

Cong. Lemke Offers Resolution For Cancellation of Penalties

At last, the wreck and ruin brought about by the Department of Agriculture's ignorant policy restricting agricultural production has come home with such fury that the Secretary, in order to save his face, lifted the wheat quotas. He also cancelled some of the penalties on so-called excess wheat. The farmer can now seed as much wheat as he pleases without asking some bureaucrat in Washington. The farmer is again judge of what to plant, where to plant, and when to plant.

The farmer who, on February 23, had the so-called excess wheat in storage in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Department of Agriculture, can sell his wheat without a card. His penalty has been cancelled. He does not have to get permission from a Triple A Committee to sell, feed or consume his own wheat.

But the penalty on excess wheat was NOT cancelled where the farmer failed, prior to February 23, to comply with the department's rules and regulations. If the farmer fed his wheat to livestock or poultry or used it for family consumption prior to that date, then he will have to pay a penalty of 49 cents a bushel for 1941 and 57 cents a bushel for 1942 excess wheat. The Secretary says: "If you have been a good boy and did what my bureaucrats told you, then I will cancel the penalty."

My advice to that farmer is to tell the Secretary of Agriculture to try and collect it. Tell him that the law he acted under is of doubtful constitutionality. Tell him that in the Philburn case the Supreme Court of the United States did not hold the law constitutional. It simply said that Mr. Philburn having admitted that he received benefits under the law was in no position to question its constitutionality. The truth is that the Department of Agriculture succeeded in getting Mr. Philburn to stipulate himself out of court.

If this law is constitutional, then a farmer's wife who raises sheep shears the wool from their heads, spins the wool on an old spinning wheel, knits the yarn into a sweater, can be told by Congress that she cannot wear the sweater but she must give it to the Secretary of Agriculture or store it or else she will be penalized.

Again the Secretary claims he has no authority to refund the penalty tax where a farmer paid it. The farmer who permitted the bureaucrats to bluff him into paying the penalty is now punished. Therefore, I have introduced a joint resolution which provides for the cancellation of all unpaid tax penalties and which further directs the Secretary to refund the money he collected under an un-American law. I hope that Congress will pass the Resolution at an early date. The time has come that Congress—not the bureaucracy—must again write the Nation's laws.

These farmers in the 13th and 17th Districts, who oppose the Triple A program, and who are in sympathy with Congressman Lemke's resolution, will do well to write a personal letter to their congressman from their respective districts. Your Congressman is your direct representative in the making of laws—he will do a better job if you will let him know what you want.

Reports coming in from over the nation, and in an old and we might add, Washington—the farm labor situation is gaining momentum as Spring draws closer and closer.

Governor Bricker, in his address before a group of midwestern states governors, criticized the United States Employment Service and its relation to solving the farm labor problem; he pointed out its inefficiency in several ways.

Now comes the organization of "Farmers County Committees" the first of which is getting under way in Huron county through the Extension Service, and other state and federal branches, it is conceived by this group that the main way to solve the farm labor situation is to "educate" the farm labor "implements." Sounds all right, but will it work? The weather is the primary factor in governing farm production, and it is believed every farmer will agree with this statement.

Down in Mansfield, in Richland county, the Junior Assn. from DeWitt Center held a farm forum session at which nearly one hundred farmers were present. The farmers argued for and against the Triple A program without proposing any solution to their labor and production problems.

The following account of the meeting, which was held last Wednesday night week, is taken from the Mansfield News-Journal: "Sponsored by the county Triple A committee, the session was addressed by E. E. Durree, regional AAA field man from Defiance county, in the John Simpson junior high school auditorium.

"James Morgan and Richard Burnham, members of a special Junior Assn. from industrial labor committee, told the farmers that a labor 'clearing house' through which farmers could obtain city workers on short notice to help them with their spring planting, summer weeding would be set up in Mansfield within the next two weeks.

"The J. A. C. proposal brought a number of questions from the audience but few expressions of approval.

