One of the first things to consider when you are planning this year's Victory Garden is the soil. The better the soil the better the crop and this year our crops must provide for our day-to-day table needs as well as for canning and preserving whenever the space permits.

If the vegetable garden is under a cover crop of winter rye of course you will do nothing about it until the garden is plowed in early spring.

If the garden is uncovered it's a good idea to work it as long as the ground is open. Dig in compost, leaves and manure and let the ground stand in rough ridges. The freezing and thawing will do much to break up the soil and improve the condition of the soil. The spring rains will tend to even and settle the ground so that when it is time to come to prepare for planting the earth is in a mellow, workable condition.

The soil must be well prepared before you put in the seeds. If your garden is large enough to be plowed there's little doubt but that the ground will be well "turned over." But if the garden is to be spaded be sure that this is done deeply with the top turned under. Work with hoe and rake to break up large lumps. Then spread with plant food most suitable to your soil conditions. Now is the time to put on lime, too. Work the fertilizer in by raking and continue to rake until the earth is finely pulverized. Don't just scratch over the surface but work as deep as the seeds will be planted and two or three inches more. Let the first roots of the plants reach this fine powdery soil but lumps will hold moisture and strengthen the root growth.

Scowp the amount of seeds required for a certain number of seeds needed is puzzling. Many seed catalogues give the amount of seeds required for a certain number of seeds. Carrots for example require an ounce of seed to sow 300 feet while a pocket will usually sow about 30 feet. A pound of bush lima beans is calculated to plant about 150 feet of row.

So measure your garden, consider the size of your family and your plans for canning and buy the seed accordingly. We are urged to buy only what we need but no more.

In order to avoid such a bottleneck as having vegetables pile up on you too fast to handle and in order to prolong the season for table use don't sow all your seeds at one time. Wait until the plants are through the ground before you make the second planting of such vegetables as green beans. Vegetables of early and late varieties such as peas and sweet corn can of course be planted about the same time.

Use the Simplified form 1040 A-You can get it NOW from your Employer or Your Local INTERNAL REVENUE OFFICE

The Federal Treasury is offering again this year to people whose 1942 income was $3,000 or less, a simplified income tax form which may be filled out in five minutes or less. This is known as Form 1040-A. It may be used by any taxpayer whose $3,000-or-less income came wholly from wages or salary, dividends, interest or annuities.

Last year when this time-saver was first introduced, over 10,000,000 individual income tax returns were filed on it. People who had previously spent hours working over the regular report forms were enthusiastic about the ease and speed with which they could now complete their annual income tax chore.

This year, with an estimated 12 million new taxpayers filing for the first time, the Bureau of Internal Revenue confidently expects that nearly twenty million taxpayers will benefit from this short-cut way, saving in the aggregate millions of hours of time and innumerable headaches.

Incidentally, this simplified Form 1040-A is also a boon to the Internal Revenue Bureau, for it greatly reduces the amount of time previously spent with so many millions of taxpayers in answering questions and helping them make out their returns.

A glance at the picture shows how quick and simple Form 1040-A makes this income tax filing job. There are only six things for Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer to do; write down their names, address and occupation, the names of their dependents, the amount of income received during the year; the amount of deduction allowed on account of dependents; check the square that shows their family status (whether married or single, etc.) Then they simply read from the form exactly what their tax is, and write it down on the return.

That's all there is to it, and it is over in a few short minutes. Then the taxpayer just signs, makes his payment, and the job is done. This year the return does not even have to be notarized, Congress having decided in its tax-streamlining program that people should be spared that bother and expense.

This form has no entries for deductions, since average deductions including the earned income credit, have been allowed for in figuring the taxes in the table. It is to be noted that people whose legal deductions are unusually large would probably pay less tax by using the longer Form 1040. But for most people in the $3,000-and-under bracket, Form 1040-A is not only a time saver, but a money saver, too.

In spite of the fact that during the last two years the Internal Revenue Bureau has increased its personnel, they will undoubtedly be rushed and crowded, as March 15th approaches, by the great increase in taxpayers necessitated by war-time high employment and wartime low tax exemptions. So people who file early will be doing themselves a favor, as well as making a real contribution to the smooth working of the national tax machinery. Blankets are ready now and may be obtained from all local Internal Revenue offices, also at most banks and at many places of employment.

