs. To see him chatting with his friends up town, or in his cozy home on Mills Avenue, you would not dream that he had passed through experiences which exceeded any Wild West story ever written.

Mr. Tubbs was born in Huron county, just west of town, in 1814. His father, Henry Tubbs, was one of the old settlers, a carpenter and contractor by trade, and lived in a log house, with his wife, Eva Ann and nine children, of whom Frank was the youngest.

He went to school in the old frame building which has been moved since from the school property to its present site on Franklin street, and has been used as a wool house and garage in later years.

Some of Mr. Tubbs's school mates were the Wyandt children, Josiah, Daniel and Lysander Cabine, Levi Books, Fred Kirtland, Sarah Ayers, Georgia Bachman, Clara Hall, Ross and Desha Cuykendall, and Annie Edwards, who was the Presbyterian minister's daughter. J. P. Gettman was the superintendent, and lived in a small frame house on the present site of the Henry Lofland residence.

From his own story, I am afraid that the cares of getting a good education sat but lightly on young Frank's shoulders. He tells how his first teacher, Sue Seymour, used to spank him every day, and how he would throw spit balls. He would turn and stare at Clara Hall, who was afterward Mrs. Michael Sider, until she would make faces at him, then he would throw at her, one day hitting her in the eye with a particularly large spit ball, and received his usual punishment for the deed.

Another teacher, Theodosia Smith, also tried to make him behave, but in

THE CREATOR
I love thy Kingdom, Lord,
The palace of thine abode;
The church, thy blessed redeemer
saved
With his own precious blood.

I love thy church, O God!
The walls around thee stand
So firm, a foundation of rock.
Holding us all in the palm of thy hand.

But most of all, I love
The Great Creator of us all:
For not like a house built on sand
Thy house stands never to fail.

1928 Licenses Are Moving Slow

Up until Tuesday night there were only 78 automobile licenses sold in Plymouth, so states Paul C. Russell, who is handling the tags this year.

Much laxity on the part of the motorist is being shown over the entire state and automobile associations are predicting a late minute Jan. 1 in the meantime state officials declare that a war will be made on motorists who attempt to use 1927 plates after December 31st.

Last year at this time more than 200 tags in Plymouth had been issued. The quota for this territory runs about 600 in all. For the convenience of the public Mr. Russell states that he will be open evenings until 9 o'clock only. And his tip to the auto owner is: "Secure your license today."

It is emphatically pointed out that all bills of sales must be sworn to and recorded, and that all trucks must have a weight slip, these are necessary before you can purchase your license.

PAINFULLY HURT

The many friends here of Paul Hoak will be sorry to learn that he had the misfortune of a painful accident at the Shelby Tube works Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

Mr. Hoak, while working at the cutting machine, became entangled and before he could release himself he suffered a badly bruised and broken right arm, as well as a severe shock. Only the quick work of a fellow worker saved him from being fatally crushed. He was removed to the Shelby hospital where medical aid was administered and late reports indicate that he is resting well.

HENRY MASON DIES AT NEW HAVEN

Henry G. Mason, 59, died at his home Friday night, Dec. 15, death being due to a stroke of paralysis.

Mr. Mason, an employee of the Shelby Tube Works, suffered a stroke in his car at the Shelby plant, and was taken to the Shelby hospital. His condition seemed good, and plans were made to remove him home Friday afternoon. The Chas. G. Mendenhall ambulance was summoned to remove Mr. Mason to his home in New Haven and shortly after his arrival at the house he passed away.

The deceased was born in West Virginia, but had made his home in New Haven for the past seven years. He leaves one son and three daughters, all whom reside at home with the exception of one daughter who lives in California.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon in Maple Grove cemetery at New Haven. The Chas. G. Mendenhall church with Rev. Gillespie of Willard officiating. Interment was made in Maple Grove cemetery.

The community extends its sympathy to the bereft ones in the passing of Mr. Mason as he was admired and well liked by a host of friends for his many fine characteristics which brightened the lives of his associates.

WOMEN TO MEET WILLARD TEAM

The Modern Women's Basket Ball team is scheduled to meet the Willard team here next Tuesday evening at Hamilton hall. The time for the start has been set at 8 o'clock. Much interest has been aroused here in the local ball team and it is very evident that a good turnout will be on hand to witness Plymouth in taking the high score. The Willard team is likely to give the home boys a real game. Don't forget the date and hour and to come and boot for the home boys.

Harry Kirtland In Peculiar Mishap

The following article taken from the Sunday Toledo Blade will interest a number of Plymouth people, since Mr. Kirtland is a former Plymouth boy:

"Surrounded by death in the form of an electric wire, Harry E. Kirtland, 2365 Glenwood avenue, Toledo advertising man, was kept a prisoner in his own automobile for several minutes early Friday night by a dauntless trolley wire that wrapped itself around the gasoline tank.

"Kirtland was driving in Adams street, near Huron street, when a trolley wire snapped and fell on top of his car. He suffered a slight shock, but managed to stop the machine. The wire wrapped itself around the gas tank.

