

Locks Found Damaged on Three Stores

Plymouth is in the throes of a slot-machine mania. Weber's Cafe is minus a perfectly good door lock. Thieves, by the use of a crow bar, gained entrance into the cafe and gaily piled the slot machine from its resting place and quietly left the village early Monday morning, but not before attempts were made to enter the pool room of Ted Keefe and Beckwith's Confectionery store, where slot machines are also operated.

Just what prevented the thieves from retreating into the two latter places is not known. It is thought however, that a Mexican hound which Mr. Keefe keeps in the store at night, probably prevented the burglar from completing his work.

A few weeks ago parties tried to enter the Weber Cafe but were unable to complete the task. However, they were successful at the Carroll pool room, where they obtained a machine.

No clue has been found that would lead to the arrest of the guilty parties. Opinion is, however, that the parties who are making raids on places of business in an effort to steal the machines, have a place to sell them, and not for the money that the machines may contain. It was rumored here Monday that outfits were also stolen in Attica.

Dollar Day to be Next Week

It has been quite a while since Plymouth has had a Dollar Day, and the progressive merchants of the town are planning to give the bargain hunters the time of their lives next Thursday and Friday when they will offer real values. It is safe to say that you will be more than repaid for your visit here on those two days.

Plan now to attend Plymouths Dollar Days, Friday and Saturday, March 18 and 19.

Buster Keaton at the Deisler Tonight

Buster Keaton has taken his front face into the prize ring. At least, he masquerades as a pugilist, gets himself involved in a peck of trouble and finally has to fight the world's champion. And what a fight it is!

"The famous comedian's hilarious venture into the realm of fistiana forms the basis of the plot of "Battling Butler," Keaton's latest picture, showing at the Deisler Theatre, tonight. Heralded as Buster's crowning achievement in laugh provoking, "Battling Butler" is living up to its promise by convincing audiences at every performance.

"Battling Butler" is different; it has an absorbing plot and is invested with elaborate settings that would do credit to the biggest dramatic productions. The supporting cast, including capt. Yvonne Sully O'Neil, Sitts Edwards, Tom Wilson, Francis McDonald, Mary O'Brien, Eddie Borden and Buddy Pine is excellent.

School Honor Roll

The P. H. S. has adopted an honor roll system in which all students, having no grades under B, will be listed at the end of each six weeks period. Those listed on the honor roll for this period are as follows:

Seniors—Betty Bachrach, Corinne Scott, Dorothy Straub, Grace Dickson, Helen Donnensworth, Lena Eckelbarger, Marguerite Boardman, Mary Sheely, Ruth Balduf, Wayne Sommerlott, Juniors—John Root, Martha Bowman, Zetta Brooks, Sophomores—Mary E. Himes, Wade Lebold.

Had the conduct grades been better you can see that this roll would have been greater in number, especially among the Freshmen.

Here's Trux Street

"So this is Trux street," exclaimed a motorist as his auto settled in two feet of mud and mire early Tuesday morning. And he was not the only one. About a half dozen machines "stayed put" before the state highway department could send an emergency crew with several loads of crushed stone to fill the mud holes and put the road in a passable condition. It is now safe to travel over the road for a short time at least.

An Editorial

We are almost confident that after such a successful season of band concerts last summer that Plymouth business men will again show a degree of public spiritedness and make an effort toward supplying the same kind of entertainment as was exhibited last year when thousands of people gathered here to enjoy the band music.

No doubt a canvas will be made in the near future, and this reminder is written in the hope that you will thoroughly think the matter over and have your answer ready when you are called upon to pledge your support for the coming season. Plymouth needs a Saturday night concert and it is hoped that every individual in the community will give approval of the movement.

Mrs. Ferrell Passes Away

Shiloh's Philanthropist Dies at Home of Son in Bay City, Mich.

Shiloh—Mrs. Druzilla Ferrell, who had been a resident here for the past 63 years, died Friday morning at Bay City, Michigan, where she had been the past year. The body was brought to her old home Saturday by her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Ferrell of Saginaw.

Mrs. Ferrell was born and raised on a farm east of town and was the last one of the Ezekiel Chew family. She was 88 years of age, the 27th of January. Mrs. Ferrell was much interested in all the civic developments and progress of her home town and as she had the means to gratify her desires, she gave liberally whenever called upon, and often gave the inspiration by which the community was benefited. The sick, the needy and the shut-ins were always remembered in many thoughtful ways, and the two churches were made beautiful by her gifts. Besides the painting of the parsonage, the Lutheran church was redecorated and a splendid lighting system installed by her, which is the surpassing for artistic beauty and good light in our large cities.

In the Methodist church the gift of a center light added much to its attractiveness and she also aided there in its redecoration.

One of the most enthusiastic citizens in promoting the building of our new Shiloh Hi was Mrs. Ferrell. Her deeds of kindness and generosity will long be remembered and felt by the town and community she loved so well. She was a most devoted mother to her only son, A. T. Ferrell, the donor of our athletic field.

The funeral services were held at her late home conducted by Rev. McBroon of the M. E. church and the body laid to rest in Mt. Hope cemetery beside her husband who had predeceased her many years. The large attendance at the service, and beautiful floral offerings attested the respect of the community.

Among those in attendance out of town were Asher Discus and Mrs. Eva Bell Discus of Atwater, and Mrs. Howard Barber, Dr. Clowes, Miss Stella Clowes, Atty and Mrs. B. F. Long of Shelby, Mrs. Dora Hyde and Howard Rohrer, Jr., of Mansfield, Frank Chew, Miss Druzilla Chew, Mr. and Mrs. William Behrart and Mrs. Franklin of Ashland, Dr. A. M. Samuels of Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sherman and Robert Nimmons of Plymouth, Samuel Nimmons and Wilbur Slocum of Saginaw, Mich., Mrs. Roy Snyder of Shelby, Mrs. Elgie Sittler of Greenwich and Charles Beaver of Crestline.

COLUMBUS—The Rev. Allen H. Norcross, 82, second oldest minister in the Ohio M. E. conference died at his home near here on Monday.

P-T Contest Ends Tonite

Richland County Members Giving Play Which No Doubt Will Prove Drawing Card.

Tonight is the big night for the P. T. A. as it is the last night of the North-Side South-Side contest. Last month the Huron County members put on the program and had the most members in the audience. Tonight the Richland County members will present the program. If this program is judged by those appointed for that task to be better in variety, originality and number taking part than last month's program and if the percentage of attendance of members and bona fide parents is greater, the Richland County side may win. The committee has been working hard on the proposition. If they don't win it will not be because they didn't try. Much will depend on the support they get from members and parents. To accommodate the crowd, the meeting will be held in Hamilton Hall. Program will start at 7:30.

Campaign Is Going Over

Last Sunday began active participation in the Go-To-Church campaign. The pastors report an increased attendance particularly at the morning church services. At least it seems that we have not as many young church cards as there were people attending church. Help us find out what percentage of Plymouth people attend church and who they are.

National Guards to Buck Local Ford Outfit in Fast Game of Ball.

Tonight is the big night for the P. T. A. as it is the last night of the North-Side South-Side contest. Last month the Huron County members put on the program and had the most members in the audience. Tonight the Richland County members will present the program. If this program is judged by those appointed for that task to be better in variety, originality and number taking part than last month's program and if the percentage of attendance of members and bona fide parents is greater, the Richland County side may win. To accommodate the crowd, the meeting will be held in Hamilton Hall. Program will start at 7:30.

Friday evening, March 11, Gallica National Guard Basketball Team will be guests of the Ford Club. Followers of Basketball Ball will recall the first game of the season when Galion forced the game into two overtime periods, with the Fords finally winning 45-43. The Galion quintet assert they will have revenge. The Ford Club have confidence in their ability. Come out. See for yourselves. Games called at 8 p.m.

In a hectic struggle between the Bloomville Club, the Ford Club, and the redoubtable Ford Club, finally emerged the victor 44-2. Never before this season have the Fords experienced such inefficient officiating. Both teams played good ball but were handicapped at all points of the game by tardy and unreasonable decisions. But we understand that the officials are a native of Bloomville, which perhaps accounts for some of the new rules and regulations that the official used.

Under the auspices of Mrs. J. Howard Smith, Mrs. E. E. Balduf and Mrs. P. H. Root, as members of the committee, the Richland County division of the Parent-Teachers' Association is giving a playlet entitled "The First Day of School." The program to begin at 7:30 p.m.

They say that laughter is good for the digestion, and surely the worst dyspeptic in town should be given a surcease from his affliction if he will but attend this play.

The time of action is anywhere from 1880 to 1890 and both teacher and pupils are typical of styles and character of that period. The "extreme youth" of some of the individuals must of course be overlooked, but that they are giving of their best ability will be generally conceded.

It must be remembered that this is being given in the way of a membership drive for the P. T. Association, and any new members with their accompanying twenty-five cents will be greatly appreciated, especially since the Huron County division is exceeding the Richland County side. Otherwise the entertainment is free of any charge.

Besides the playlet, there will be music and other entertainment.

BUYS PROPERTY Jim Schrock has bought the Ateyo property and expects to divide the tract of land into building lots which will be offered for sale.

Inspect Water Tank

An experienced engineer will be secured to make an examination of the present water tank and decide whether or not the present tank can be repaired or a new one erected. This action was taken at the meeting of the Board of Public Affairs Monday evening. The village has been facing the problem of a safe water tank and the condition of the one now in use demands almost immediate action.

Other regular routine business required attention at this meeting.

A Tour Abroad

Pierre, the liveried doorman, almost fell on my neck as I alighted from the taxi that brought me from the station to my hotel on the Rivoli. The greeting from the clerk and head porter was none the less cordial. For times since 1923 I had been a guest at the hotel and the Frenchman does not forget. I had heard before reaching Paris that Americans were not welcome, that the Frenchman was sore over the war debt and hostile to American visitors. I could not have asked for a more cordial reception. It was like the return of the prodigal.

Cheap French Money.
The trouble in France is cheap money. Before the war the franc was worth about 20 cents. Today I am buying 32 francs for the dollar. On a preparar basis this would be the equivalent of $4.60. The law of economics works in strange ways. When money goes down commodity prices go up. You recall 1918 in America when the purchasing power of our dollar went down to 50 cents. That night in 1924 as she stood in the chill night air with an infant held close to her anemic breast. She is at the same time a mother and a nurse to another infant at her breast while a second child tugs at her skirts with one hand and holds out the other in an appealing way for alms. That is Paris. The woman may be a professional beggar or she may be worthy of charity. She reaps a rich harvest from Americans. She is one of thousands.

Touring Our Faces Homeward
It is 7:30 in the morning and I am gulping down a hasty breakfast of coffee, eggs and rolls while sulking-looking scrub women are mopping the dining room floor. Paris steps late. The boat train leaves at 8:15 and the station is 20 blocks distant. The taxi ordered 30 minutes ago has just drawn up to the curb. Leggers are shouted and we dash off to the station where we find another mass of humanity struggling through the gates to the boat train. There is talk and laughter. Everybody is happy because everybody you were in an American railway station. The crowd is so American that "all those years" is shouted down the line in English. The shrill little whistle shrieks, carriage doors are closed with a bang and in a few minutes Paris is left behind and the train is dashing over hill and meadow toward Cherbourg where the Majestic now crossing the channel from Southampton will meet us at 5 o'clock this afternoon. The 260 miles from Paris to Cherbourg is covered with only one stop. The boat train draws up beside the customs house, passenger's baggage is examined, luggage and embarking cards are stamped promenades. In the fall when American tourists are leaving tourists from other countries are pouring in. Paris is no longer French. The promenades are gay with costumes representing many nationalities—Nordics, Alpines, and Mediterranean—with here and there a scattering Frenchman. Take a seat at a table on the Rue de la Paix near the Grand Opera house and see the world pass every 15 minutes. It is the Times Square of Paris. Professional beggars, confidence men, bluffers and every character known to the underworld bristles elbows with you. Here an unphilosophical man would be as helpless as a baby in a lion's den. It is the world, in panorama—a fashionable promenade—a block from my hotel. Beauty lies are still seen in her face—now hard and pinched probably from the use of drugs or alcohol. I saw her there eight after that night in 1924. I saw her there in 1924 as she stood in the chill night air with an infant held close to her anemic breast. She is at the same time a mother and a nurse to another infant at her breast while a second child tugs at her skirts with one hand and holds out the other in an appealing way for alms. That is Paris. and the crowds pass on to the waiting tenders which quickly steam out to the mighty Majestic which floats at anchor beyond the breakwater. Dinner is waiting and as soon as luggage is stored in the stateroom you are ushered by your steward to the main dining room. At 8:45 begins a long blast of the white ensign and the hour of departure, wishes begin to rattle drawing in the anchors, and a few minutes the mighty ship is plunging through the murky night on its 3400 mile journey to New York. "The world is yours," said the captain of a foreign journey is when you walk up the gangplank on the homeward bound ship.

The World's Biggest Ship
Oceans have double-track ship lanes. European bound ships take the southern route and American bound ships take the northern route. Until a few years ago ambitious shippers "cut corners" by taking the shortest route both ways. The government put a stop to this. The ship on which we are returning—the Majestic, said to be the world's largest ship—is the last word in shipbuilding and so last year away the six days of fog and pass water that stretch before us learning something about this floating city. The Olympic, on which we went to Europe—British built—was 150 feet longer than any ship ever built. At that time sea competition between the British and Germans was keen and the Germans built the Derfflinger, now the Leviathan, which was 12 feet longer than the Olympic. Then came the Imperator, now the Benaragaria, 50 feet longer than the Olympic. The Majestic was known as the Bismarck. Her keel was laid in the shipyard, Hamburg, in 1913, but she was not finished until 1922. The Americans took over the Leviathan as a prize of war and the British took over the Imperator and the Majestic. But it is the Majestic in which we are interested. This huge floating palace is 556 feet long or a little longer than three city blocks. She has 2000 staterooms, 55,000 tons. Let us make a visit to the chief steward's stateroom. There are 190,000 towels, 18,000 pillow cases, 8,000 bed spreads, 11,000 sheets, 5,000 high-top socks, 5,000 shirts, 45,000 napkins, and 5,000 aprons. If stretched out end to end on a clothes line the goods of linen would reach from New York City to Miami, Florida. On each journey are consumed 75 tons of meat, 10 tons of bacon, 25 tons of coffee, 1 ton of tea, 8 tons of sugar, 3,500 tons of water and 18 tons of fuel. On 75,000 tons of cargo are being two pounds each. Stored in lockers in the chief steward's quarters are 65,000 pounds of table cutlery, 2 tons, or more than all the colored silver in circulation in the original thirteen states. The passenger capacity is 4,100, which combined with a crew of 1,100 makes a population of 5,200. The ship is a floating city. Her power is furnished by 100 Ford automobiles around the world 13 times or run one Ford continuously for 125 years at the rate of 30 miles an hour. A ship's passengers are restless and six electric elevators running all day and far into the night whip up and down between the nine steel decks. On nearly every deck are dining rooms, and restaurants or buffets and on the main decks are found beautiful palm gardens, gymnasiums for children and adults, reading rooms, billiard rooms, writing rooms, and lounges. One of the most popular places is the tiled swimming pool which carries 3,000 gallons of water. The passengers among themselves in various ways. The is a deck golf and tennis, shuffleboard, pool pitching and bridge. Pantomimes for children and concerts and social games for grown-ups are arranged by the ship's orchestra and entertainer. Bouillon and crackers are served at 11 o'clock and ten and crackers at 4 o'clock. Some form of amusement is always under way and if you tire of one it is easy to find another. The crew, who are 1,100, are enclosed wonder world. Its entire mechanism from the smallest push button to the huge delicate devices that drive it through the seas at 26 knots an hour is so finely adjusted that it is more like a living, throbbing pulsing human body than a great mass of steel and iron. It is not even guided by human hands. There is no big steering wheel. The commander sets the course and a delicate needle needle between two small, glass-covered magnetic poles holds the ship's course of steel and iron true to its course. At the slightest deviation this delicate little steering instrument sends in motion the 100 horse-power engines 600 feet to the rear of the bridge that control the huge rudder. Electric devices furnished to dial faces on the bridge while other delicate devices warn to the prow, far under the water line, flash on the bridge warnings of the approach of other ships in a dense fog. The mechanism that controls this great Leviathan is so perfect that one loses all sense of danger.

But our journey is over. It is early Tuesday morning and our ship is anchored at quayside waiting for officials of the government who will make a casual examination of the passengers as they file down the stairs in pairs. So expert are these officers that they make an accurate appraisal of a passenger at a glance. The journey back home has been very pleasant. We left Cherbourg at 9:45 Wednesday night and at 8 o'clock last night (Tuesday) we were docked at the Nantuxeek Shohas Lighthouse. My home is 200 miles from New York. I ate breakfast in Paris last Wednesday morning and tomorrow, or the following Wednesday morning, I will see that with my family at home. It is a wonderful age.

And now ends our third "Tour Abroad." I will return to my part with the thousands of readers who have accompanied me on the journey, but the touch of sadness

MUSHROOM TOWN IN TETON

COUNTRY BUILT TO FILM
"THREE BAD MEN"
"Make it greater even than 'The Iron Horse'—if you can," said William Fox to John Ford, the noted director of the Fox masterpiece of the building of the first trans-continental railroad. And with that admonition in mind, Mr. Ford took fifteen thousand people and went to the Teton Country of Wyoming, built a hick and left city in exact reproduction of the town of Custer of 1877 and began the tremendous task of picturing the thrilling motion picture story that will come forth under the intriguing title, "Bad Men."
In this mighty east there were two regiments of United States Cavalry, nine hundred Indians and laborers, 600 bison, 1000 cattle and an almost uncountable number of horses and wagons, for the story deals with the rush to acquire homes and gold claims in the Black Hills when the Sioux Indians were removed from that reservation. Those who will be privileged to see "Bad Men" at the Temple, Willard, beginning Monday, will agree with officials of the Fox West Coast Studios that Mr. Ford did exactly what Mr. Fox asked him to do—made a Western epic that is greater even than the one which gave him great fame.

KEATON FINDS BEST CAULIFLOWER EARS
California is unrivaled as a market either for cauliflower or for cauliflower ears.
Buster Keaton found conclusive proof of this fact when he surveyed the net results of a statewide search for the finest quality cauliflower ears. The famous screen comedian needed the distinctive ears, or rather the persons attached to them, for atmosphere in his latest picture, "Battling Butler," which will be shown at the Opera House, Monday and Tuesday.
Studio scouts were dispatched to the boxing centers of the state, with orders to hire the most battered pugilists they could find. Buster didn't want the modern type of boxer—the sleek-headed young mitts liners whose cleverness saves them from ring punishment—but the old-time mauler, whose idea of fighting was to fight, not to dance around the ring.
The much-battered pugilists were lined up for inspection. There were more than a score of them, every one with a complete set of cauliflower ears, broken noses and other marks of ring battles. None was ever a champion, or a near champion; they were just sluggers ten or twenty years ago, but they were ideal for the purposes for which Keaton needed them.
Many of the old-time "ham-and-egg" battlers were recruited in Los Angeles; some came from San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and other cities. All they have to do in the picture is "look tough." Keaton and several well-known younger boxers for the actual fight scenes.
"Battling Butler," with a supporting cast including Sally O'Neil, Sini Edwards, Francis McDonald, Tom Wilson, Mary O'Brien, Walter James and Edie Horton, was directed by the actor, who also has the starring role of a rich youth who turns prize fighter to win "the girl." The picture is a Joseph M. Schenck production for Metro-Goldwyn release.

"TIN CAN TOURISTS" APLENTY SHOWN IN FILM "RUBBER TIRES"
What is a "tin can tourist?" "Rubber Tires" which features Bessie Love and Harrison Ford, discloses the secret, according to Alan Hale, director of the screen version of Frank Conroy's humorous story of auto camp life.
The typical "tin can tourist" is never quite sure of his exact destination. He motors on day by day, stopping at the auto camps along the way, ever in search of new fields to conquer.
He has no responsibilities—probably all that he owns are his car and the clothes he wears. He is a sort of elevated hobo, who motors from town to town rather than use the brake beams as his predecessors did.
"Rubber Tires" deals with a family of "tin can tourists," the chief member of which is a vivacious and resourceful daughter, Bessie Love, and Mary Ellen Stack, is the brains of the family, its sole support, in fact, and her effort to pull Ma and Pa, and her big brother out of the rut, and get them to California, furnishes laughs galore throughout the picture.
See "RUBBER TIRES," at the Shelby Opera House, Saturday of this week.

INTENSELY DRAMATIC ROLE
Actress Gives Remarkable Characterization in "Stage Madness" Which Appears at Castamba Next Thursday.
The most dramatic expression of which an actor is capable is the characterization of an absolute paralytic, according to certain motion picture directors. Here the finest discretion is required.
Virginia Valli, playing the feminine lead in "Stage Madness," a Fox Scherzinger production for Victor Films had this home upon her with double emphasis during the filming of court scenes, wherein she has to sit almost motionless in a wheeled chair and register the workings of an overwrought brain. She has killed a man, but tries to shift the blame to other shoulders.
"Miss Valli's Acting," said Mr. Scherzinger, "was one of the finest things I have ever seen done before the motion picture camera. This, and her earlier scenes with Lou Tellegen, wherein she realized that, in breaking her ankles, she has lost the love of a man for whom she has sacrificed everything, furnish some of the most dramatic moments in repression."

WITTENBERG PRESIDENT HERE

Shiloh High School was greatly honored recently by the presence of President Rees Edgar Tulloss of Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, who spoke during part of the open ing morning period on "The High Value of a College Training to the Individual."

His remarks were all the more appreciated by the fact that pressure of other engagements ordinarily keep him from being able to get smaller schools on his schedule. Dr. Tulloss' presence here was made possible by Rev. McCord getting him at Shelby, bringing him here for the period of 9:00-9:20 and back to Shelby for an address to the High School there at 9:50.

Dr. Tulloss was at Shelby in connection with the Wittenberg girls Glee Club Concert which several from Shiloh attended.

OPPOSES INCREASED GAS TAX

Sufficient funds with which to carry out highway improvements may be secured by a redistribution of present revenues received from the gasoline tax and license fees without an increase of 100 per cent in the gasoline tax rate, according to President A. E. Mittendorf of The Ohio State Automobile Association.

Proving his contention Mr. Mittendorf points out that there is a balance of $1,000,000 at the present time. To this add $3,000,000 gas tax (the state's share under the redistribution plan) $3,000,000 license tax, making a total of $15,000,000 for 1927. For 1928 it is estimated by Mr. Mittendorf the gas tax will total $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 for license fees, or a total of $15,500,000. State needs for repairs and maintenance during the next two years total $25,000,000. Deduct this from the two years revenues and there is a balance of $5,500,000. This amount plus an approximate $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 federal aid would give the highway department approximately $11,000,000 for construction purposes.

It is pointed out that the balance of $1,000,000 this year would be greater both in 1927 and 1928 for many of the worst roads have been put in good condition, and no costly maintenance funds will be necessary. The Association is not opposed to a redistribution of these funds, and the members feel that such a plan would furnish ample funds for new roads during the next two years. Adding a burden of 100 per cent to automobile owners this year is held unfair, not only by members of the Ohio State Automobile Association, but more than a score of the leading newspapers of the state have expressed such an increase editorially.

President Mittendorf, of the auto association, in a letter to the president of the Ohio Good Roads Federation, who are advocating a 50 per cent increase in the gasoline tax for road construction, says that "the motorist is emphatic in his belief that the bulk of construction of roads should be levied property and not forced entirely upon him in an added gas tax. He is satisfied, however, that the burden of the entire maintenance be placed upon him. There can be no further compromise on this principle."

What Sunday is to One Man

Recently, one man remarked that Sunday to him was always a tiresome day that it dragged along from morning to night and that he was always glad when Monday came. His companion replied that he always looked forward to Sunday with great anticipation, that the hours seemed to fairly fly and that he always enjoyed it as a day of rest and relaxation.

Sunday is exactly the kind of day that the individual makes it. The man who spends Sunday as he does the other six days of the week misses the wonderful possibilities of the day. Sunday is essentially a day of whole some influences. The mind as well as the body demands rest and freedom from routine activity. The man who, of his own choice, spends Sunday in the workday clothes at toll some labor misses the meaning of the day. The man and woman, who don their "Sunday best" who attend church and are through in a few hours that is wholesome, inspiring and uplifting, get a great deal more out of the seventh day than those who give no thought to their personal appearance and to whom Sunday is just one of the seven days of the week. If Sunday does not mean as much as it ought to the church, are the fault lies with the individual.—Mansfield News.

Since we are soon to boast a turtle light in the Public Square, it would not be a good suggestion to erect a "slow" sign on the roads leading into the Square? These signs would be a material aid to motorists who are not familiar with traffic conditions in the town and no doubt will help to prevent accidents.