Deadline for filing returns is March 15, 1943, and returns coming in late subject the tardy filer to a penalty. So on every count, it's smart to file early and avoid the rush.

LETTERS from the BOYS IN SERVICE

Dear Tommy:

I think it is about time I write you a letter and let you know that I haven't forgotten about you. I sure will be glad when I can get back to stay. This army life gets rather tiresome after so long a time. I was glad to hear that (Dobbin) Montgomery, Delmar Nesbitt and some more of the boys got out where my kid brother, Richie, is located. I think that will really cheer him up. I am also glad to hear that he is looking good and getting along OK.

Well, the weather out here is swell. Rather windy, but it is pretty warm most of the time. The fellows out here seem to be in good spirit most of the time, but all are anxious for this thing to get over so they can return home to Mom and Dad.

You know, Tommy, the high altitude out here makes most of us rather lazy. So I will say so long for now. Wishing to hear from all soon. As ever a friend to all.

the water point for nice cold showers. But that is better than no shower at all. Now they have it fixed so we get to Yuma, Ariz., and take hot showers. That makes a person feel one hundred per cent better.

Out here on the desert we sleep in tents and they have even come to a tent—when we look out all you can see is thousands of tents, so you can understand how many men are in this desert camp.

Next week we start for a month's hike that it would be impossible. For instance, last week we were up around in the mountains in a convoy across the country. By that we travel four abreast and about 30 yards apart. We went through some creek bottoms that were full of sand. They were like the banks down at the old stone quarry. Others were so that the front wheels would go into it and before the eight back wheels got half way down the front was coming up, but it sure is fun.

There are different divisions out here—tank destroyer, infantry outfit, tank outfits and us—the coast artillery. So far we have been sent out to see if we can keep up with the infantry with our big 40MM guns and we have done so, very much. We have been complimented on such good performance and conduct. That helps us a lot. We are the Third Coast Artillery outfit that has been out here and keep up with the infantry outfits. But back at Ft. Bliss, Texas, we were tops in the AATC and have showed them here that we are not tin soldiers.

I have been transferred from B Battery to Headquarters Battery and from a PFC to Corporal. The rating came out this week in our range paper. It seems funny to be called a corporal instead of a private.

Well, it is about time to get to work so I will close for this time. I am fine and have gained quite a bit of weight since my induction.

Yours truly,
Corporal Harlow Kendig.

EYESIGHT IMPAIRED

W. C. Mead, manager of the Mansfield district of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., and well known in Plymouth, has had the misfortune of having his eyesight greatly impaired. Mr. Mead has suffered from an eye affliction for a number of years and recently underwent an operation at a Columbus hospital with the hope that he would receive some benefit. It was found that both eyes had become affected and that nothing can be done to improve the sight.

LEAVES ON TRIP

Mrs. Fred Schneider received a telegram Friday from her son, Roger Miller, that he was leaving immediately from an East Coast port on another trip. Roger is in the merchant marines and expects to be gone for a period of six months or more.

OUR VALENTINE PARTY
 On Feb. 12, the second year Latin class was entertained by the first year. They were given a lovely Valentine party and a Valentine exchange.

The centerpiece on the guest table was a Valentine box beautifully decorated with red and white crepe paper made up by Virginia Kirkendall, Martha Miller and Leatrice Whitcomb. There were red twisted streamers from the ceiling terminating at the guest table. The name cards were Latin Valentines from Miss West in which was written these Latin words: "Improbe Amor. Quid Non Mortalia Pectora cogis!"

Favors were little nut cups with hearts on the outside and filled with candy. For refreshments there was whipped jello made by Dorothy Guthrie and Mary Benedict. There were small cakes set in the center and fastened to the cakes with toothpicks with little hearts on one end. We also had appropriate Valentine napkins.

While we were eating, Donald Smith and Darrell Hudson passed out Valentines. When we were through eating, Jerlean Lykins acted as chairman for the program. Latin words were then said out by different students of the first year.

