Heavy, Heavy Hangs Over Your Head

Lutherans To Observe 104th Anniversary Next Sunday

Next Sunday, First Ev. Lutheran church, passes another milestone in its history, the 104th. Looking back over the century's record of this church, we find that the history of the church is closely connected with the history of the town of Plymouth. When the church was founded in 1840 the town had been known for only two years as Plymouth, the name having been changed from Paris to Plymouth in 1838. Therefore, the Lutheran church was rightly the first church to be founded in Plymouth, for the other protestant churches date from the time of Paris.

In the fall of 1840 the Rev. Peter Lane, a young Lutheran clergyman came to Plymouth, a graduate of Gettysburg college, Harrisburg, Pa. The name of the original Lutheran as recorded in the history of Plymouth, published in 1832, were the Fenner, Traugers, Light, Plings, Harmons, Weis and Millers.

In 1842 a small group of members built the first church on the site of the present church. The interior remained unfinished for some years because of lack of funds. The building is still standing and speaks for the careful construction of the same.

Many ministers have served this church, some short terms of service, others longer terms—all seeking to build up the congregation.

In 1886 the present brick building was built, the brick being supplied by a brickyard located in the north end of town. The dedication of this building was on Feb. 20th, 1887. Since then the building itself has undergone changes. The annex has been added and other changes have been undertaken.

First Lutheran church is well organized and carries on a well designed program of church work. The Alpha Guild, the Ladies Aid society, the Alice Young class, the Men's brotherhood are active organizations which meet regularly to promote the work of the church. The young people in the Luther League carry on regular Sunday programs to foster leadership in the church. A catechetical class meets weekly to study the fundamentals of the Bible.

The Sunday school, of which Mr. Eldon Nimmons is superintendent of the adult, senior and intermediate classes and the primary department of which Mrs. Stacy Brown is superintendent of the children's and primary classes, is headed by an efficient staff of teachers meeting every Sunday at 10 o'clock for an hour of study in Bible lessons.

The congregation is affiliated with the United Lutheran church of America. Full liturgical worship services on Sunday with sermon by the pastor, enhanced by the choir of which Mrs. Guthrie is director and organist, constitutes the worship program through the seasons of the church year. The congregation shares in the benevolent program of the church at large in which parish education, social missions, Christian stewardship, foreign missions, American missions, Christian higher education, Lutheran world action, deaconess work, and all church-work indicated by the calendar of causes demand their attention and promotion.

The present pastor is Rev. Frederick Lambertus who was called to this field January 10th, 1943 and who has been in full charge of the work since May, 1943. A council of nine men at present meets monthly to look after the material affairs of the church. During the past year extensive improvements have been made on the church and on the parsonage. Several thousand dollars have been expended to recondition the property. The Lutheran church is part of Plymouth's public square and is looking forward to sound development in the future.

The festival services Sunday are in charge of the pastor who will preach on the parable of the vineyard as related in Isaiah 5:1-7. His subject will be "The Vineyard, A Picture of the Church of Christ." All members and friends of the church are kindly invited to participate in the festival services.

NEW STUDENT

Cynthia Burrus has recently become a member of the Junior Class. She came with her parents from Kentucky and are now residing in the Davis property on North street.

SELLS GARAGE

The Wilkinson Garage in North Fairfield has been sold by W. J. Wilkinson to Myles Burras and Ralph Underwood of Newark. They expect to take over this month. Mr. Wilkinson built and has managed the garage for a number of years. Ernest J. Bond, yeoman, and Thomas W. Miller, Wilkenson will take a rest.

M. H. Huffman of Boughtonville is now making his home with his daughter, Mrs. E. B. Miller and family.

Lt. Col. Evans' Leaves Parsel

Lt. Col. Eldon T. Evans, who for the past eight months has been the Assisting Commanding Officer at the 831st Army Air Forces Specialized Depot, Shelby, Ohio, has been relieved of this duty to report to the AAF Replacement Depot, Kearns, Utah.

Lt. Col. Evans has been twelve years in the service as a commissioned officer, three and a half of which have been spent in foreign service in Panama. His home is Moorehead, Ky., and his wife, the former Lucille Hamilton of Mt. Sterling, Ky., is taking their two children there to make their home during the lieutenant colonel's absence. During his stay here he has resided in the H. F. Root home on Plymouth street.

New Adjutant

Major Raymond C. O'Brien, 43, has just assumed duty as adjutant at the 831st AAF Specialized Depot, Shelby, according to announcement from the headquarters. Major O'Brien has twenty-two years of army service to his credit of a wide and varied nature. He received his commission in 1922. Following this, Major O'Brien was assigned adjutant and command duties at many important stations. He has just transferred from the 820th AAF Specialized Depot, South Bend, Indiana, where he was commanding officer.

Major O'Brien's home town is Champaign, Illinois. His family is quite military, three of his seven children being in service. Captain Raymond C. O'Brien, Jr., is stationed at Colorado Springs, as adjutant of a B-29 wing command; Terrence F., is in the navy and Gordon T., is with the merchant marines. At present the major and his wife, and two sons, are making their home in Shiloh.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Beck and family of Ripley Center moved Saturday to the Weaver property which they recently purchased on Sandusky street. Mr. Beck is custodian of Plymouth schools.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scriver, former tenants in the Weaver property, have moved to the Gleason property on Main street.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

Luther E. Brown left Saturday for Excelsior Springs, Mo., where he is to undergo an operation. He will probably be gone three weeks or more.

MOTORIST ARRESTED

Virgil Phillips, Shiloh, was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol by state highway patrolmen Friday night.

Disagree On Thanksgiving

Five States Will Observe Nov. 30, While 41 Stick To Nov. 23 For Holiday.

The nation is split again on when to celebrate Thanksgiving day.

Five states, Florida, Idaho, Nebraska, Texas and Virginia, plan to observe Nov. 30 through local choice.

Forty-one states including Ohio and the District of Columbia, have fixed Nov. 23 for the holiday, following federal statute.

In two states, Arkansas and Georgia, there is a chance that both dates will be recognized.

The differences started in 1939 when President Roosevelt, in an effort to provide a longer period between Thanksgiving and Christmas, moved the date ahead one week. At that time, many governors ignored the change and fixed the "traditional" date. The fourth or last Thursday by President Lincoln in 1864.

In 1941, however, a house joint resolution was approved by the president, fixing the future date as the fourth Thursday. On top of this, many states enacted laws concerning the holiday.

But what further complicated the picture this year was the fact that the weather threw the days fall during the month.

Dies At 80

Joseph Joll, 80, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Nettie Karr, Shelby, Friday evening.

He was a member of the Methodist church and had been the owner of a grocery store in Shelby for eight years prior to his retirement in July due to ill health.

He is survived by three children—Mrs. Kerz Deibert of Crestline and Norman of Shelby; one brother, Thomas of Pennsylvania, five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Funeral services were held on Monday afternoon at the Barkdull funeral home in Shelby with Rev. George Beebe, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating. Interment was in Oakland cemetery.

Mr. Joll is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Mary Colyer of Plymouth, who attended the rites with her children, Mathion Colyer of Maricetta, Mrs. Helen Willier of Willard, Paul and Mrs. Betty Deats of Plymouth.

Resigns Post

RICHLAND COUNTY'S OLDEST POLITICIAN QUILTS

Richland county's oldest politician, Bert Fix, Friday resigned his job as clerk of Sharon township ending 33 years of public service.

Fix was first elected to the post in 1912 and has held the job continuously since then. During that time, he was elected 14 times to the office of director of finance and public records in Shelby, retiring from that post in 1940. The township trustees appointed W. C. Price of Shelby to complete the unexpired term of Mr. Fix which runs to Dec. 31, 1947.

HEAR DAMAGE ACTION

On Tuesday in common pleas court in Newark, a $10,000 case of Mrs. Thelma Reed, Green view, against the Village of Willard, went on trial. It is set forth by the plaintiff that her infant son, Richard Elwood Reed, who was born in Willard Municipal hospital May 11, 1940, and died on May 29, that year, of typhoid fever, contracted from alleged food infected food served at the hospital. Bracy and Bracy and Young and Young represent the plaintiff and G. Ray Craig the defendant.

INFANT DIES

The baby boy born Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Prater at the Willard Municipal hospital, died shortly after he was born and was buried Sunday at 3 o'clock in Greenlawn cemetery. The Prater family reside on the Hoffman farms, west of Plymouth. Arrangements were in charge of R. E. McQuate funeral home.

THE GREAT SIGHT

By CHARLES SPALDING AND OTIS CARNEY

CHAPTER III

Barred from the Navy's V-1 program because he lacked two years of college math, Lester Dowd tried to enlist in the Coast Guard but it turned down because of "racial equities." The doctor refused even to examine him. Commander Whitcomb, an old friend of the doctor, endeavored to get a waiver for Lester so he can join V-1, but after weeks of work Lester learns they still insist on two years of college math. He is successful in joining the V-8 Naval Aviation and is sent to Anacosta Naval Base.

The instructions went in the same chilly vein to explain the arrangement of articles about the washbasin.

"Towels will be hung in locker. Washcloth will be stowed on goose-neck."

The goose-neck, reflection made it plain, was the nub of things. I didn't know what the goose-neck was. There had been up to this moment no reason for traffic with goose-necks. If basins wanted to go around in goose-necks it was perfectly all right with me. They could wear slacks if they wanted.

I approached the mate of the deck on the subject.

After almost choking to death on a lump of bubble gum the size of a tennis ball, he arose unsteadily from his seat, still suffering from shock, took my hand and led me ceremoniously to the hot water.

"This is the hot water," I repeated as if reading after the lines of Chapter One in the Big Animal Book.

"This is the stopper," I repeated as if reading after the lines of Chapter One in the Big Animal Book.

"Then leaning over he pointed unobtrusively at the stopper, saying that that's the God-damned goose-neck!" he shouted.

On these things were on a friendly footing with the plumber, I turned to the stowing of belongings in bunks and then went to the next drawer.

Except that my khaki shirts were only stowed next to my black socks in the second drawer, I had no success into disaster. The boudoir bookie's letter in its intimate way:

"Toilet articles shall be stowed in top drawer. Bottom drawer shall be reserved for miscellaneous."

"My equipment was stowed in a shaving kit, which I placed without much thought in the top drawer."

"During inspection Ensign Fitch browsed around the bureau. Opening the top drawer he came across this."

"My God," he screamed. "What's this doing here?"

"I don't care if you have a skull in your pocket. All kits are regarded as miscellaneous in the Navy and so stored in the bottom drawer."

The next day Lieutenant Sands, U.S.M.C., had the inspection. Coming to my bottom drawer he stepped away as if he had found his wife at the Astor.

"My God!" he shrieked. "What is this shaving kit doing in the bottom drawer?"

"It is a kit, sir, and the rules state—"

"I don't care. It has shaving things in it and according to the rules is stowed in the top drawer. This is your final warning."

"The only way I kept myself out of trouble was by answering, 'Well, Ensign Fitch says... or, 'But Lieutenant Sands says...'"

"The showdown came on the next day, the grand inspection. The kit was in the first drawer."

"My God!" shrieked Fitch. "Again."

"I told him to put it there," said the lieutenant.

"You did, Mr. Sands?" Mr. Fitch was incredulous. "After all your training..."

"A study of Rule 13, sub-paragraph 1, will disclose that shaving equipment properly goes in the first drawer," said the Marine acidly.

I winced. The loser would certainly give his wounded pride at my expense.

"So it does," Fitch was jocular. Great fighters, the Marines. Always gave a good account of themselves. Unquestionably, well-disciplined, but you couldn't expect Navy infantry or finance from such men.

"And that's the God-damned goose-neck!"

lieutenant, giving a little ground himself. "It's the most ticklish issue I've had to face in the service."

"Couldn't the Skipper handle this? Captain's mast or some such?"

"—the Ensign grasped for straw. "What do you think, Dowd?"

asked Fitch, remembering that an occasional gleam of intelligence shone in the ranks.

"It seems to me, sir," I said, staring every man in the eye of the report, "that it is neither flesh nor fowl and should be stowed in the second drawer with the underwear."

"No compromising," snapped Lieutenant Sands.

"Remember Munich," added Ensign Fitch.

Both men aware to see the thing through, came hell or high water.

"Where shall I stow it for the next inspection? The closet would do but the heat was hot, but they left me to shift for myself.

Shaving became these circumstances had become too much of an ordeal. At first I was for throwing the kit into the Potomac like Excalibur.

Following the midday meal, the mail was parceled out in the bunk room. The Divine Plan provided, however, a guarantee delipatory or the new electric razor with four blades that made twenty-five hundred shaves with the beard per second. I settled for the latter.

It went in the gear room with the vacuum cleaner, and there were no questions asked.

Sometimes, as with "Sheep" Morgan, this routine was carried to the extreme. "Sheep" Morgan, a blond, good-looking, and a study of the post proved the scheme was not an unmitigated disaster.

equipped with a number-one woman who wrote to him on an average of once a week. He might have occasionally from any number of satellites, but these were held of no account.

each were harnessed to an opposite for whom they regularly filled regular letters.

Miss Clarendon's regular expressions of passion were scented with a zest that screamed, not whispred.

"A woman is passing by," and if the manufacturers gave this a name it might have been "Audace."

The letters themselves were never brief, simple notes recapturing illusory sensations born of the heart's yearning. Her billets-doux came under the heading of freight. They were long, winding, and described in studied detail the condition of a soul that suffered exquisitely for twenty-four hours a day.

"Sheep's" soul was cyclonic. The sweet sickness consumed her like a Neptunian shirt. He had reduced the poor girl, if by the length and frequency of her letters were any indications to round-the-clock recordings of her love-drugged being.

"Sheep, my dearest," she invariably opened, leaning in a rocking chair melancholy to the floor of tender interposed in the early morning light, and down at the far end the mechanics began tuning the planes up.

"This morning before breakfast I feel electric-you-currents running through me."

By high noon there was usually a violent turn for the worse. "The thunder that is my own Sheep peals within me," she wrote as all hell broke loose.

The afternoon journal, which carried well into the night, described post-matin developments. In the evening she knew comparative peace as he came to her "in an April way," but if the moon, in any stage of its cyclical development, showed in the sky, her precise disposure into a baleful wall.

Sheep read these volumes as solemnly as if they were copies of the Volstead Act. Then, convinced that he still possessed the same old was, he attempted to compose some himself. Unlike his beloved, Sheep did not burn continuously, but by starting at her picture for varied periods of time, he could flare up at will. Fired by this Yogi-like exercise, he was able to match her stormy recitals. As our training progressed, I thought he was forced to wait longer and longer for inspiration. I often wondered if he would not be turned into stone before long, or he might perish from malnutrition, and they both lived on a lovely legend in the Air Force.

However, he married her secretly one week-end, and it is probably much prettier that way.

The six weary weeks of preliminary ground school finally passed, and one morning before daybreak we were herded onto a requisitioned bus and driven to the flying field. The overland route passed right through the heart of Anacosta, a little suburb of the city, and around the Maryland countryside, and ended up at a dismal plot of land called "Red Field."

A real right behind the driver, an enlisted man who was spurred on to make and madder things by wild cries of exhortation from the cargo.

"Fearless," they hollered at the helmsman, whose driving had become legend. "You can get out of here, boy!"

"Pass him, Fearless, he's holding up the war effort!"

He was a dynamic individual who felt the passage of time as keenly as if it were hot lead snuggled against his ribs. Taking advantage of tetra-cylinder gasoline, sixteen-cylinder motor, and capitalizing in general on the age's advance in technology, he made him redoubtable his efforts. He tore through intersections, paid no heed to stop signs, and careened down the highway as if he had a rendezvous with Death. I wasn't prepared for the speed he was showing at the seat cover as the bus roared down a steep grade. Fearless, alizing he was giving one of his best star performances, turned back me.

"Some ride, eh, Mack?" he said delightedly, using the Navy's informal "Mack."

"Some ride, Jack," I agreed through clenched teeth.

"I really make her dance, don't I, Mack?" he added another burst of throttle.

"You really make her dance, Jack."

"Jeez," muttered Tim Carpenter, as he was wont during periods of great strain.

We rushed on a sharp corner. There was a screeching of brakes, an uncertain moment on two wheels, then a triumphant racing turn into Hyde Field, and two blasts on the horn to announce our arrival.

Fearless looked at his watch. "Forty seconds off my record," he swore, "they say I'm too old to fight, Mack, but by God, I'll see you boys don't lose any of your flying time."

"Bless you, Jack," I murmured, pulling myself together.

"Keep 'em flying, Mack," and he raced.

Fearless disappeared over a hill as the sun's red rim edged above another. The outline of the field emerged in the early morning light, and down at the far end the mechanics began tuning the planes up.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"The war stories I like best, Judge, are the ones by the special writers overseas who live right with our troops. They give us a better idea of how our men react to things going on over there and back here at home."

"I agree with you, Sam. I never miss one of those stories in the papers or magazines. And there's one thing those writers seem to agree on no matter where they are stationed with our men... and that is that the men who have left their homes and families to go away and fight this war don't want to come back and find that prohibition has been put over on them while they were away... either nationally or locally. They have heard about the attempts being made and they resent it bitterly."

"I agree with them, Judge, even though I don't happen to drink myself. Further, more, I don't think it's fair for us at home to be making any major changes while 10,000,000 of our fighting men are away and have no chance to express their opinions."

Elect Officers

Officers elected to head the county farm program next year are: President, Mrs. Sir Louis of near Mansfield; vice-pres., Mrs. Fern Reynolds; secretary, Mrs. Ina Boyce; treasurer, Mrs. Grace Holtz; Shelby; press reporters, Mrs. Jean Huston for the northern part of the farm. A far greater percent of farm boys were unfit for service than boys from the city.

One of the outstanding reports was given by Mrs. Koogle of Mansfield which was short and to the point. It was in regard to the health project taken by the nation and state and was a challenge for all farm clubs as well as every mother to cooperate with the county work. This work is being undertaken to determine the cause of physical deficiency among boys on the farm.

The White Hall club, the hostesses worked hard to make the usual comfort and at home during their stay, and no fault could be found with their plans. The number attending and the interest in general is about the standard of previous years. It is hoped that after the war more interest will be shown in that there may be a revival of interest, which will uplift all our own county and state.

J.W. FAULKNER PASSES AWAY

SINGLE PLATES FOR OHIO CARS IN 1945; DOUBLES DUE IN '46

Ohio motorists will have to be satisfied with a single automobile license plate in 1945 but they may sport two plates on their cars again in 1946.

State Highway Director Hal G. Sours said only one license plate will be issued to each motorist again next year despite action of the War Production Board lifting restrictions on steel used in auto license plates.

"A great many of Ohio's new plates already have been manufactured," he explained, "and it would be impossible to scrap the ones we have ready and start all over again."

Harold E. Culbert, assistant registrar of motor vehicles, said that lifting of the ban will mean that Ohio probably will have two plates again in 1946.

Ohio's license plates are manufactured at Ohio Penitentiary and prisoners have been working on them for several months.

EXPLAINS RULE

AAA Chairman Says Weight Tickets Needed For Seed.

Richland county farmers who want to apply for government payments for harvesting their clover and alfalfa seed must submit to the county Triple-A office along with their farm report a statement or weigh ticket showing the kind and amount of seed they sold. Guy L. Taylor, county AAA chairman, said.

Producers who plan to use their own seed must also turn in an analysis report of the seed test. The report may be obtained by sending a cupful of cleaned seed to C. N. McIntyre, Room 715, State Office building, Columbus. Seed submitted for sampling on or after Jan. 1, 1945, won't be eligible for 1944 payment.

County soybean growers who are unable to buy sufficient soybean meal to feed their livestock this winter may apply now at the county AAA office for meal certificates, Taylor said. Applications won't be approved, however, until after the applicant sells his soybeans.

The certificates are honored by any established feed dealer who may furnish the meal from his supplies or accept the order and make delivery when meal is available.

LETTER FROM MAASTRICHT

The kind of response which should make Americans realize how much it means to the rest of the world to have our boys helping to win the war was recently received by the New York Times in a letter from all the people of Maastricht—a town in the Netherlands recently liberated by the American army.

In that letter, which was addressed to the people of the United States, the inhabitants of Maastricht told of their desperate life under German rule and their joy over being free again. They said:

"The pleasant smile of your boys has stolen our hearts. Their laughing faces, their vigorous and brave appearance, their kind-heartedness, and especially their simplicity, have told us that these sons of the great American republic bear true democracy in their hearts and that the world may be glad that the United States has interested itself in behalf of our country and of Europe."

Any mother, whose boy is fighting in Europe, should feel genuine pride in this testimony of the part he is playing as an ambassador of good will in building admiration and respect for our country and our people.

POLITICAL ARITHMETIC

The fact that you can prove most anything with figures, depending upon the figures you happen to use and how you interpret them, has become more and more obvious since the war started.

Of particular interest have been figures on strikes. Anti-labor groups have been able to pull out figures to prove that strikes have caused criminal delays in war production. Labor groups have used figures to demonstrate that strike-hours are so microscopic compared with work-hours that they don't amount to a drop in the bucket.

Probably Einstein, if assigned the job, wouldn't be able to get the real answer as to just how much loss of production had been caused by strikes.

The President was right when he said that only one-tenth of one per cent of man hours have been lost by strikes. But the Republicans were also right when they pointed out that his figure applied only to the men actually striking and did not apply to the man-hours lost by thousands of others who, although not striking themselves, were unable to work because of the strikes. The strike of 6,000 transit workers in Philadelphia, which prevented 900,000 war workers from getting to their jobs, is an outstanding example.

Because of the trickiness of figures, we must watch out for them during the election campaign. Figures may not lie, but they are a leading tool for creating false impressions.

"THIS, TOO, WILL PASS AWAY"

One of the pleasures in running a newspaper column is finding the unexpected appeals that certain columns have to readers. Columns that I would never have guessed would create such wide enthusiasm. For instance, I wrote a column about mottos. It seemed to me just an average column, but it brought in a basketful of letters wanting me to print more mottos. I like mottos, myself—I guess my readers do, too.

So today I am printing some other mottos that people live by. For instance, I was touched the other day in reading about William George Shedd, Dobbie, the hero of Malta. He was in command of Malta for two-and-a-half years—when it was the most bombed spot on earth. In fact, it stood up under 2,500 bombings during the time he was stationed there. He was responsible for the safety of 260,000 Maltese. But he was considered the calmest man on that stubborn and unyielding rock. Once, in the midst of an air raid, he demonstrated his calmness by leaving the cave where he was seeking protection and going out into the open and rescuing a cat. (He took him home and fed him and took care of him so well that the cat followed him everywhere.)

Well, a man who has successfully gone through 2,500 air raids must have something to lean on. And he has. On his desk in Malta, all through these devastating raids, he had this motto: "If ye lack wisdom, ask of God."

Herbert J. Grant, president of the church of the Latter Day Saints, or, as they are popularly known, the Mormons, carries his motto around in his pocket. He has it printed on cards and when he meets a new person, or someone he likes, he gives him one of these cards. On the card is printed: "That which we persist in doing becomes easy to do; not that the nature of the thing has changed, but that our power to do has increased." How true!

Abraham Lincoln had a motto that meant a great deal to him and which gave him hope and courage to carry on when the war clouds of the Civil war were blackest: "This, too, will pass away."

When General Eisenhower was a young man in Abilene, Texas, he had his motto for a while on the wall of his room: "If you can't be a winner—then make the fellow ahead of you break a record."

As for myself, I have had different mottos at different times, but I think the one that has given me the greatest satisfaction, is one that I have quoted more than once in this column: "Don't act as if you were going to live forever," a saying of a man who lived more than 1,700 years ago, the Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

That motto has taught me to get all I can out of life TODAY, not to put off living fully until tomorrow with the hope that the prospects will be brighter. Yes, indeed, the time to live and work and love is NOW. Not a year hence; not even tomorrow. Enjoy the sunset today, smell the rose now.

Doings In Congress

By CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM LEMKE

JUST BEFORE CONGRESS adjourned a number of bills were introduced in connection with the development of the Missouri River Basin. This was done largely for political reasons. The Missouri River Basin is of importance to the entire nation. A large part of the nation's food supply comes from the Basin.

THE VERY FACT that it is important to the nation gives incentive to politicians to play with it to gain political advantage. There isn't any question but what this Basin will be developed. The development can no longer be delayed. It will be developed along intelligent lines. The first claim on the water of the Missouri will be for irrigation, livestock and domestic purposes. Even if there is any left they can have it for navigation. Common horse sense would dictate that course.

IN THE MEANTIME, politicians have introduced bills to create a Missouri River Basin authority, which they claim is modeled after the Tennessee authority. But this is deception. The bill introduced by Senator Murray goes a good deal further along the line of regimentation and bureaucracy.

FOR POLITICAL REASONS the President has given his approval of the Murray bill. Of course, the President believes in executive orders, administrative directives and he is a firm believer in government by bureaucracy, although in 1932 he was going to abolish some of the bureau.

BUT HERE are the facts. There is already a bureau with ample authority for handling the situation. The Bureau of Reclamation and Irrigation within the Department of the Interior is well equipped, qualified and manned to handle the job. May I ask, why we should duplicate and create another bureau?

NO WONDER that the people and the governors are objecting to the creation of a new bureau. They know that all that is necessary is for Congress to pass a bill giving the Bureau of Reclamation and Irrigation the signal and the authority to go ahead. They have no objections to the army engineers building the dams, but they want the Bureau of Reclamation and Irrigation that understands the problem of irrigation to handle the distribution and use of the water when the dams are constructed.

IN THE MEANTIME, the Secretary of Interior has approved and recommended for passage H. R. 4795. A bill that I introduced last May, which bill authorizes the Bureau of Irrigation and Reclamation to go ahead with the initial stage of a comprehensive plan for the conservation, control and use of the water resources of the Missouri River Basin. Secretary Ickes, in his letter dated September 28, 1944, says in part:

"THE INITIAL stage of the comprehensive plan should be authorized now for construction beginning at the conclusion of the war, as it contemplated in H. R.

4795. This stage includes only projects that should be constructed with works that might be constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation or by other agencies."