"Henry Fackler, Plymouth, head of the State and County Marketing Quota Protest Association, wanted to know how long the city workers could be on the job in the afternoon. Another complained that farmers might be held responsible for injuries to part-time workers, and a third suggested that a farmer might have to work under industrial labor legislation laws if he employed three or more workers.

Learning that workers would be available probably at 8:00 or 9:00 p. m., Fackler said that he would not need them much time for farm work, or the farmer much time to teach them what to do. He admitted later, however, that the plan had possibilities.

"Howard Sterns, AAA committee man, who presided during the forum in the absence of Chairman Guy L. Taylor, said he believed the idea was a good one and that the AAA would help farmers in rush seasons.

"Duree said the government farm program which was 10 years old last week, had performed a valuable service for farmers by keeping farm prices under control, instructing farmers in the planting of necessary food crops, and urging adoption of soil conservation practices.

He said the AAA gave farmers an organization which was comparable to labor unions—something with a voice that could be heard in Washington when the farmer wanted something.

Henry Fackler had different ideas about the government program, however, telling Duree that "if you will call off your dogs, you patriotic farmers will produce enough food without being told how to do it.

Fackler said the government could not pay farmers not to grow wheat in a democracy and that the wheat marketing penalties which were recently ruled out by the Secretary of Agriculture "made it look like farmers were criminals because they produced and sold wheat."

Another AAA opponent recalled that the first colonies were established by people who came to America to enjoy the benefits of free trade and not to be told how to live by the government. "You must place confidence in people to get them to do something," he said.

As an indication of the farm labor situation in Huron and Richland counties, more sale bills have been printed in The Advertiser office in Richland county than at any time in the past 20 years. One farmer who was in town last week, made the statement that in his check-up of conditions in Richland county, he found that 900 farmers had quit or was quitting business.

Farmers Invited To Attend All-Day Meet

In order to clarify the fertilizer situation and the purpose of filling out application blanks, John Ganzhorn, manager of the Plymouth Grain Elevator, announced that he has secured the services of a representative of the Davidson Chemical corporation, who will be in Plymouth all day on Tuesday, March 23.

Mr. Ganzhorn suggests that all farmers check up on the amount of fertilizer they used during the years of 1941-42, and bring their figures in with them. Commercial fertilizers will be allocated to the most essential crops first, this spring. War crops have first priority.

Nitrogen for Victory Gardens will be available this spring. It was pointed out by Mr. Ganzhorn, that the meeting on Tuesday, March 23, is strictly instructive and helpful in filling out the necessary forms, and that no sales pressure or talk will be used during the day by the representative of the fertilizer company. It takes a little time to properly fill out the blanks, and this is the main purpose of the all-day meeting. All farmers in the community are invited to attend the session and learn more about the fertilizer requirements for the coming season.

Around the Square

(By Phineas Whittleseed)

MEMBERS OF the Owl Club will greatly miss Dick Hendricks at their night sessions from 11:00 p. m. to 2 a. m. Dick has heard and settled many arguments in the past year or so, and often he has had to be plain spoken as to his policies. With approximately 200 boys from this vicinity in the service Hendricks could see only a dismal future for a jute box joint, and his induction into the army does, at least, guarantee a monthly income. Well, anyway, Dick, all the boys wish for you the best of luck.

EDNA ROBERTS' face turned a violent red when she was asked "what happened to your fingers?" It was revealed she fell in front of a well-known "soft drink" house which she feels was a very poor place to fall. But anyway, she did incur several cuts and bruises which were painful at the time.

ELSEWHERE in this issue you will find full details of Plymouth's "clip joint." We didn't know there was so much stuff going on around here. It's all crap-shooting, bootlegging and a little bit of everything—but the fact that no inference was made of activities of this kind reports came rolling in—and as a result we're a wee bit wiser. So, you fellows who might have thought I meant "you and you, and you"—just forget it. We're not running a "peeping tom" sheet and news will be kept out of the business—not ours, especially if it's done in private.

AFTER BEING OFF WORK three weeks with the flu, Albert Eckstein of Willard is able to be out again. Albert is a former Plymouth resident, but has made his home in the neighborhood for many years, although he keeps in touch with Plymouth through the Advertiser. Mr. Eckstein is following the carpenter trade, and he states he's finding plenty of work to do, but materials are hard to get.