Some of the words that were acted out were: pence, axillium, caligaster, imigaster, and others. Donna Garrett and Donald Smith favored the group by giving reports on Latin characters. Doris' report was on Venice and Mars and Donald was on the goddess of love. Miss West had a hard time trying to tell us that the end Cupid kissed his girl. It seems that Donald is a little embarrassed by the subject. Maybe he's just bashful!

THE SNOOPER !!
 All of you who wondered what the weird and disconcerting noises were that came from the study hall one day last week will be interested in knowing that these same sounds were only what is commonly known as "snoring." They were emitted from Raymond Willett's vicinity, too. The moral to this story is "Sleep when you are supposed to and avoid any unnecessary embarrassment."

Flash! As Dorothy Kallen so ably expresses it, a new heartliarity barrage has come into being at Old Shiloh High. None other than our old woman-hater, Jim Doney! The object of his affections—Avis Miller.

Have you seen the proud and illuminated countenance which Joe McQuate is sporting lately? He is emitting from Raymond Willett's vicinity, too. The moral to this story is "Sleep when you are supposed to and avoid any unnecessary embarrassment."

Flash! As Dorothy Kallen so ably expresses it, a new heartliarity barrage has come into being at Old Shiloh High. None other than our old woman-hater, Jim Doney! The object of his affections—Avis Miller.

Anyone looking for a good excuse for being out late, please see Betty Seaman. She has a new idea on the subject. For example, last Sunday night a train stopped on the tracks which Shortie had to cross go home. He had to wait until they left. Unique, isn't it? The catch is—it didn't leave!

Here's a tip for anyone who would like to get even with Miss West for a bawling out on a low grade. All you have to do is bring on the mice and you'll have her eating out of your hand—in fact, you'll probably have your hands quite full when she faints.

Miss Richards is in Cleveland last week-end to play at the wedding of a friend.

HOME ON LEAVE
 Corporal Keith Gooding of Camp Bowler is spending a ten-day furlough with his wife and son at the Cramer home, called here by the death of D. W.anner. Being delayed by two to three weeks illness, he is leaving at home and expects to return to Texas the middle of this week, where he is chaplain's assistant in the 64th Medical Corps.

HERE LADY, FIND OUT IF YOU ARE REALLY IN LOVE!
 Judith Chase, quis expert, writing in the American Weekly with this Sunday's (Feb. 21) issue of the Detroit Sunday Times, offers a questionnaire through which girls can, by self-appraisal, find out whether they are in love by merely answering a series of questions. The name of Sunday's feature is "Are You Really in Love?"

Police Blowing

Carrollus McGillicuddy, better known to Americans as Camille Mack, veteran president-manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, blew out the candles on his birthday cake at the celebration of his 60th birthday, in Philadelphia, yesterday when anybody in the baseball world attended the tribute to the grand old man of the diamond.

Mark lifted his head. "No, I'm not there by any chance. I don't know her, Mrs. Lynn."

His hostess looked perplexed. "But she should be your cousin; there are so few Bryans. You must come in on the Tom Bryan side?"

Mark caught the gleeful malice in the other woman's eyes.

"No," he replied flatly, "not on any side. You're mistaken, Mrs. Lynn. I'm not related to the Utica Bryans."

She was a little taken aback. But a woman of the world passes such things as a lightbulb during conversation swiftly, though her eyes flashed one keen question at his candidly in his chair. "A Pam who spoke softly to Mark."

"I'm so glad! Those Utica Bryans don't do you any good!"

"I might be a hop out of kin, you know," he answered quickly, and then he added, "I'm not a Bryan at all; what then?"

"But it's your name!" she laughed, as if at a huge joke.

"But it wasn't my name?"

She lifted her shining eyes, misty in them. "What was it, Juliet?"

"A rose by any other name?"

"Do you remember about that?" he asked tartly.

"The play?" she laughed outright. "Of course I do!"

"With Romeo it was love at first sight," she said.