"Fearing he might come in contact with metal in the machine that had been charged by the wire, Mr. Kirtland sat still in the automobile for several minutes until the current was turned off. The wire was untangled and Mr. Kirtland drove home."

GIVE XMAS CANTATA

Sunday evening the M. E. Choir, under the direction of J. L. Judson, gave Roy E. Nolte's Christmas Cantata "Kirtland" at the church.

Owing to a misunderstanding the audience was not as large as hoped for but comments heard at the close of the service place the presentation of this cantata as one of the high points in sacred music given in Plymouth.

Praise is to be given to the director, Mr. Judson, for the fine interpretation of this splendid music, and the manner in which it was carried thru. Also to the organist, Mrs. Ed Phillips, whose skillful playing so completely harmonized. The solo parts were measured up to the high plane of the whole presentation. Those taking the solos were: Jesse Lehan, Emma Rank; Mrs. Sopranos, Miss Ruth L'Amoreaux; alto, Mrs. L. Z. Davis, Mrs. Willard Ross, Mrs. J. L. Price; tenor, Mr. L. Z. Davis; bass, Mr. Wm. Johns, Baritone, Mr. Fisher.

At the conclusion of the service, the choir was invited to the home of Miss Ruth L'Amoreaux where a very enjoyable time was had. Miss L'Amoreaux also served delicious refreshments.

Is It Well With The Lad?

By DR. G. R. MENTE,

(Conclusion)
Do you value the future success in life of that lad of yours or your neighbors? Impress upon him the importance of clean living; make the home life attractive so he will not look upon it simply as a boarding house, where the lazy and shiftless can get free lodging and board, perhaps have the mending of his wardrobe and darning of his sock thrown in. I charge you to tell that lad that home means more than simply a shelter from the storm. It should be the principal school of life for the developing of character. Teach the lad to look out for opportunity to do good. It is just around the corner waiting for him. Boys are very susceptible to surrounding influences, therefore be careful lest you indulge in questionable sports, which might lead him into temptation to become a gambler. God pity that father so contemptibly narrow minded to think it cute when the lad in knee pants places father's old clay pipe between his childish lips and imitates his seniors. How many a fair haired lad has been lost to the world because the home placed no restraining hand upon his appetite or passion. Many a bright boy has been raised to ridicule religious tendencies because by neglect or injudicious teaching we failed to sow seeds of religious fervor. I must refer once again to that so-called where the Master is surrounded by folks bringing tithes to Him to receive His blessing, yet how often we are telling some one to wait until he is older and can choose for himself. My poor, misguided friend, let me tell you Jesus is never too busy saving big folks, but what He has ample time and is willing to save you lad for all eternity. Will you give Him a chance to do this? When the Almighty creator permits a tiny acorn to fall to the earth, He intends that it shall imbued its tiny rootlets into the soil, eventually sending up the little stalk, bringing forth little leaves to be kissed by the sunshine, watered by the dew drops and the rain, rocked to and fro by the winds until it shall have become a mighty oak, the towering giant of the forest. So God by planting seeds of divine grace, hope and faith into our lives intends that they may grow filling our being until it shall become more and more like Him.

The world is full of strange beings. No one wants to be forgotten. We would like to be immortalized. The tombstones in the cemeteries reveal to us all the varied inscriptions. It is well that you teach that lad if he expects to live even after death, He must do something for the world, something worth while. But teach him also that earthly immortality is not sufficient to insure eternal peace. A man may leave millions for the support of philanthropic institutions, and yet lose the reward. If this wealth has been honestly gained, you have my permission to eulogize the donor. If a man leaves his wealth for the bettering of conditions among men, because his love for mankind was unbounded, blessed his memory. But if the moving factor is insane desire for fame, or if troubled conscience must be appeased, in the name of all that is holy do not call this act "Christian Philanthropy." Therefore in closing this series of articles let me remind you once for all that the lad makes a contribution to the world at large, and this contribution, whether it eventually will reach the legislative halls, or enrich the markets of the world, or lift up industrial interests, it must be carried there by individual members of the race, and whatever the future holds in store for this lad of today, point him upward, for up yonder, on high, is the everlasting truths. This is the time of the year for changing of sentiments and gifts, intended to make man happy and cheerful, but the secret of life after all is wrapped up in the few words of the prophet of long ago: Is it well with the lad? Assist him to live a life of service for God and Man.

Editorial-News And Comment On National Happenings

"Have no fear. Behold I bring good news, news with great joy that is meant for ALL people."

This message was received 1927 years ago with the announcement of the birth of a savior.—The Lord Jesus. And the scene was closed by a host of angels singing "Glory to God in the highest and peace on earth for men whom he favours."

What a glorious night it was for those humble shepherds watching their flocks on the hillides in that far away world. Wise men they were as they carried gifts to this new born child they believed to be the hope of the world, for already he was heralded as a king.

This is the story of the first Christmas and it is the story of every Christmas, the one which we observe next Sunday.

Christmas is full of legends and stories, all of which hinge about the child and some serve to the child which distinguishes him as a possible leader of a new day.

For some purpose each child is born. To some high and noble purpose each should be consecrated. In each lies the possibility of revolutionizing society or redeeming the fallen of humanity. He may, like Christ, bring tidings of great joy, blessing in the home, tidings of peace and good will to all peoples.

If Christ should come into our midst today, what a future it would cause. No doubt he would be received by the multitudes with much clapping of hands and waving of flags, but with little more, if as much, devotion and sincerity as 1927 years ago. How much the world needs such a leader and such a friend!

What would the shepherds think should Christ come again bringing this same message? What of politics, picket-line, race hatreds, disrespect for law and order, grabbing, poisoning, jealous strifes between countries and citizens?

We observe, or rather celebrate Christmas, in every country in the world, but in reality our observance is by "giving to receive." Our "good will" is measured in dollars and cents and "peace on earth" is for those who can find it.

When, if ever, Christmas becomes a reality, depends upon those who would be Christlike. Perhaps among the little children of the Christmas season there may be some who will rise up and proclaim in all sincerity the old story and revitalize the message of: "Peace on earth and good will to ALL."

If there is one person who we hope has been diminished from civilization, it is the fellow who says: "whoever gets the most votes will be elected president."

A seat on the New York Stock Exchange recently sold for a quarter million dollars. The seat doesn't mean anything, the price is paid for standing room. Who ever heard of a man sitting down if he made a large sum of money in a few minutes or if he lost it in a hurry. But when it comes to paying a million dollars for a seat in the U. S. Senate, that's another story. Money to buy a seat on the stock exchange is usually procured from the unsuspecting "lamb" who get caught like a moth in the flames; and it is never returned. Money spent for votes to secure a seat in the Senate comes from where? Of course, the senate seat is used to sit in and sometimes to sleep in. A rather peculiar comparison, but nevertheless, alike in a gambling standpoint. . . One is allowed and the other is not.

New York woman who advertised in a Chicago paper for an ear probably thought one could be picked up on the street there after the daily gun battles . . .

Whether it was judicious conduct for a presidential aspirant and helpful in a leading candidacy for a party nomination remains to be seen at a date six or seven months later than this. But there can be no question that Governor Smith of New York, showed candor, truth, courage and other worthy qualities when he went out of his way to affirm his re-elected position to prohibition. Asserting that he had faithfully kept his oath of office by upholding all law, including "parts of it I hate," the principal candidate for the Democratic nomination next year voluntarily informed the New York League of Women Voters of Women Voters of his belief that "one of the fundamental rights of citizenship is the right to organize to oppose any law or any part of legislation with which one is not in harmony." So those who are opposed to him because of his alleged weakness can agree that Governor "A" is not afraid to declare his anti-prohibition convictions. Apparently, if he were to become President Smith by any chance, all Americans would enjoy the right to talk against or prohibit him because of his alleged weakness. But that seems to be as far as assumption can go. The idea that federal enforcement at last would be neglected and the Volstead law allowed to become a piece of dead wood, in the event of a Smith administration, is not perceptibly strengthened by the governor's boast that he has caused prohibition to be enforced exceptionally well in New York, little as his sympathies with it.

Emblishman on his return home after a visit to this country told newspapermen that American women were cold. No doubt he would be too, if he didn't wear anymore clothes than some of them.

There is a reason for all things, but the reason for a chaplain in the U. S. Senate is something unexplained.

DEAR FOLKS—

We have commenced to work in earnest upon our operetta now. We—on the Glee Club—behave very nicely—you—it is near Christmas! Miss Marie Peters, whom I am sure you know, has consented to play the accompaniment for our operetta. We are very glad to have her do so—for being personally acquainted with her, she is a charming young lady and a fine musician. Her music lends enchantment to which we would rather listen than attempt to warble. Orchestra practice was held in the Lutheran Church, as usual, and most benefit was derived from it!!!
Yours—(as before—and behind—)
L. F. '28.

PLYMOUTH GIRLS vs LUCAS GIRLS

Although the boys came out on the short end of the score in the Lucas game, we were not completely disheartened for the girls brought home a victory of which they should be proud.

The game was fast and furious from beginning to end, first one team and then the other being in the lead. In the last minute of play, the score stood 12-11 when Pato dropped one in which gave us the large end of a 13-12 score.

NOTICE TO ALUMNI!!

To those graduates of Plymouth H.S. who are planning to attend our Christmas program and wish to participate in the exchange of gifts, we extend a cordial invitation to do so. We ask that each one bring a gift, with a value not exceeding fifteen cents, wrapped in his or her stocking! Please do not forget to come at 1:00 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Cards of Thanks

Words are so tame when used to express gratitude for kindly deeds, but I certainly appreciated the sympathy of friends, who in such various ways, by letters, cards, calls and flowers lightened my stay in the hospital. I thank you and wish you a very Merry Christmas.