THE WOMEN IN THIS VICINITY certainly have an excellent opportunity to make their hands smooth-like and at the same time, shampoo their hair and make it gleam like a Hollywood glamor gal. This opportunity is brought about by the fact that the store is offering special one-cent sale on hand lotion, shampoo and hair oil. We're not telling you about it here, but read the display ad in this issue. Get some for yourself young and beautiful again... even if it's just for the boys who come home on a furlough.

WE WELCOME THIS WEEK to our list of readers, Robert Grove of Tiro, Rt. 1, son of D. F. Grove, who resides with his son-in-law, Guy Vandall. D. F. has been on the list for a long number of years. Friends will regret to know that he isn't quite so well, but then he was 80 years last summer. However, Mr. Grove gets a lot of entertainment out of his radio, and especially is he keen about the newscasts each day. We hope we have the pleasure of keeping Robert on the list as long as we have his dad.

CHAS BAKER, who has been a special constable for some time, was appointed deputy marshal at Tuesday night's meeting of Village Council. Baker is well liked and should prove very efficient for his new duties.

MORE GASOLINE

There is no doubt that the people in this town would like to be able to use their automobiles a lot more than they do today. We are all pleased by recent announcements of the Office of Price Administration which indicate that the restrictions on driving are apt to be relaxed rather than tightened this summer.

That is, we are pleased if we can be assured that this loosening of the rules is done because our supplies of gasoline and rubber are more adequate and not because officials in charge are attempting to make things easier for us at the risk of handicapping the war program.

Although we may grumble at times at the shortages and sacrifices we are called upon to make, any good American would grumble a lot louder if he thought government officials were putting his comfort ahead of the needs of the boys on the fighting front. We'd like plenty of gasoline, plenty of meat and plenty of canned goods, but we want them only when we can be certain that we are getting them because the supply for our armed forces are more than adequate.

LABOR'S WAGES UP 41%

An analysis of bureau of labor statistics shows that the average factory worker now earns enough money to buy 41.4 per cent more goods than he could buy three years ago. That figure takes into consideration the increase in the cost of living during the last three years.

The average national hourly wage for factory workers in 1939 was 65 cents an hour. Now it is approximately 90 cents an hour and most men are working considerably more hours than they were in 1939. In addition, in normal times factory workers were laid off for weeks at a time during dull seasons while now layoffs are practically unknown.

With these figures confronting them at a time when we are all supposed to be making sacrifices, there is no visible reason why the war laborer should feel an compunction to listen to pleas for general wage increases for labor. There may be some instances where adjustments need to be made among groups which have not shared in the average increase, but the figures make it obvious that labor in general has done all right by itself during the war years.

A MONUMENT TO A PEDDLER

Recently I passed through a town where I saw a forty-million-dollar monument to a former peddler!

The town is Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The monument is Duke University, a co-educational college, comprising a magnificent row of stone buildings, equipped with all modern facilities, and surrounded by beautifully landscaped grounds. On the campus is a standing monument to this former tobacco peddler, in the form of a statue of the peddler himself, James Buchanan Duke. An object that caught my eye was a half-smoked cigar he is hiding in his left hand!

James Buchanan Duke was one of two motherless sons of an old Confederate soldier, who, when the Civil war was over, faced the future with only a pair of blind mules, fifty cents in silver which he had received from a Union soldier in exchange for a worthless Confederate note, and a field of green tobacco—the tobacco being all that was left on land which had been stripped bare by hungry soldiers. But this green tobacco was the nucleus of a fortune from which later on thousands of boys and girls were to benefit in the way of an education.

Buck Duke died worth one hundred and one million dollars, yet he never went to school but five years. He once said: "A college education is all right for preachers and lawyers, but what use would it be to me? Superior brains are not necessary in business." He went on to give his reasons for his success as follows: "I have succeeded in business not because I have more natural ability than many others who have not succeeded, but because I have applied myself harder and stuck to it. I know plenty of people with more brains than I have who have failed; but they lacked application and determination."