Again the flame that played in his eyes held hers. She drew a gasp of breath and he gazed desperately to the conventions. She did not know that prison had made a man of him; she knew he was wooing her, and he knew he had no right to do it. The dinner ended long ago, but he remembered the other guests. There was music and a little dancing again. Burleson might have interrupted the party. Pam taught Mark some dancing lessons in the deserted ballroom. Late in the evening he carried out his will, by Burleson. Mrs. Lynn was in the drawing room.

"You might have stayed too late but for Mrs. Lynn's repulsion. She sent him away, still graciously. If he was not Utica Bryan he was something of a man. She was wrong an enough under her worldliness to know she knew what she was doing. She had told him her days at home."

"But, of course, Archie will bring you a check for the money," she said.

Pam said nothing. She had told him all these things already, and she knew that he was riding her pet horse in the park mornings. This was something Archie would not want. Burleson and Banks there! It was after he left the house that Mark had had a quarter of an hour's work there as an imposter, on the wager of two worthless boys, under an assumed name. It was a fine piece of work, but he was an ex-cop. Given that, and they found him out, he would deserve something worse than mere expulsion.

"A man does mad things when he's in love," he said.

But it troubled him. He tramped the streets, thinking of it, wretched that he had let himself get into it when he went in search of Teddy Banks. He wanted his own clothes, he wanted his own cap, he wanted to report to the young scapegrace.

He found Banks alone and sulky—sitting on a backless suite, thick with cigarette smoke.

"I won," said Mark, beginning to talk. "I was right in my guess."

Banks stared at him, biting his cigarette. "Archie's been here, ripping mad. What the deuce did you do there, anyway?"

"Got asked to dinner. Did he pay my wages?"

Have You Bought a Bond?

TODAY and TOMORROW
 By DON ROBINSON

MANPOWER . . . waste
 A man who works in an airplane factory is in such need of manpower, why doesn't it give us a full day's work to do?

He then went on to tell a story which I have heard dozens of times recently—a story of illness, of time killing, of tape, of hampering union regulations in a factory on which the American nation is depending for war supplies.

He blamed the manufacturer for taking on hordes of new men when those already employed hadn't done a good day's work for months. He blamed government inefficiency for permitting a shortage of materials and parts in a plant which was geared for fast production. And he blamed the unions for protecting their members against imaginary abuses when the men themselves were champing at the bit waiting for a chance to work longer and harder than they were getting.

The story of this one plant, when multiplied by the hundreds which are known to be facing the same situation, indicates that perhaps the largest source of new manpower in this country is the waste-hours of the men who are now employed as war workers.

MEN . . . hoarding
 When we read the figures on the amazing amount of war equipment which has been produced during the past 18 months, we are naturally demanding to ask for even greater results. But if we had data on the capacity of our present war workers to fill all the need, the present production figures would be dwarfed by comparison.

It is inadvisable to attempt to build the vast war industry we now have in this country practically overnight. It is necessary to take full advantage of the skills of workers already trained before worrying too much about the training of new workers.

Manufacturers, who have tremendous stocks of raw materials, cannot be blamed too severely for hoarding workers when they know they will need them when they get into full production. But the government can insist that these skilled men be moved to the places where they can do the most good now.

The duty of the manpower commission is not just to find new men for jobs but to make sure that every war worker is in a spot where he can get the most out of it.

WASHINGTON . . . idleness
 Government employees tell me: "If you think manpower is wasted in industry, you ought to see Washington."

They say that thousands of young men and women, who believed they were doing a needed service to their country by answering the call for government workers, have finally left Washington in disgust because they couldn't see being paid to do nothing when their country's life was at stake.

If this condition is true, and I haven't met anyone who worked in Washington yet who doesn't think it would appear that another excellent source for the government's manpower commission to draw on is the government's own ranks. A lot of the clerks and stenographers in Washington would be glad to take a vacation from loafing to the summer and renew their health and their morale by our nation's busy farms.

When the idle population in the government offices gets large, and when the present workers in war industry are doing a full day's work, then it will be a lot easier to get to work a needed service to the country by answering the call for government workers, have finally left Washington in disgust because they couldn't see being paid to do nothing when their country's life was at stake.