While no fines have been imposed on local motorists, several have received warnings as to certain traffic regulations. Wrong parking, failing to observe the stop signs, and parking without proper lights are the main violations.

It is estimated by Ben Woolst that

It would take three months of continuous sunshine to dry up the streets in town. Let's hope we have three days.

Plymouth Elevator A Community Enterprise

Under the management of Messrs. J. F. Sehringer and A. McDougal. The Plymouth Elevator has enjoyed one of the best winter seasons during its existence. The farmers in this vicinity are showing appreciation of the service the management is giving, and are becoming regular patrons of this firm.

The local elevator holds an important place among the business activities here as it gives an outlet to much farm produce and distributes to the farmers and Plymouth citizens numerous necessities.

Mr. McDougal states that this year the elevator will be in better position to give the farmers quick service in any thing they may need. Mr. McDougal also makes the statement that the farmers are studying soil conditions as never before. "The old time farmer used to just buy fertilizer on a guess-work basis, and many hundreds of dollars have been thrown away in this manner. But now, with our service of testing the soil and analyzing it down to see its needs the farmer is informed just what is needed to enrich it. In many instances it is found that only a little lime will put the soil in fine shape, and we are receiving many orders for lime, which the farmers will use this spring."

DEBATE TEAMS WIN FROM ADARIO

Clonians Score By Narrow Margin In Literary Contest

The first try-out for the new system introduced into literary programs certainly brought out interest both in participants and audience, if that was the aim. More advantage is offered for new talent to present itself in this method although it is not in order as the former. A larger range of feature is given.

Judges, Miss Waiters, Miss Gooding, Mr. Berry decided points both for individual and group work. Impersonations were of two different types entirely and both extremely well given and suited to occasion. We will hear from the Freshmen again.

The debate could not be carried over as planned as one negative speaker was not present. Individual ratings were given in place of the usual decision.

Stunts, something new in the lineup, were a diversion in guise of humor, and assuredly drew attention for assembly. The Orythian members staged an Irish satire on modern expressions taken literally. Clonians originated a scene in which a modern young lady attempts to conceal three suitors from a fourth, resulting in disaster. Members having the numeral two following signify the winner, the numeral one meaning an even split.

Annual to Be Interesting As Well As Unusual

The publication of the annual this year is going to be a money making activity in order to pull the schools out of debt, but never-the-less, this does not mean that it will not be worth while as literature. Because it is it's going to be fully as interesting as ever before, and better yet, it is within the reach of everyone as the price is only fifty cents (50c).

The annual is dedicated in honor of the Seniors of 1927 and contrary to past custom, will not be put out by them.

Besides the pictures of the graduating class of May, with their activities and nicknames, a feature will be made of our champion girls' basketball squad, and a review of the year 26-27. Then, of course, the usual, (or rather unusual) jokes (that compose the variety of the program).

All the enthusiasm and interest possible is to be brought up into the publication. Nothing can be made a success, however, without outside support, so the public must be depended on as well as all individuals in the school.

The town will be divided into districts and canvassed by students so be sure to help us by purchasing an annual that will interest you.

Under the auspices of Prof. Berry, we are determined to make this a success.

Exceptional Ability Marks Several P. H. S. Students

Herbert Phillips has shown himself to be quite a necessity in the physical class. Because of his interest along such lines, and his ability to put into practice the many things he has learned, he is marked as one of the leading men in the experiments. He prepared the apparatus and equipment that was needed for the carbon arc experiment and took charge of that different experiment.

We certainly have great hopes of Herbert making a success of himself along such lines in the future.

Jim has proved himself also adept in this line and we will probably hear of him later as an electrician or battery expert and mechanic.

Future P. H. S. Stars Play Snappy Game

Friday evening, February 25, the Junior High quintet of Plymouth defeated the Willard High Y team in one of the fastest games in their schedule this season. Although the Willard team was made up mostly of freshmen from Willard high who have had more experience on the floor than the local boys, the latter came out with the large end of a 14-10 score. The game was fast and close as the score indicates. At the half the Junior High was in the lead with a 5-4 score, in the third quarter they pulled up a lead which was never overtaken.

Each player starred in his respective place. Bachrach showed skill in getting the ball through the basket. Myers and Webber showed unusual ability in going in and getting the ball, while St. Clair and Mumea put up a good defensive battle.

The lineup was as follows:

	G	FG	TP
Myers, f	0	1	1
Webber, c	2	1	0
St. Clair, g	0	1	1

Students Devote Much Extra Time to Study

Again the time for six-weeks' exams came around.

Since the teachers refused to exempt pupils whose grades were above average, from six-weeks' exams, every student was seen to be industriously studying for the exams. With the exception of two or three classes there were tests taken in every class some time during the week.

Although the students dread to see the time for exams come, they are always a relieved crowd of pupils when tests are over.

Negative and Affirmative Best Their Opposition

That practice makes perfect and that hard work brings success, was proved last Monday night when the P.H.S. debate teams pulled in a double victory from Adario.

The question as debated: Resolved: That the Allied War Debts to the U. S. Should be Cancelled. Affirmative teams prevailed.

The negative speakers, Corrine Scott, Ruth Baldof, Emeline Fate; alternative, Wayne Sommerlot, met the opponents on the home floor.

It was a debate moderately well balanced despite the score 3-4, points on both sides clearly brought out and proved. The entire matter summed up in three statements for the negative were more effective than the seven minor advancements of affirmative and in this form were easier to maintain.

1. It is an international duty to enforce payment of these loans, from the standpoint of honor, justice, generosity and policy.

2. The debtor nations are economically able to pay.

3. The advantages of non-cancellation.

The second speaker of the affirmative would rank as the highest scorer of his stand. But as far as presentation of points the Plymouth debaters out-ranked opposition; Corrine Scott leading the score.

The affirmative team of P.H.S. succeeded in a 2-1 victory over Adario debating on the latter floor.

Team members for the affirmative were Betty Bachrach, Grace Dickson, and Martina Bowman, with Weldon Cornell as alternative.

The arguments of this team were based on three main points:

1. We are morally bound to cancel the debts.

2. The countries need cancellation and America's prosperity affords it.

3. Cancellation is to our own best interests.

The Adario negative based their arguments on eight points which were much less effective than the fewer number which the P. H. S. team used.

The high scorer for the affirmative was Betty Bachrach, while Alden Paine was the most forceful speaker for the negatives.

We are proud of our teams and we feel that we have the chance to win more debates in the future.

MOUNTAINS DO CHARLESTON

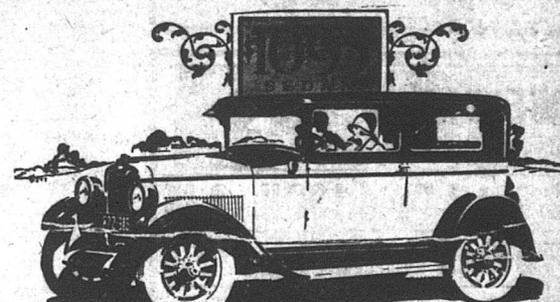

The mountains began to do a Charleston while Tom Mix had his company in the desert making scenes for "No Man's Gold." Fox Films' version of J. Allan Dunn's widely read novel, which will be seen for a two days run at the Temple Theatre, Willard, commencing Friday.

The outfit had just set down to luncheon. The tables were in Cathedral Canyon, in the shade of an overhanging ledge of rock some 300 feet above. The chuck wagon had just started to give out its savory feast and the crew of fifty-three with Mix were hungry.

There was a rumbling of the earth, the tables heaved like a ship in a storm and the mountains started to do a Charleston.

The men cast a wild look around and when the overhanging ledge of a large rock was split, there was a scramble toward the desert.

Mix, Eva Novak, Frank Campau, and Harry Gripp remained seated and above. The chuck wagon had just watched the exodus with amusement.

International SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By Keith L. Brooks, Managing Editor 'King's Business'
 March 13, 1927—Making the World Christian
 Lesson Text—Matt. 28:16-20; Acts 16:6-15

"Making The World Christian" it will be clear to the Bible student that his commission is not to "Make the World Christian" in the sense of "social salvation," an idea common today, but to go into all the world making disciples for Christ and teaching believers the truths He imparted.

We are not expected to bring the whole world to Christ, but Christ to the whole world. We are witnesses (Luke 24:28) in an age when God's divine purpose is to "take out from the world a people for His name" (Acts 18:14). Our work, therefore, is evangelizing the unsaved and edifying believers.

Our Lord's parables in Matthew 13 show clearly that we are warranted in expecting at any time in this age the entire elimination of tares from the world field. The tares will be enclosed both good and bad when Christ comes with all His angels.

We have never known of so much as one small hamlet where all have been converted. The average length of life for the world is said to be only about thirty-three years. This means that the entire population of earth passes off three times in each century. More than two-thirds of those never hear the Gospel even in this day of printing press, radio and record transmission. It is not likely that this population will be overtaken by the preaching of the Gospel.

It is imperative that we obey our Master's call, and strive to place our way of life before men.

This brings before us the whole question of the heathen. Are they really lost? If not, why do we go to them?

Rom. 1:19, 20 shows that God is knowable. He has written the fact of His existence as the divine Designer and Creator upon the face of the universe and in the most minute things in nature. Well knowing this in their hearts, men refuse to seek Him, become vain in their thinkings (Rom. 1:21), glorify Him not; professing themselves to be wise, they become fools, and even change the glory of God into images.

Not only are they answerable to God because of the light of nature, but God has given to them the light of conscience (Rom. 2:14-15). By virtuous acts which they sometimes do (v. 14), by natural operations of conscience (v. 15), and by reasonings with one another, whereby they excuse or accuse one another (v. 15), they give evidence that they have a law of right and wrong within them, even though they have never had the light of the Scriptures.

The heathen perish (v. 12) through unfaithfulness to a law which they possess, not alone because the Gospel of Christ has not yet reached them.

They are moral beings, yet do not live up to their own sense of right and wrong.

Darwin admitted that the moral sense in man, even in degradation, is an unbridgeable chasm separating him from the animal. He is a responsible creature.

"The pagans in the heart of Africa," said Dan Crawford, "are sinning against a flood of light."

Charles Scott of China, said: "I have never met a heathen living up to his light, and furthermore they know they are not."

Suppose one did! Could his pagan morality be made to satisfy the claims of a holy God? We cannot say so (Acts 4:12; John 3:18, 36; 14:6.) We can believe, however, that the sending forth of every missionary is the answer of the groping prayer of some honest heathen heart. Missionaries have often told of discoveries such upon their entrance to lands to which God had sent them.

Many ask—"If the heathen have lights, why not leave them alone?" Simply because they have no hope of salvation as they are, and because they may rise up in the judgment against us who have found through the Gospel of God's love the one way to bright rescue. We ourselves would be heathen but for the Gospel having been brought to us.

Furthermore, our light, the word of Christ, tells us to go to them. If they are punished for not living up to their lights, what will be our condemnation if we do not live up to our increased light?

We cannot escape the commission of Christ. "All power" is behind it (Matt. 28:18); "all nations" are before us (v. 19); "all things" which Christ taught His disciples make up the message which we are to bear (v. 19); "all things" which He has promised to stand by those who obey His call. These are the four "all" of missions.

Our lesson committee not only placed before us a passage giving the church's permanent marching orders, but one from Acts 16:6-15, showing how those who obey this call will have the Holy Spirit's guidance.

Paul, Silas and Timothy were not more clearly led in their missionary travels than are many devout modern missionaries. They were forbidden by the Holy Ghost to preach in Asia! (Acts 16:4.)

God sometimes guides by hindrances. If He does not desire you to go to a foreign field, He will put plenty of bars in your way. Those who jump the bars and go are courting failure; those who stay at home when the bars are down will find nothing but misery at home.

God orders our steps (Psa. 37:23), also our steps. He may guide us clearly by the closed door as the open one. Why should the Spirit forbid a man to preach the Gospel anywhere? God knows the opportune time better than we do (Acts 19:1, 8, 10, 28, 27.) It is not enough to be in a good place doing a worthy work. We must be in the place to which God has called us and at God's time.

A vision comes to Paul—a man of Macedonia calls him to come over and help (v. 9). It is recognized as God's call (v. 10), and the vision is obeyed.

The man of Macedonia turned out to be a woman—not a native of Macedonia at all but of Thyatira in Asia.

The ship in which they sailed for Philippi had in it the seeds of all that has developed in Europe. A woman, Lydia, (v. 14) was the first convert in Europe, the continent in which Christianity was destined to win its greatest victories.

It was an epoch-making meeting on that quiet river bank (v. 13). The Gospel stole upon Europe like the dawn. It began in a woman's prayer meeting.

Let us not despise the day of small beginnings. Let us put our best into the little opportunities that lay before us, put his best into a talk at a group prayer meeting on a river bank. Jesus put His best into a talk with a woman at a well.

Who can tell what may spring out of our obedience to a vision from God? Though we may not ourselves go to the foreign field, we may be the means of leading to Christ some other person who will herald the Gospel to a whole continent.

PITH AND POINT

Of every dollar asked for Christ work, we spend 98 cents for home work, two for foreign.

We treat Christ the way we treat the heathen.

We are saved because of past missionary efforts. What about the coming generation?

We will never be able to carry out Christ's world-wide commission with our spare cash.

If God wants you on the mission field, neither your money nor your prayers will prove an acceptable substitute.

We treat Christ the way we treat the heathen.

God sometimes guides by hindrances. If He does not desire you to go to a foreign field, He will put plenty of bars in your way. Those who jump the bars and go are courting failure; those who stay at home when the bars are down will find nothing but misery at home.

God orders our steps (Psa. 37:23), also our steps. He may guide us clearly by the closed door as the open one. Why should the Spirit forbid a man to preach the Gospel anywhere? God knows the opportune time better than we do (Acts 19:1, 8, 10, 28, 27.) It is not enough to be in a good place doing a worthy work. We must be in the place to which God has called us and at God's time.

A vision comes to Paul—a man of Macedonia calls him to come over and help (v. 9). It is recognized as God's call (v. 10), and the vision is obeyed.

The man of Macedonia turned out to be a woman—not a native of Macedonia at all but of Thyatira in Asia.

The ship in which they sailed for Philippi had in it the seeds of all that has developed in Europe. A woman, Lydia, (v. 14) was the first convert in Europe, the continent in which Christianity was destined to win its greatest victories.

It was an epoch-making meeting on that quiet river bank (v. 13). The Gospel stole upon Europe like the dawn. It began in a woman's prayer meeting.

Let us not despise the day of small beginnings. Let us put our best into the little opportunities that lay before us, put his best into a talk at a group prayer meeting on a river bank. Jesus put His best into a talk with a woman at a well.

Who can tell what may spring out of our obedience to a vision from God? Though we may not ourselves go to the foreign field, we may be the means of leading to Christ some other person who will herald the Gospel to a whole continent.