Yet, curiously enough, this man who expressed himself as not needing book learning, and who proved it so far as business success goes, gave forty million dollars to help young men and women acquire an education. He must have felt the need somewhere along the line!

Buck Duke came to appreciate the fact that money and money alone meant nothing. In the one and only interview he ever gave to the newspapers in all his life, a reporter asked: "Mr. Duke, is there any satisfaction in just having a million dollars?" Mr. Duke gave his head a decisive jerk and answered: "Naw, not a danged bit."

THE HOUSE OF HAZARDS

By Mac ARTHUR

HATE Nazis How hard should we hate the Nazis and the Japanese should we hate their leaders? Since we are to be carried further to include all of their armed forces. Or should we do all the way and include their entire civilian population as well? I imagine the directors of the propaganda offices in Washington and London have discussed this subject from all angles to determine just what steps they should take in distributing hate-provoking material. But without the assistance of government-directed lessons in hate, the feelings of the people in this country have expanded rapidly to include most of all the Axis population as objects of our hatred. Seldom do we hear people say, anymore, "You can't blame the German people for what was a common statement at the time the war broke out. Now we do blame the German people and the Japanese people and the Italian people for their blood-thirsty leaders. And we feel little sympathy for the German people of Germany when we hear of the terrible destruction being wrought in their cities by our bombs."

Our attitude has become one of the more-kill-the-better, for we no longer think of the Nazis as being like ourselves. Instead, we picture them as a cruel, brutal race who deserve everything they are getting.

MME. CHIANG an evil There is no doubt that it is a dangerous thing for the future of civilization for one group of millions of people to be in a state of hatred against a group of millions of people. It is dangerous thing because no permanent peace can ever be established through such feelings. Instead, we picture them as a cruel, brutal race who deserve everything they are getting.

Christ taught us to hate the evil in men, but not men themselves. While it may be difficult for us not to feel bitterness for the injuries we have suffered at the hands of our aggressors, yet it is remember that recrimination and hatred will lead us nowhere. We should use our energy to greater purpose so that every nation will be enabled to use its native genius and energy for the reconstruction of a permanent progressive world with all nations participating on an equitable and just basis."

It is remarkable that a woman who represents a nation which has been for years the object of inhuman aggression by a neighboring nation should feel no more hatred for that nation, but her broad vision, Christ-like in its recognition of justice, goes beyond the shifting emotions of most of us and never wavers from a goal of a finer peace more perfect world.

GOAL peace Those who are concerned about our not having had peace for so long a time should concentrate our hate on the evil in man.

In our more lucid moments we can all realize that that is where our hate actually is centered—on the selfishness, the greed, the brutality and the dishonesty of our enemies.

And, before we have the kind of peace of which this famous lady dreams, we must not only fight to annihilate those traits in man, but also must endeavor to wipe them out wherever they show up among ourselves.

When we read of the many conflicts, the injuries, the greed and the selfishness among people in this country, it is hard to picture a peace in which all nations will be friendly and fair to one another, but our only hope of having permanent peace is for all people to work and pray to achieve this goal.

By LYTLE HULL The Capitalistic System—For Free Men Only

It is only under the so-called capitalistic system that the citizen can have what we are in the habit of calling Freedom. For under any other system the citizen must be ruled by force.

In the capitalistic state man is free to use his brains and to "expand" to any limit those brains are capable of carrying him—except that he is prohibited from injuring or from hindering the progress of another citizen. Having free rein to forge ahead along whatever path his desires dictate, he has no reason, nor incentive, to try to destroy the system which allows him this free use of his powers.

If a man is a farmer and has good horse sense and a fair amount of ambition and energy—he can improve his land, add to his acreage, build bigger and better buildings and equip them with all the modern conveniences. The weather and worms can slow him up, but man can't—when we are functioning normally under the capitalistic system.

Suppose you are a laborer and you are determined to get ahead in life and not spend it all digging coal or coupling freight cars. Well you can own the "dinkin'" mine some day if you really make it your mind to do so; or you can be president of the railroad and fire the "bug" who used to make your life miserable when you were just a "hand." It has been done often.

The politician can become a potent agent under our system—but he can't in a country which is slave to any of those one man control arrangements. There he can become a stationary cog in an iron wheel, or he may be thrown out on his face because some cog above him doesn't like the looks of it. He can never be more than a frightened servant of some higher and frightened servant, with no right to call his soul his own and very little time if real danger threatens.

"Meet the People."

(Each week in this space will be presented a picture and word portrait of someone whose name is new.) Harry Shippe Truman, a U. S. senator from Missouri since 1934, is that rare bird, a machine politician who is thoroughly honest. And that he is busy as he has been a senator, elected lately when the 10-man Truman Committee, of which he is chairman, couldn't spare the time to celebrate his second anniversary of his birth as a brow-beating, question-asking, money-saving watchdog of democracy.

Personally chosen by the late Boss Tom Pendegast of Kansas City a Democratic party machine, Truman, at the second primary election, voted solidly with the administration and said little. It wasn't until he served on the Interstate Commerce Committee that he displayed his real talent for investigation.

Truman grew up on a farm. During World War I he served in the field artillery, emerged a major. After losing his money in a business venture he was "discovered" by Pendegast. The man who can't make a success of business was well on the way toward showing us how to make a success of democracy.

Mildred Irene Woodworth and Staff Sergeant Robert MacMichael United In Marriage Tuesday

Staff Sergeant Robert Nelson MacMichael of Mansfield took his bride Tuesday evening, Miss Mildred Irene Woodworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thorr Woodworth of Plymouth. The double-ring ceremony was performed at 7:30 in the First English Lutheran church, Mansfield, by Rev. Grover E. Swower, pastor, in the presence of a large circle of friends.

Palms, ferns and several lighted candelabra formed a pretty background for the ceremony. Mrs. Clayton Bell, organist, played several beautiful selections as the bridal party took their places, as well as the traditional wedding marches.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a street length aqua crepe frock with brown accessories and wore a large corsage of gardenias. Her only ornament was a white gold necklace with the army insignia, gift of the groom.

Miss Janice MacMichael, sister of the bridegroom, was bride's maid and she wore an all white gown and her shoulder corsage was of roses and sweet peas. The maid of honor was Miss Jean Shira of Willard and Donald Chapman of New Haven, served as best man. (Wishes were Thomas Burras of Olena, a cousin of Miss Woodworth, and L. Kookken of Shelby, an uncle.)

Mrs. Thorr Woodworth, mother of the bride, was attired in a black dress with white accessories, and Mrs. MacMichael, mother of the groom, wore a black gown with aqua accessories, a shoulder corsage of gardenias, completing their costumes.

Following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. MacMichael welcomed friends and relatives at an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dudley, 263 Gleason, Avenue, Mansfield, with whom the bride had resided for sometime. Spring flowers and a beautiful wedding cake, centered the refreshment table, with Mrs. C. L. Kookken of Shelby, and Mrs. Chauncey Woodworth of Plymouth, aunts of the bride, assisting.

Staff Sgt. MacMichael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice MacMichael of Mansfield. He was graduated from the Massillon Senior high school and prior to his induction in the army, was employed at the Shawnee Hotel in Springfield, Ohio. For the past seventeen months he has been stationed on overseas duty. Following a short wedding trip, he will return to duty at Camp Haan in California.

Mrs. MacMichael graduated in 1938 from Plymouth high school and in 1941 from the Mansfield School of Nursing. Since her graduation she has been employed at Mansfield General Hospital and will continue her work there for the present.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were present from Olena, Fitchville, New Haven, Plymouth, Shelby, Mansfield, Norwalk and Greenwich.

O. E. S., Plymouth Chapter has fine Inspection Tuesday Evening

PLYMOUTH MAYOR IS CANDIDATE AT MARCH INSPECTION OF PLYMOUTH CHAPTER.

One of the most interesting inspections and initiations that Plymouth Chapter, 231, O. E. S., has ever held was Tuesday evening, March 16, in the chapter rooms, 1005 Greenwood, when Harry Forrester Van Wagner, husband of Conduetess and Associate Matron pro tem, of Plymouth chapter. This situation is very unusual, made the evening an especially interesting one.

The candidates who were initiated at this inspection, were Mayor James B. Derr and Forrest Van Wagner, husbands of Conduetess and Associate Matron pro tem, of Plymouth chapter. This situation is very unusual, made the evening an especially interesting one.

Deputy From Carey
The Deputy Grand Matron, Mrs. Ethel E. Goff, is from Crawford chapter at Carey, Ohio, and this was her first appearance, as official deputy in District No. 10. Her manner was most pleasing and her report to Plymouth chapter was closed with a very touching and sincere prayer. The next item forward to reading and hearing Deputy Goff again at other chapter inspections.

Inspection Held
The officers were gowned in floor-length white taffeta formal and wore pink carnations at their shoulder. The Worthy Matron and Associate Matron both wore blue lace, with lovely shoulder corsages, and the Patron and Associate Patron both were in evening dress attire.

Bouquets of red and white carnations, and dog-wood blossoms were decorations on the dais in the East.

Following the presentation of the Deputy, the Marshal of the chapter, Ruth Ruckman, presented the Flag for the Pledge of Allegiance. At this time, with our nation at war, the Pledge was given with a new sincerity, and as the first verse of our national anthem was sung, every one present was deeply moved. To hear nearly a hundred people singing

"Then conquer we must, Where our cause, it is just, And this be our motto— In God is our trust!"

and singing as they meant every word, was truly thrilling. The singing of the stately measures that closed the anthem—

"And the Star-Spangled Banner, In Triumph Shall Wave, O'er the Land of the Free— And the Home of the Brave"

we KNEW that it would be so. The Marshal should be con-

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

By MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

YOUR CHILD'S VICTORY GARDEN

Children show the greatest interest in gardening from 7 to 12, so if you have youngsters that age give them a share of the family's Victory garden which will be all their own. Elsewhere in your paper you have been told of the importance of these home gardens and advised on how to plant them, so we will confine our discussion to their value in your child's education and enjoyment.

Though the emphasis is rightly on the serious business of growing extra food in your Victory garden it may well prove to be a main source of outdoor recreation for the family this summer. Motor trips are out of course, and with extra war work parents will have less time for picnics and other excursions with their children. So since much of your own spare time will be spent with rake and hoe the more interest you can rouse in your children for working alongside, the more companionship you'll enjoy.

The young beginner should have a patch not more than four feet square. You might give Johnny last year's pansy bed for his garden and Sally a similar pre-empted plot. For it is best not to give a child fresh ground to break—it may prove to be more or less barren, for one thing, and children need quick success to win their interest in a project. For that same reason they should plant simple, quick-growing vegetables and flowers. Little boys usually prefer to grow vegetables and it is wise to choose carrots, radishes, early lettuce and onions for a first garden. These show their sprouts quickly after planting and are not too slow about appearing on the table as my carrots. Girls like to raise flowers, and since the government has emphasized that we are not to give up the color and cheer of flowers but to grow them right along with our vegetables, it would make any little girl mighty proud to grow flowers for the table in her own spot of garden. Marigolds, conflowers, petunias and poppies, with low-growing sweet alyssum and other creeping borders, will provide many a mixed bouquet for beginning essays in flower arrangement.

But remember, it is far better to have one row of radishes or one clump of marigolds as a first garden than to have an over-ambitious program that the child will abandon before blossom time.

The older children will, of course, be expected to help cultivate the whole garden as part of their patriotic duty. But for the youngest his summer of tending growth will be an excellent time for them to catch the contagion of gardening. It is true that on many children exerts to the mysticism of planting and harvest won't "take." But if you provide the joyous outlet of working in the earth to only one garden-to-be you will have a happy child in the making. Those who have worked with children on gardening projects declare that there are no problem children among those who become genuinely interested.

Several more bound editions of the past issues of the Readers Digest have been purchased and placed in the library.

"Sing Sing Nights," by Henry Stephen Keller, has also been added to our large number of fiction books. It is about three men in Sing Sing, all writers awaiting execution for the same crime. It is thrilling from beginning to end.

THE SNOOPER ! ! !

I think it would be a good idea to explain why Donna Hoffman has her nose all skinned up. It wasn't a fight, really, just a few acrobatic tricks which she and Garry cooked up.

We hear that Margy B. has picked up a new sailor. Who is the latest addition to the fleet? Come on, kid, give!

It sure must be getting bad—everytime you turn around in school lately you see Garry writing a letter and it's always addressed to New York.

Have you heard about Mr. Joseph's latest blunder? In a chemistry while talking about in Chem who gave lectures, he said, "And the man stood and lectured while he talked." I think that takes the cake. How about you?

Lost! One cowboy with horse! Will the finder please return him to Miss Richards. Don't worry, folks. He's just a horse. Seriously, Miss Richards would appreciate hearing about her wooden pin!

CHAPTER IX

SYNOPSIS

Released from prison after serving fifteen years for a murder he didn't commit, Mark Grant goes to the office of a lawyer named Fosdick to collect money left to him while he was in prison. When Fosdick tells him he will not wait, Mark accepts an invitation to a party to help Teddy Banks win a bet with Archie. In the meantime, Archie informs them his real name, Archie Innersmith, is "Stewart Byram." At the party Mark meets Burleson, the man who sent him to prison, and Burleson's wife, Pamela Rodger. She does not recognize him, and Mark decides to reveal his identity to Pam until he finds the real murderer. Pam asks Burleson to give her his little jade god and surprise when he refuses and tells her he is going to smash it before he dies. When Teddy Banks learns Mark's identity from Fosdick he tells Archie, and Archie tells Mark's attentions to Pam, goes to Mark's room but Mark is not there. Landon then tells Mark to take the driver to Burleson's address.

Pam had ordered her little tearable carried to the library. She rarely made tea there unless Burleson asked it, but today he was out and she had a great fireplace tempter. It was a large, ornate, and the leap of the fire would be like the heart of a welcome—warm and bright. Burleson had loved the library, especially when the logs burned there. The flame-light touched her eyes, and she saw a bit of the old ivory. There was a mellowness of tones in book-bindings, in the leather of the old chairs that made the place so restful. The wide windows looked across a city park, and she saw the green of the sky, and today it was adrift with cloud-mists. It was nearly five o'clock, and she had time to give a few more dainty touches to her tea-table. She had a slender girl, who came in from one place to another, then her eyes caught the glimmer of the green jade god on her uncle's library table. The sight of it recalled his face yesterday, the sudden red streak between his brows; she stood on instinct looking at the curious little green image, its uncanny, elfish face, its pointed beard, green as grass, and she saw the man who squatted as an Oriental god should, and the light from the fire gleamed on his face, and she saw the man's face seized here; she lifted it and put it gently down on her table beside the flowers. It squatted there, waiting for the quiet attitude, grinned up at her. She felt like snatching it off again, then she looked at it.

"Uncle can lend it to me for an hour anyway," she thought, and flung again at the clock, forgot it.

Mark was coming! Her heart was beating; in spite of herself she felt a surge of uneasiness. She tried to thrust out disturbing thoughts, but Fosdick's manner, his treatment of her, had been so disconcerting! She was a little disturbed still, though her eyes were shining when there was a stir in the hall, the lifting of a portiere, a new voice, and then the tall man whom she had met in London.

"She held out a frank hand. 'I'm so glad you could come!' she said; and thought it might be hard for you to get it, but I'll try to make it so.' He took her hand and held it, looking down into her eyes.

"He's been a thousand times harder on me," she said, and replied simply, "and I've tried—never meant to come here again!"

She gave him a questioning look; the freight caught her face and showed it ivory pale.

"I don't know what you mean, but you'll tell me!" she breathed softly.

"I came to tell you."

"Sit down, let me give you a cup of tea," her voice faltered. She moved to her place behind the table, trying to hide her eyes from him.

"No!" he said quickly. Suddenly, impulsively, she put her hand out and touched his arm.

"It can't be as bad as that—and I'm your friend," she assured him firmly.

He caught her hand and kissed it passionately; then he let her drop and folded his arms.

"I'm not fit to do that," he said harshly, and looked a part.

As he spoke he looked across at her and saw the small pale oval of her face, her dark hair and red lips, and she felt a sudden impulse to take her in his arms. But, sitting there, with the conventional tea-table between them, she told her the simple truth about his meeting with Landon and Banks, and she told him the story of her life.

"I was nothing but a shabby imposter, even my name's false," she said, "and I don't deserve to be spoken to. It built me up, you know. I made a vow I wouldn't come back here under false pretenses, and I was going away when you met me the other day. You ought to refuse to speak to me!"

"Sheer—this—this!" he said, and she said nothing for a while, and her silence hurt him; it brought his misdemeanor home to him. She did not think him fit to speak to her. He drew a long breath, lifting his eyes again to hers. She looked so calm that it shook him with a new and deep excitement; she believed in him; it was the most marvelous thing in the world!

"Where did you get this—thing?" he demanded.

"And you don't ask me about it? Not why I was sent there?" he cried.

"She shook her head, smiling. 'You're my friend,' she repeated softly.

"The beauty of it swept him off his feet. He caught her hands in his, in another moment he would have told her that he loved her—told her the whole story—his eyes fell suddenly on a green thing on the table at her elbow, a carved shining figure, marvelously curved, and he saw the face of a man and of the ages—was grinning up at him—one of the small uplifted things that were so often slipped out of his; he reached for the jade god and lifted it, turning it over slowly in his hand. Underneath, where the fat-nosed goblin sat so squat, the jade was smooth except for a hole in the middle, and he saw that it marked it indelibly. Mark ran his finger along the broken surface and felt it. Then he looked at the queer elfin face again and his own face went white.

"My God," he said below his breath, "how did it come here—here of all places?"

"You know it," Pam leaned forward, her eyes wide. "What is it? The matter?"

He had collected himself, but he had pointed out in one of his powerful hands.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

"Sheer—this—this!" he asked excitedly.

"Where did you get this—thing?" he asked excitedly.

FARMERS ORGANIZE COUNTY GROUPS
Farm organization leaders of Huron county have taken up the initiative in setting up a "Farmers' County Committee on Labor and Equipment." Farm Bureau and Grange leaders with the assistance of the members of the Huron County War Board have selected one farmer in each township as a representative on the county committee. These representatives organized a temporary County Committee with Robert Earl, Deputy Grange Master, as chairman. Other officers elected were as follows: W. A. Melnyre, Fairfield township, vice chairman, and Clay Stackhouse, Wake man township, secretary.
At the first meeting of this "Farmers' Committee" it was decided to hold township meetings of neighborhood leaders and others to discuss labor and equipment problems on farms of Huron county.

An executive committee was selected, consisting of the elected officers of the temporary organization, and representatives of the following interest groups: County schools, vocational agricultural instructors, AAA, Farm Security, U. S. Employment Office, and the Agricultural Extension Service. It was decided that members of this executive committee should give their assistance with township meetings of selected leaders. At each of the township meetings, neighborhood leaders will be encouraged to hold discussion meetings with their immediate neighbors. The purpose of this program is an attempt to have farm neighbors plan for the exchange of both labor and equip-

Following neighborhood discussions, township committees will be selected by local leaders. These township committees will then represent their community on a permanent "Farmers' County Committee on Labor and Equipment."
Various agencies are attempting to solicit labor that might be of aid to farmers. This labor will include high school boys, Farm-trained laborers from outside the county and other types of labor that might be available. The schools of the county are making a list of boys who are willing to work on farms during the school year and during summer vacation.

All arrangements for school age labor should be made through the school superintendent, or Vocational Agricultural Instructors. All other agencies such as the U. S. E. S., Farm Security, and the U. S. D. A. War Board will list such help as is available.
The Farmers County Committee have agreed that 90 per cent or more of the help that will be available on farms of Huron county this year is already located on those farms. They are further agreed that one of the best methods of efficiently using the present supply of both labor and equipment is to plan for the exchange of help and equipment with neighbors.