CHAPTER IV
SYNOPSIS
 Released from prison after serving fifteen years for a murder he didn't commit, Fred goes to the office of a lawyer named Fossick to collect a legal fee. Fossick tells him he will wait until he can get an invitation to a party at his old home. Fred goes to the party with Archie Landon. Mark is to get into his old home. Archie introduces him to his hostess, Mrs. Lynn, who says she doesn't know him. Fred goes to the party with Archie Landon. Mark is to get into his old home. Archie introduces him to his hostess, Mrs. Lynn, who says she doesn't know him.

"With Romeo it was love at first sight."

Teddy nodded. "He did, and I was like to murder me!"

"Come, what happened? Tell me! It's bestly to be shut out of the party and get a ragging from a chucklehead."

"Nothing happened. I was well received. I was invited to dinner."

"By the great lady herself? Teddy slapped his knee, laughing up to the hilt. "What did I say? Any fool would have seen that I got my money out of Archie."

"He was over this again and again, wasn't it? Mark said, with disgust of him, soiled by the thought that this boy had opened the door to love for him, changed back into his own rough suit, flinging the borrowed railing down. The violence of his action drew Teddy's eyes."

"Archie says you threw back five hundred dollars. Why?"

"You'd better ask me why I took it in the first place," Mark retorted bitterly. "I think I was mad. Some remnant of conscience stirred in young Banks."

"He called after me tonight!" he called after him thickly. "Only for tonight; that's flat, remember—you can't go back there, you know!"

Mark thought the boy had been drinking again. He did not answer.

He shut the door on him and went back to walk the streets all night. He thought even an exhilarating freedom in doing it.

Presently a glow shined in the eastern sky, and the skyscrapers were blocked out in strange pyramidal shapes. The city lights went out, and the dawn was nine o'clock when Mark Grant, sleepless and breakfastless, went to the office. He knew he would receive his aunt's legacy. It would give him the means to live, and he remembered the relief at that thought yesterday; today it meant exile!

Fossick showed scant courtesy, but the money was intact—thanks to the little lawyer's scrupulousness. "I wouldn't have let her leave it to you if I'd had my way," he said bluntly. "Come over to the courthouse; there are formalities."

pers on his desk impatiently; he was not one to admit he had been touched by anything.

"Better go west and live it down," he advised dryly; "no easy thing when you find your twenty thousand all right. I suppose when you find your twenty thousand," he grinned—"you'll set up your claim to the Barton fortune."

"Yes," said Mark slowly—"then I might—but not until then. Good-day, Mr. Fossick."

The lawyer nodded curtly, but he turned in his chair and followed the young man with his eyes. For the first time a doubt had stirred in him. Plenty of innocent people suffered, but what? This boy had been fairly tried. It was a plain murder for money. He was hard up at the time, and he was his uncle's heir. Fossick pursed his lips. He had not tried to claim the fortune yet; he was rolling up; but would—of course he would! He nodded to himself and went back to his work. He had always believed Mark guilty.

Mark had set his face westward. It seemed the natural destiny of men such as he. Perhaps this boy was gone westward which used to be termed "out West," by easterners, was no longer valid. There were no longer great opportunities for rehabilitation; a man could scarcely expect in these days, to get out of the past of his life. Yes, he had long ago half shaped his probable course. Now he looked up localities where he could find a friend, the warden, had given him, and even went so far as to inquire the names of the trustees who he did not go. Days had passed and he had held to his resolution. He had never returned to the Burleson home. Better that Pam should think him uncouth, uncivilized, than that she should know that he had done it. He had never returned to the Burleson home. Better that Pam should think him uncouth, uncivilized, than that she should know that he had done it. He had never returned to the Burleson home. ABOUT OUR SOLDIER BOYS

Excerpts from a letter to Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Moser from their son, Robert, whose promotion was mentioned in last week's issue.

Dear Mother and Dad: I'm doing pretty good. I got into Paris Friday morning. I was really tired and dirty. The trains were so crowded that I didn't have a chance to sleep or wash up on the way.

I've been making up for it since I got back to Camp Maxey. I planned on writing you when I got in St. Louis, but the trains were back in a furlough. Accompanied by his wife and son, they spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Annie Jacobs. They were joined Sunday by Otis Croone and Mrs. Dora Gates of Rome.

