CAR SKIDS INTO TRAIN AT NEW HAVEN CROSSING EARLY SUNDAY EVENING

The probable loss of an eye, and other injuries to Marjorie Harriman, of Willard, is the result of a skid into the side of a freight train Sunday night at the Baltimore and Ohio railroad crossing west of New Haven. Ed Harriman, driver of the automobile, his wife, two daughters, Marjorie, 7, and Alberta, 18, and son Raymond, 12, were returning to Willard from Newfield, and approached the moving train without noticing it. In an attempt to avoid a direct collision Harriman turned the car and skidded sideways into the side of the train. ## 85TH BIRTHDAY ON NOVEMBER 11

Mrs. Augustus Spear Begins 86th Year On Armistice Day With Family Dinner

Reaching the eighty-fifth milestone on Tuesday, November 11th, Mrs. Augustus Spear began the eighty-sixth year with a smile. This elderly Plymouth lady, so well known to the residents here, celebrates her anniversary on the day recently set aside as a legal holiday, Armistice Day.

On this day of the year, it has been the custom of her children to gather at the Plymouth home of her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. John Flemming, to honor her with a family dinner, and to entertain her many friends with open house.

Mrs. Spear's health at the present time, however, did not permit a large gathering. She has been under the care of Dr. Fleming, and a trained nurse, Mrs. C. Helper, of Pittsburgh, and is gradually gaining more strength.

Her birth is recorded in Fuentenrode, Kreis-Alfeld, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, in the year 1845. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Lipman Blainstein, with their family, journeyed to America when the little daughter was nine years of age. The family home was then established in Plymouth, and the children knew this country as their only home. Mrs. Spear and a sister of Chicago, Mrs. Betty Schonberg, are the only remaining members of the group. In the year 1867 her marriage with Solomon Spear was solemnized on January 6. The entire community extends the wish of many more anniversary mileposts.

HOUSE NUMBERS FOR PLYMOUTH

Gleaning Numbers To Adorn Door Fronts, So Says Council in Ordinance Just Passed

Plymouth citizens will soon be gleaning by numbers. Not as convicts, however, but as the owners of numbered houses. An ordinance has been passed by the village council requiring all houses and buildings "on any of the streets, lanes, alleys, avenues, or fronting on any public grounds" to be numbered within one hundred and twenty days after the same is in effect.

Streets running east and west will be numbered evenly on the south side, and will have the odd numbers on the north side. North and south streets will have even numerals on the west side, and the odd numbers on the east side. The first number on each street is to be number 10.

Numbering will be done by the clerk of the village, according to the plans of the village engineer. A separate number is required for each store room or residence from the square north to the corporation line south to Greenlawn cemetery, and on the remaining streets to the corporation limit. Numbers must be not less than two by three inches in size for each digit, or on plates not less than three by six inches, and must be placed in a conspicuous place. The required numbering is not done after notification, the work will be done by the clerk, and charged as additional tax upon the property.

THE CROSS-COUNTRY MEET

It was very cold that night! Yes, sir, very cold, when the Mansfield High plodders defeated Plymouth High by a score of 40 to 15. The Plymouth boys put up a good fight but it was not good enough. Here is the order that the boys finished:
Mansfield—1, Cash; 2, Shading; 3, Markley; 4, Sevak; 5, Janzen.
Plymouth—1, Long; 2, Briggs; 3, Bachrach; 4, Moore; 5, Biddinger.

Students Secure Data on Science

THE RHEA

A rhea is a large bird which is popularly called the "South American ostrich," because of its similarity to the ostrich. Scientists note so many points of difference, however, that in recent years they are inclined to place the two in distinct families, calling the rhea "Rheidae" (re-i-de).
The ostrich has two toes, without claws; the rhea three, with claws. The rhea's head and neck are not so bare of feathers; it has wings, which are, however, very small and of no value for flight. Finally, this bird is only about half the size of an ostrich, for it stands not more than three feet in height.
The rhea is not found north of the equator, but is numerous in the plains of Southern Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, and Northern Argentina. It is of some commercial importance; its plumes, much inferior to ostrich plumes, are made into brushes and its skin is manufactured into a native rug of the jolly polygamists who appropriates two or more females; the latter lay their eggs in the same nest, and when the number reaches twenty or twenty-five the male assumes the task of hatching them. The birds live in communities of a dozen to twenty, and eat worms, snails, berries, and anything small in the animal and vegetable kingdoms. The local name of the rhea is rander (nan-doo).
Donald Fetters.

THE LIFE OF A FROG

The frog first begins in an egg which is inside of a jelly like substance. He is blind and hasn't any legs or mouth. All he has is a sucking pad by which to hold onto a water weed. He has gills like a fish by which to breathe.
While he hasn't any mouth he lives on the jelly like substance which surrounds him. Then after a while he gets a mouth and goes on a diet of weeds, and next he gets teeth which enable him to chew. By this time he is a tadpole without a tail, and then very soon he develops a tail which he uses to swim with.
Hidden inside of the tail is two legs or beginnings of legs and soon they grow out from the tail and they have five toes which are webbed together. There are front legs growing also but they do not come so soon for they are covered with the skin that covers the gills.
The frog now gets ready to breathe dry air so his gills disappear and he develops lungs. At two months old he can breathe out of water or in water.
Next his mouth changes as also his heart, lungs and food digesting organs must change also. Now he can't eat because his mouth is changing so he lives on his tail. By a channel of blood muscles it is carried through his system. At three months he is a full grown frog and is ready to live out in the air. In order to get on land he must jump out of the water. In shallow water it is simple but in deep water he must crawl out, so nature afforded him sucking pads on his feet so he can climb.
In winter the frog digs into the mud and closes his eyes and mouth and quits breathing except only a little through his skin.

NEW USES FOR HELIUM

Helium, that rare gas, used for keeping America's huge airships aloft, was a few years ago obtained only at great expense and in small quantities. It is now available in commercial quantities and scientists have set to work to find new uses for it. The peculiar properties of the gas, they say, make it valuable for use in many ways, for the preservation of food, for heating and cooling as in a circulating medium, instead of air in drying systems. They also suggest that it can be used for the treatment of diseases of the lungs and blood.

SCIENCE CLUB

The Science Club met Wednesday, Nov. 5. The meeting was called to order by the president. At the last meeting the rule was made that all members who did not do something every three weeks were automatically dropped from the club. A motion was made and carried that everyone was to bring what he was working on to the next meeting, Nov. 26.

Her: "I'd like to see something cheap in a straw hat."
Water: "Certainly, sir, try this one on sir, and the mirror on your left."

BULLETIN BOARDS

Down at the Plymouth High School there are five bulletin boards; two are educational and three are for reference.
The first one is in the science room; the pupils out interesting pictures of science from the newspapers and magazines and bring them to school for the bulletin boards. Good scientific drawings are also placed on the board by Mr. Murlin, the teacher. The assignment for each day of the week is also put here so the students don't have to ask the assignment for the next day.
The second bulletin board is in the Latin room, different pictures are also placed on this board.
The third bulletin board is in the study hall. The names of the pupils whose grades are high enough for certain privileges for the six weeks are placed on this board. These students may read the magazines in the school library.
The two bulletin boards in the corridors tell what is going to happen that day. On Wednesday a slip is posted on the board to tell what clubs are going to meet that day. The time of the boys' and girls' basketball practice are also put here. The upstairs corridor bulletin board has the name of the teacher of each class, the time, and the room.

These bulletin boards are a great help to the school and save the teachers answering a lot of questions.

"THE SKATING PARTY"

One day last winter Billy Haysseed and Johnny Correl decided to go out skating.
They started across the fields to a river, well known by the boys. On their way they passed Jim Black's house.
This boy was an enemy of the other boys. Jim happened to see them and shouted: "Where are you rascals going?"
They replied, "Oh, we're going skating."
Jim had also planned to go skating this same afternoon, with some of his friends. He didn't want these two boys to go, so he decided to work out some kind of a plan to make the boys go home.
Billy and Johnny went on to the river. They sat down to put on their skates and then went out on the river. Billy said, "Let's race. I'll start at one end and you can start at the other."
Johnny agreed to this, so he started towards the other end. Just as he was about to sit down on a log to rest, a strange sound came from behind a tree. Very much frightened he jumped to his feet. Then another sound came from the same spot, followed by a rustling in the leaves and sticks. Then snowballs commenced to glide across the river, from somewhere in the distance. Johnny, being a little boy, was very frightened so he ran to his partner and they started heading for Billy was a little braver than Johnny, so he hid behind a tree, to find out what made the noise.

These Jim and the other boys jumped out on the ice and started to skate. They came to a place where there was a sign which read, "Danger." They thought they knew too much to pay attention to that, so they went right on. The ice started to crack, and one boy fell in. The rest were so close that the ice broke under their feet too. Very angry they scrambled out, soaked with the ice water.
Billy jumped from behind a tree and shouted, "Who is going to go skating today?"