Well, mother, I guess I better sign off. I have to give a report tomorrow and I must make an outline. Will write more later. Love, BOB.

(Corrected Address) Ens. Robert E. Dawson, A-V (P) U S N R Blvd 443, Rochdale Field, U. S. Naval Air Station, Corpus Christie, Texas.

From North Africa, Tech. Sgt. John Rachel, Jr., writes his wife, Allene Black Rachel. He is another of Shiloh's adopted sons:

The trip over here took about two weeks and the only thing to do was to sit on our bunks and rock. We ate two meals a day on the way over. The ocean is thrilling, but I believe that I could have made the trip in a canoe. There wasn't any excitement whatsoever. Judging from what the older ones say around here, it may be a long time before you receive this letter, and before I get a message from you. I'm not allowed to cable.

Upon our arrival I was detailed to supervise the unloading of the ship. I have been living on the ship ever since we left New York. The rest of the outfit are living in tents outside of the city. I have been into the city. My French is very poor, but I have succeeded in buying what I want.

The general atmosphere of the place reminds me of California; the climate warm during the day and cold at night. Some of the soldiers have been here for several months, but they are high spirits and having a good time. Food is hard to buy, but the camp has plenty. I'm sending you a 5-franc note, which is worth about six and two-thirds cents.

but goes a long way here. Things are pretty cheap even though the prices have been put up as they think the soldiers have lots of money. I have plenty of cigarettes, but I guess hereafter we will have to do without candy.

When you write give plenty of news items for news is hard to get. Use V-Mail because they say that it is about the only thing that comes through. The soldiers here are still sweating over their Christmas packages.

Tribute to D. W. Danner
Found among the collection of poems and clippings, treasured by the late D. W. Danner, was the following poem, which was a favorite with him and read at the funeral. As he was a faithful mail carrier for 26 years, and the first one out of Plymouth in the horse and buggy days of forty years ago, we print the following:

HE CARRIED HIS LAST MAIL
He carried his last mail, He'll never carry more, Unless there's mail to carry Where he trends the Golden Shore. But here his tasks are ended, And his work is done through The well-known voice and cherry smile Are stilled forever too.

He carried his last mail— But many years, we know, Ere this he carried many mails Through mud and drifting snow, And with his hip and read at the funeral. As he was a faithful mail carrier for 26 years, and the first one out of Plymouth in the horse and buggy days of forty years ago, we print the following:

HE CARRIED HIS LAST MAIL
He carried his last mail, He'll never carry more, Unless there's mail to carry Where he trends the Golden Shore. But here his tasks are ended, And his work is done through The well-known voice and cherry smile Are stilled forever too.

NEWSPAPER CASUALTIES

Unlike World War I the present conflict is dipping down into manpower, which is vitally affecting the newspapers of the country. In the first World War there was an acute shortage of newsprint. But today there is a serious shortage of printers. This is brought about by forcing skilled labor into the ranks.

More than 300 newspapers closed their doors in 1942, and the number is gradually increasing. Unless someone makes a step forward the free press of the country will soon come under the dominant hands of the politicians. The situation is serious, more so than the general public really thinks.

Not every country editor has the ability to operate a linotype machine or do the general work, a gift we possess and one we will have to use, especially for the duration. And this fact alone insures publication of The Advertiser until the time comes when we no longer have control of our own rights.

CRACK-POTS AND RADICALS

When Representative Martin Dies was first put in charge of the Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities, he made the headlines of most of the newspapers of the country by his sensational charges that large numbers of government officials were members or fellow-travelers of the Communist party.

Careful investigations that followed indicated that although some of his charges are correct, Mr. Dies was too free with his accusations and, in many cases was "barking at mirages."

It is very worth while these days to have someone in Washington doing the job which has been assigned to Representative Dies. But it seems advisable that his job be re-defined. We certainly want any un-American activities investigated, but Mr. Dies' most recent charges, where he named a group of government workers as being "crack-pots" or "radicals" call for a definition of just what Mr. Dies considers a "crack-pot" or a "radical."

TAXES DUE MARCH 15

No matter what happens about taxes in Washington—every one of us must make the first income tax payment due on March 15.

It may be that a pay-as-you-go plan will be adopted. It may be that part of the taxes on 1942 incomes will be wiped off the books or postponed. But whatever law is passed, that will be no excuse for not making the March tax payment.

Because of the great amount of tax news coming from Washington, treasury officials are worried over misinterpretations by taxpayers who will get the idea that they needn't pay taxes until the matter is settled. For that reason the senate finance committee felt it necessary to pass a resolution making it clear that no congressional action will affect the first payment.

Furthermore, all tax proposals make it appear obvious that no matter what tax program goes through, we will all pay more taxes this year than was originally planned. So instead of anyone's relaxing about trying to get the money together for taxes, an even heavier savings program is definitely in order.

SOME FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

The Julia Richman high school is the largest high school for girls in the world. It has more than 8,000 students.

Not so long ago, a girl 15 years old entered this school as a freshman. This girl's name was Georgette Newman.

The school has its own student government. The school has four so-called annexes; and, in each annex, there are 2,000 students. The students in each annex elect six girls to serve on the general student council. It is a great honor to be elected to this council. Georgette knew just five other girls.

Not much of a chance for her, was there? She had never made a speech, and the first night of the class she was asked to stand on her feet and give a talk. She rose fearfully, but gradually lost her sense of fright before an audience.

The next day she began an intensive study of what the student body wanted done. She got acquainted with more girls and asked them what they thought the school needed most and what the student officers could do about it. She soon developed the sense and feeling of the school.

The day came for the students to elect their representatives. The girls who were up for election went before each of the annexes and made short speeches about the school. For instance, the girl would say, "My name is Abigail Smith. I live at so and so street. I want you to vote for me."

But Georgette Newman didn't do anything so foolish as that. She talked about what the school needed and what the girls wanted, and what would be good for them. For instance, one idea she advanced was how new girls could get acquainted. Naturally every new girl hung on her words. At last she finished. She hadn't talked about herself at all. Her whole talk was about the other girls and what they wanted.

Voting time came. Georgette Newman was elected. One year after she entered the strange school she was at the head of 2,000 students.

She achieved her distinction by a very simple process. She learned to speak in public. She studied what the other students wanted, and talked about them instead of talking about her own desires. And not only can she apply those principles in school, but all through her life. They're deep. They're fundamental.

THE HOUSE OF HAZARDS

SIX INCH SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Jesus Heals a Man Born Blind.
Lesson for February 14: John 9: 10-38.

Golden Text: John 9:25.

It was said that the blind man's parents were not permitted to rejoice over him because they feared the Jews; and felt it necessary to refer their questioners to their son. The more we read of what took place between the questioners and the once-blind beggar the more we should realize that the beggar was a remarkable man, capable of grit, courage, and spiritual discernment. Perhaps, like John Milton, he had seen more of heavenly things in the darkness of blindness than many others see with normal sight. He was not impressed by the threatening questions of the Lord's adversaries, stoutly denied that Jesus was a sinner, and ended by stating a conclusion (verse 23) that his hearers could not dispute. Instead, they denounced the man as a sinner and cast him out.

When Jesus heard of the man's harsh treatment, he sought him out and revealed himself to him as the Son of God. Then the man found a far greater blessing than the gift of mortal sight, and he said, "Lord, I believe," and he worshiped his new-found Lord.

So may we learn that in a varied service the goal of all the followers of Jesus is to bring men to know the Son of God—that the purpose of God's manifestation to men in Christ was the restoration of their spiritual sight and the giving of light and life to their souls.

By LITTLE HULL
Eternal Vigilance

The outside world seems to think this country of ours is a pretty good place to live in. It appears to believe that our old home and buggy system of allowing our citizens to make money and to live more richly and happily than in other parts of the world is not such a bad idea after all. In fact innumerable millions of the people who live outside the U.S. would gladly sacrifice their eye teeth to settle down here for life. They have heard returning emigrants tell of the untrammeled right to speak out freely without being arrested; of the opportunity to make all the money that one's brains and energy deserve; of the joy of living in nicely furnished houses and apartments; of the right to travel all over this great country without being stopped and examined by soldiers every time one crosses a state line; of freedom from listening spies; of the right to do as one pleases as long as he doesn't tread upon the toes of other fellow free men; of the right to vote one's political managers out of office one doesn't like; of the way they run the business of his country; of law by constitutional legislation and not by an individual or groups of individuals. They would probably all want to settle down here if they believed these "ridiculous" stories—but how can one believe things which they have never seen or known and which, therefore, must be impossible.

We know these things are not impossible—because this is the system we have lived under for 150 years. We think the stories we hear of their way of life are possible since we have never—thank Heaven—had to live in fear and hopelessness poverty. We think people who tell us of the other way of life and who warn against new-fangled experiments with our system, have reading fairy tales written by

J. P. Morgan and Wall Street. But this is not the case. Many of those who warn us are people who have lived and studied in foreign lands; who have a historical knowledge of "causes and effects"; and who know the danger signs. We, on the other hand, are apt to drift along on the assumption that our President and our congress will take care of our liberties—so why worry? We seem to forget that Presidents and congresses change; that a tremendous catastrophe like a world war may create waves of mass emotion which could sweep them out of office and replace them with men of ideologies dangerous to our scheme of life.

It is through the loopholes which are sometimes carelessly created by a democratic regime, that another type of regime can crawl into a position of power.

It is difficult not to create these loopholes in times like the present when a nation has the tremendous task of winning a war as its one big job. We are so apt to forget the conditions which may arise in the years following the war when we rush legislation to meet the immediate needs.

Every citizen of this country who wants his children to enjoy the freedoms which our ancestors created for us should constitute himself a watchdog and should communicate with his congressmen whenever he disapproves of any bills or legislation which he believes might at some later time prove troublesome or dangerous. We should have other committees like the Dies committee. If our congressmen could stop just one little loophole, it would be well worth the pittance we pay to support it. A great part of the Presidential chair today—by the way—can't watch everything—congress and the American people must do their share.

Blood Donors Asked To Send In Cards

CARDS SHOULD BE RETURNED IF QUOTAS ARE TO BE REACHED

Will some mother's son lose his life because you forgot? Are you among those who offered to give a pint of blood to the Red Cross Mobile Unit and then forgot to return the card showing you would keep the appointment? Plymouth has responded nobly to the plea and most blood donors have kept their appointment, but if the quota is to be filled this week 150 donations a day will be required, when the Mobile Unit is in Mansfield today and tomorrow, Feb. 18-19. This means that almost 250 registrations must be made for each day to absorb the shrinkage.

As the donors register the Red Cross office notifies them when to appear and a card enclosed for this purpose, according to the Red Cross files, approximately half of the 500 cards mailed for reply to potential Richland county blood donors have failed to be returned by the deadline.

The unit will operate today from 1:45 p. m. to 5:45 p. m. and again Friday from 10:45 a. m. to 2:45 p. m. The same hours will also be observed on March 18-19; April 15-16; May 13-14 and June 10-11. In each case these dates are Thursdays and Fridays of the month.

To be a blood donor, you must be between the ages of 18 and 21 must bring written consent or parent or guardian each time. Women must weigh over 110 pounds, men 130 pounds and no history of Malaria (rheumatic fever) peptic ulcer, tuberculosis or heart trouble. Other requirements are, name in full, address and telephone, age and when last donated blood.

Mr. W. C. McFadden is local chairman and will give further information or explanations. If you cannot be a donor, perhaps you can persuade some one else to give.

LEAVE TODAY FOR ARMY
Haldon R. Cheeseman of Shelby, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cheeseman, was among the group of inductees accepted at Cleveland on Thursday and left today for Mansfield for Ft. Hayes.

Wallace Redden, son of Mrs. Cliff Sourwine, was also among the group and will join others from Board Three today for Fort Hayes, Columbus.

ADMITTED TO SANITORIUM
Sadie Barrel and Orren Neely, both of Plymouth Route.

POST OFFICE CLOSED ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY
