MAYOR WIRTH SETS WEEK OF MAY 8-13 AS "CLEAN-UP" TIME

The week of May 8-13 is officially announced by Mayor Wirth and the village council as "Clean Up Week" in Plymouth.

It is hoped that the entire population will "dig in" and bring out all rubbish, clean up yards and alleys, and work on the winter ash pile.

Although there is a shortage of "extra help" or the "extra job" it is believed that everyone doing some of the necessary tasks around the homes and yards, will be ready for the street department to haul away the rubbish during the Clean Up Week.

Plymouth has always held the admiration of visitors for being a "pretty town," and we hope this year will be no exception. Clean yards, a bed of flowers, a neatly kept fence or hedge, always add to the surroundings, and as a whole, the entire town benefits through each individual's effort.

The purpose of giving plenty of advance notice of Clean Up Week is to aid the citizens with sufficient time, so that all rubbish may be gathered and properly boxed to be hauled away. It is not necessary to pile up the refuse on the sidewalk curb before Monday, May 8. But be ready when that date rolls around.

WILL SHARE IN AUTO TAX FUND

Cities, counties and townships will soon share in the first distribution of $9,394,380.00 derived from the sale of auto license tags, it was revealed today in a report by Cylon W. Wallace, Registrar of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, to H. G. Sours, state highway director.

This is the first advanced distribution for 1944 monies collected and represents approximately 58 per cent of the 72 per cent that goes to the sub-divisions. Three more distributions will be made throughout the year at quarterly intervals.

Funds so distributed are for the construction and maintenance of public roads, highways and streets as well as for repairing bridges.

Distributions in this community are as follows:

Huron county—Bellvue, $1,587.50; Greenwich, $725; Monroeville, $650; New London, $1,087.50; Fairfield, $818.75; Norwalk, $13,450; Plymouth, $200; Wakeman, $387.50; Willard, $1,750; county for townships, $7,450; county, 47 per cent, $52,463.75; Total $80,370.

Richmond County—Bellville, $312.50; Butler, $362.50; Lexington, $331.25; Lucas, $225; Mansfield, $1,187.50; Plymouth, $383.75; Shelby, $3,475; Shiloh, $278; So. Euclid, $150; county for townships, $10,235; county, 47 per cent, $4,678; Total $38,928.

BOYS INVOLVED IN PETTY THEFTS

Norwalk—Probate Judge Luther VanHorn Saturday morning, revealed that 12 boys from Erie and Huron counties had been rounded up as members of a ring which allegedly engaged in chicken stealing and other offenses.

It is said that the youngsters, who are to be given hearings in juvenile court, would steal chickens and then place them on a farm. The farm owner would give them a percentage of proceeds derived from the sale. Chickens stolen in Huron county were said to have been sold in Erie county.

Juveniles are also believed responsible for entering the Collins school building and stealing $200 in addition to band instruments which were sold in Sandusky, and Philadelphia, Pa.

One youngster, Judge VanHorn said, admitted clearing $50 each month on the sale of chickens.

Stimson Funeral Rites Held Saturday In Shelby

The body of Lieutenant (S. G.) Robert C. Stimson arrived in Shelby Friday, escorted from Kingsport, R. I., by Lieutenant G. C. Phillips.

Lieut. Stimson was a victim of an air crash.

REVEALS SON IS WAR PRISONER

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Smith of Shelby received a telegram Friday from the War Department that their son, Lieut. Reginald Smith is a prisoner of war in Germany. He was reported missing some time ago in action over the English Channel.

Lieut. Smith is a cousin of Mrs. Phillip Moore of W. High street.

Reformatory Must Accept Commitments By Common Pleas Court

The superintendent of the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield can not refuse to receive a person committed to that institution by a Common Pleas Court even though he has no reason to believe the convict under 18 years of age at the time of his conviction, and had not been first taken to juvenile court, Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert held this week in an opinion to Herbert R. Mooney, State Welfare Director.

Questions relating to jurisdiction of a court are for the court's determination and if erroneous must be corrected by the court or a court of appeals. Until it is so corrected no one may treat it as a nullity, Mr. Herbert said.

A Lawrence county youth was sentenced to the reformatory for grand larceny. At the time of his arraignment he stated he was 18 years of age, but upon being received at the reformatory he stated he was but 17, and a birth certificate from Logan County, W. Va., indicated the boy was a minor.

The minor waived his right to challenge the jurisdiction of the Common Pleas court to sentence him by failure to file a plea in answer to the indictment, Mr. Herbert said.

WAR STORY ON WLW TONIGHT

Probably the most dramatic and impressive story yet to come out of this war will be heard over Station WLW on Thursday, April 27 (tonight) at 10:30 p. m. CWT, when Frank Laskier, British merchant seaman, relates some of his war experiences.

Told quietly and beautifully in words and phrases that ring with sincerity, Mr. Laskier's recital, which was recorded recently in a Memorial hospital where he was admitted by being substituted by officials to be one of the most thrilling war stories ever carried on the station.

SHEELY RESIGNS AS CUSTODIAN

After serving sixteen years as school custodian, Chris Sheely turned in his resignation to the Plymouth School Board at its meeting held April 18. The resignation becomes effective May 30. Mr. Sheely states that he has no definite plan for the future, but will take what time needed rest before the present.

Starting his work as school custodian here in 1928 at the old grade school building when T. S. Davis was superintendent, Chris Sheely continued his work at that building for two years. At the completion of the present high school building, he was transferred, and here he has worked continuously. Due to his ability of doing many other things than regular routines of a custodian, Mr. Sheely made himself very valuable during summer vacations by doing carpenter repairs, painting, and other jobs which required extra skill and knowledge. He also maintained the lawns and shrubbery at the school grounds, and in various ways, he will be missed more than just as a custodian. No announcement has been made by the Board as to the selection of someone to fill the vacancy.

RETURNS TO WORK

Miss Ruby Gilger returned on Monday to Greenwich where she is employed at the Centaur Co. She has been off duty convalescing from an appendectomy operation.

REMOVED HOME

Mrs. Bruce Myers was removed to her home on Franklin street Tuesday morning in the Miller-McQuate ambulance from the Mansfield General hospital.

Mrs. Myers had the misfortune to slip last Thursday morning in the kitchen of her home and fall, breaking two bones in her left ankle. She was taken immediately to the Mansfield hospital.

MORE MONEY IS NEEDED FOR HUT

The dollars will have to count from now on. The goal for the Boy Scout Hut is far short of the amount needed, and while many citizens have been liberal in giving money, the committee pointed out that there are hundreds of people in Plymouth who, if they could, give only $1.00, it would swell the fund to its goal.

The Scout organization here is one which many towns, much larger than Plymouth, would be mighty happy over. Plymouth is proud of this organization, and it is believed that the money will be subscribed to complete a "hut" suitable for Scout activities.

Former residents, Plymouth High graduates and out-of-town residents of The Advertiser are extended an invitation to contribute only $1.00. Locally, there are many citizens who do not realize the work the Scout organization is doing, and we ask that you investigate the organization, after which we are certain you will find it worth a little of your cash.

You no doubt have been waiting for a solicitor to call. We are trying to avoid making a house to house drive. It is believed the money can be raised without this extra work. It can be if you will send in your contribution to one of the men listed below:

- E. E. MARKLEY
- REV. E. L. HAINES
- LUTHER BROWN
- DONALD FORD
- DON EINSEL
- MADISON FITCH
- ELTON ROBERTSON
- RALPH BEAM
- GEORGE HERSHNER
- JAMES ROOT
- LUTHER MOFFAT
- P. W. THOMAS
- C. M. LOFLAND
- O. L. KINSEL

Here's a partial list of contributors, which makes the fund go over the $600 mark. But we need $1500. Read this list:

- Clyde M. Etzweiler $1, Mr. A. L. Heisey $3, C. W. Tracey $5, Russell Ross $5, Woman's Memorial hospital $10, Mrs. M. and Mrs. L. E. Snyder $5, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carnahan $5, J. O. Schreck $10, Floyd Anderson $5, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Heisey $5, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Markley $5, Mrs. Mable McFadden $5, Mrs. H. F. Root, $10, Mr. & Mrs. Floyd Sheely $5, Peter L. Smith $10, E. R. Haines $3, Jessie Cole $5, Friendship Class $5, T. S. Davis $5, P. H. Root, $5.

Around the Square

(By Phineas Whittlesed)

SPRING'S almost here! Yeah?

IF PERSONALITY means anything, Mayor James G. Stewart of Cincinnati, should get the nomination as the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio in the coming primary. Mayor Stewart is a tall (six feet, I betcha) gray-haired, blue-eyed fellow, with all the personality any man could wish for. And more than that, he has a record of being mayor of the Queen City for four consecutive years, which makes me think he's pretty good timber for Governor. If Stewart can put Ohio in as good condition as he did Cincinnati, financially and otherwise, he certainly deserves a lot of consideration.

But he had no seed,
No tractor parts here,
No hands no feed;

And they always want
At least one spare—
Here a form, a ration there,
And everywhere a questionnaire.

PLYMOUTH was right proud of its Betty Brown of the Cleveland Free Dealer, who covered the activities of the women at Camp Perry, near Port Clinton. A wonderful story, well supported by interesting photographs—cannot not only many comments for Miss Brown's work, but much praise for The P. D., which has a very good readership in Plymouth.

PRICES on farm land jumped while on the past four months than any 4-month period since 1919. Balloons look best going up!

IT'S STRANGE how some women have hopes of deceiving the scales!

DON FORD not only is like the postman who takes a long walk while on a certain place of a little work, also! Ford, who travels the Rural Route from Plymouth gets plenty of riding each day, but on last Sunday he wanted something to do, and what does he do? He makes two trips into Cleveland to the stockyards. Fred Blackford, who has been laid up, was getting behind in his hauling schedule. But Ford likes to ride, and he also likes to be a good neighbor.

TOMMY Page and Bob Bachrach aren't, or rather shouldn't be welcome at a certain place of business! Why? Well, they hit the jack pot this week, and it wasn't pennies, either!

THE PARK Board has appointed Dan Franklin to look after the grounds this year. Ott Kinsel is taking care of the road work, "Peanut" Anderson is looking after the grass, and Donald Ford promises an expert drainage job. The Garden Club has voted to take on beautifying the center of the drive-way and add other flowers and shrubs. If good weather prevails, the park will be a wonderful and beautiful place this summer. And why shouldn't it — with no gas!

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK—

REMOVED HOME

Kenneth Donathan was released Wednesday afternoon from the Shelby Memorial hospital and taken to his home on West Broadway by the Miller-McQuate ambulance.

PROPAGANDA MACHINES

We don't know whether Goebbels or Elmer Davis has the world's biggest propaganda machine today. We do know that the Office of War Information which Mr. Davis heads is spending a lot of money and has the most gigantic set-up for the distribution of news and propaganda that has ever been known in this country.

But before condemning this set-up too readily, we should perhaps give some consideration to the fact that all phases of this war are on a vastly larger scale than anything previously known. If we didn't have many times the number of planes, much more powerful and expensive guns and more and stronger ships than we ever had before, Germany would probably have won now. And this is what we will be carried into the propaganda field. There is no doubt that Germany has an amazingly powerful propaganda machine and we probably need an equally strong one to fight it.

We have no sympathy with any use that might be made of the Office of War Information for distributing political propaganda in this country or for broadcasting any information which is not important to the winning of the war, but we do not believe that it should be criticized merely on the ground of "bigness" when it is being used to play a role in a war where nothing but bigness seems to count.

ANOTHER FORD

Henry Ford II, 26-year-old grandson of the founder of the Ford Motor company, has been named executive vice president of that company to succeed his father, the late Edsel Ford.

That was the way this news was reported by one of the wire services—just a note on a change in personnel. But to millions of Americans familiar with the rise of Henry Ford I from a poor boy to being one of the richest and most powerful men in the country, this news item illustrates one of the things we are fighting this war to preserve. Not only do we want to continue to have the kind of freedom of opportunity which makes it possible for a man with brains and guts to climb to the ladder, but we want him to be able to build security for his children and his children's children.

Henry II is having opportunity handed to him on a silver platter, but that's all right with most Americans. That's one of the things that kept his grandfather striving. We only hope that this boy, who was really honorably discharged from the navy, will be able to live up to his grandfather's reputation. In a way his is no easy job. He is being handed an empire at the age when his grandfather was struggling for existence. He must now face the difficult task of proving himself worthy of it.

Washington, E. C. (UNCS)—The manpower muddle, resulting from rapid-fire orders, counter-orders and conflicting statistics regarding selective service for the armed forces and drafting of men for war jobs, has undoubtedly reached the point of greatest confusion since the war began.

There are innumerable reasons given for this state of affairs. But there is little indication that the problem will be straightened out. Some analysts of conditions here and abroad blame it entirely on the fact that there are "too many cooks" who have not been told clearly where their authority begins and ends. Others say that the President yields to pressure groups, and that the administration is doing its best to continue to yield to public opinion and that orders are revised when it is found that they stir up too much public resentment. Those who hold to this theory point to the drafting of fathers as a flowing example. They believe that the change from drafting all fathers under 35 not doing essential work to restricting only those under 28 and including many who are in essential work, resulted primarily from the reaction of the people. An aroused public refused to resign itself to the idea that homes should be broken up when thousands of young men, many without families, were deferred because of war production work.

Although the War Manpower Commission's plan for drafting men for war jobs has not been discussed much recently, it is still likely that it may be put into force at any time. According to Paul McNutt, head of the WMC, manpower shortage is causing less damage to war production than at any time during the last 18 months. But he is not so sure about the future. He is of the opinion if workers continue to listen to rumors that "the bottom jobs" are being held open for them, and that it behooves them to get settled quickly in a safe peacetime job, the general scarcity of men will be a serious problem. Mr. McNutt reported instances where, when 50 men were laid off because of production adjustments, as many as 500 men had quit their jobs to seek hundreds of other maximum production strength will be needed during the invasion, and that the "war is in the bag" attitude of extremely dangerous, he declared that "we must hold on to the needed workers in vital and essential industries." His talk indicated that if men did not stay on these jobs voluntarily it would be necessary to employ the "hot rat" at the same time. The Office of War Information has stated that it is necessary for at least 2,000,000 more women to go to work, particularly on farms or in food processing industries where the manpower shortages are becoming increasingly great. In addition, the army is conducting a campaign to recruit thousands more women for the WACs and there is some consideration being given to the possibility of enlisting men for WACs from 20 to 18. It is estimated that the total number of WACs now in uniform is about 48,000.

Doings in Washington

By CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM LEMKE

The Lower House of Congress extended lend-lease for one year. Most of the Members knew there was waste, if not graft, connected with it. They knew also that some nations were spending on the American taxpayer. But, they justified their voting for the extension because some of the lend-lease money and goods are helping in the war effort. It may save the life of your son. It will help in shortening the war.

To safeguard lend-lease for the war effort, I offered the following amendment: "Sec. 3. No part of the funds of lend-lease or goods under lend-lease shall be used, or given to any nation not actively engaged in war against Germany or its Allies. Provided: That no part of lend-lease shall be given to any nation unless it promotes and assists our war effort: And provided further, That no farm implements or other machinery or goods be given to people of other nations that are essential for our own welfare unless they are essential in our war effort, or unless required to feed and clothe the people of nations occupied by our enemies or recovered from them by the armed forces of the United Nations." But it seems that the Administration's friends wanted no amendment to protect lend-lease from being mis-used, wasted and boondoggled. The speaker for the Administration was somewhat offended by my offering this amendment. He said there should be no criticism. He undoubtedly feels that ostriches-like we should not see our heads in the sand until we are knocked out by a financial collapse. He forgets that constructive criticism, and a whole lot more, is needed to protect lend-lease from waste and misappropriation. He says lend-lease was given in cooperation with our military leaders. I challenged the correctness of that statement. It might have said some of it was spent in cooperation with military leaders.

I have talked with too many military leaders—I mean military men—who do not fight—and I know that they feel exactly the same as many Members of Congress. In fact, when this war is over, and the military muzzle is removed from the mouth, they will do some plain talking, and will talk even more plainly than the members of Congress because they have first-hand knowledge of the waste and misappropriation of some of the lend-lease funds.

Surely the majority leader would not tell us that sending military leaders of diapers to Arabians who did not even know how to operate them had military approval. Neither would he tell us that the building of pipe lines for oil companies in Canada and Arabia had military cooperation. Nor would he tell us the thousands of millions in an attempt to buy good neighbors had the approval of military leaders who do the fighting. If he had reference to the political War Department, he would be crying that the Administration wants, then, he may be correct. But, I do not consider that the War Department represents the real military leaders who plan the battles and win them.

I repeat this war is not over, and unless we wake up in time and conserve our funds and material for the war effort we may still find it tough to operate them in the armed forces have a right to demand that lend-lease be not used to build up foreign competition which they will have to face when they return to civilian life. They have a right to demand that, since they will have to pay part of lend-lease when the war is over through taxation, it be spent for the war effort and the war effort only.

engaged in war against Germany or its Allies. Provided: That no part of lend-lease shall be given to any nation unless it promotes and assists our war effort: And provided further, That no farm implements or other machinery or goods be given to people of other nations that are essential for our own welfare unless they are essential in our war effort, or unless required to feed and clothe the people of nations occupied by our enemies or recovered from them by the armed forces of the United Nations." CHAPTER IV
Dr. Warner upon meeting the pale-faced, white-haired, elderly arranged Matruv, owner of the Pole Star House, and a Frenchman, arrive at Pole Star House, Odette Hannan visits Jim Fraser, the same hobnobber.

"You've got a brother a prisoner, miss?" Jim Fraser was caught off guard. Odette Hannan, and he had thought for a moment, he brother at Dunkirk and now a prisoner of war! His damaged foot began to throb and ache, he sat down suddenly on his wooden stool.

"What's the matter? You look all in, anyhow. Odette Hannan came closer to peer into the white face. "I don't know, miss," said Jim. "I'm thinking of anyone being a prisoner of war. When you've been one yourself, you know what it's like."

"Yes, I know," Odette was yearning in the waves of her yellow hair, "but sometimes, well, if you're all right I'll get along." "Oh, no, no," said Jim. "You know what he had imagined about him was correct, and in some way she was right. He was a Frenchman, was diffident and restrained. "Well, how nice of you to come." Netta looked at the soldier as he remained in the hall to take off his coat and hat, now entered, hilly and a little out of breath. "I'm pleased whatever it might cost him. Looking extremely well groomed, he turned and smilingly invited Netta to sit down in it.

"Oh, thank you very much, Mercutio," she said. "I'll be glad to have a jerk." "Pas de quel," said Monsieur gracefully. "I don't care for Odette Hannan," Netta said, "but that's because I don't trust her. What is she up to? I like her, but there's something so odd about that. I agree that she had a shapely nose, but I don't like her, and she is quite young and could easily go back. She could drive an automobile, she could be a nurse. Yes, I agree that there is something odd about Odette Hannan but I don't know what it is."

"A dress book!" exclaimed Mrs. Manvers-Pollock. "Dirt. I never read dirt on principle." "Somebody's got to be a pleasant word to two men excused herself. This hard-faced woman had been so busy with the newspaper, and missed the lovely ones! Later in the evening with Mrs. Manvers-Pollock, she was reading cards and Monsieur in the lounge reading "France Libre"—she asked him to read what he thought of Monsieur.

"I should say that he had gone through a good deal. If he wishes to tell us he will. Don't probe." "No, no, of course I shan't. But it's all too easy to be so commented. Things will go wrong when the new man comes. I feel they will."

"Oh, let's forget about the paying guests," said Dr. Warner lightly. "Will they spoil things?" asked Joan. "Specially feeling reckless. Dr. Warner held out his arms. "Don't make it difficult for me, please. I don't want to be exactly how I feel. Try to be content with that for the moment anyhow."

"Oh, I am, I am." With a rush Joan was in his arms. "You were talking to Stapleford, twenty miles due west of Battle Point, at about half-past three in the afternoon, and the road led into the edge of a little narrow lane. It was well concealed because it had recently been built among the gorse and rather a well-kept, but it was camouflaged almost to the point of magic. Crashing out his feet, he was sitting on the cushion of the seat and pulled out a blueprint. Yes, he could get a map of the area, and he could pass and that would admit him without any difficulty. Pushing the door open, he stepped out, he slipped out the ignition key and got out of the car. It only took a minute or two to lock and disconnect field of six, and many observers are watching this race to measure the strength of the veteran vote this year.

The CIO political action committee has made a very complete study of all candidates for public office this year, and just announced that their endorsements were based on the individual qualifications of the candidates, and not party affiliations.

room; even Mrs. Manvers-Pollock could find no fault with that. And Dr. Warner was delightedly arranged in a very pretty drawing room by a lovely fire—this also an unexpected pleasure. Therefore, when Joan looking up into Mrs. Manvers-Pollock's hard, long face and wondering how on earth she would be able to bear her, almost abjectly apologized, Mrs. Manvers-Pollock generally drove home any advantage that might happen to have. But as a matter of fact she was already surprised with the Pole Star House. "Have you any other visitors?" Dr. Warner asked. "No, no, no," said Mrs. Manvers-Pollock. "No, thanks very much. I should sit down if I wanted to," said Joan simply. "Yes, we have one other visitor and are expecting a second. A Frenchman—a Monsieur Victor."

"Oh, no, he says," explained Joan hastily. "I mean Free French." "Oh, I see," Joan chuckled. "How funny! I thought you meant did I take him for nothing? Yes, he's exactly a Free Frenchman; I never heard of asking him. Would he be loose like this he wasn't!"

"He might be. He might be a spy." "A spy? Oh, not Monsieur Victor, I don't think so. He's not a spy; you'll know in a minute that he isn't one."

"Well, I don't know exactly how," said Joan awkwardly. "Oh, dear, I don't know. I don't know. We've been out to tea, Monsieur and I have. Such fun; we loved it. I don't know how to get to scramble up a hill to a tiny cottage and have tea with a novelist." "Monsieur Victor?" asked Mrs. Manvers-Pollock, deciding that for a woman who ran a hotel Mrs. Manvers-Pollock was not a very good hostess. "Netta Jackson. She wrote 'A Knight in Muffin.'"

"I don't care for Odette Hannan," Netta said, "but that's because I don't trust her. What is she up to? I like her, but there's something so odd about that. I agree that she had a shapely nose, but I don't like her, and she is quite young and could easily go back. She could drive an automobile, she could be a nurse. Yes, I agree that there is something odd about Odette Hannan but I don't know what it is."

This hard-faced woman had been so busy with the newspaper, and missed the lovely ones! Later in the evening with Mrs. Manvers-Pollock, she was reading cards and Monsieur in the lounge reading "France Libre"—she asked him to read what he thought of Monsieur.

"I should say that he had gone through a good deal. If he wishes to tell us he will. Don't probe." "No, no, of course I shan't. But it's all too easy to be so commented. Things will go wrong when the new man comes. I feel they will."

"Oh, let's forget about the paying guests," said Dr. Warner lightly. "Will they spoil things?" asked Joan. "Specially feeling reckless. Dr. Warner held out his arms. "Don't make it difficult for me, please. I don't want to be exactly how I feel. Try to be content with that for the moment anyhow."

"Oh, I am, I am." With a rush Joan was in his arms. "You were talking to Stapleford, twenty miles due west of Battle Point, at about half-past three in the afternoon, and the road led into the edge of a little narrow lane. It was well concealed because it had recently been built among the gorse and rather a well-kept, but it was camouflaged almost to the point of magic. Crashing out his feet, he was sitting on the cushion of the seat and pulled out a blueprint. Yes, he could get a map of the area, and he could pass and that would admit him without any difficulty. Pushing the door open, he stepped out, he slipped out the ignition key and got out of the car. It only took a minute or two to lock and disconnect it and then, pulling his hat a little lower over his eyes, he started to walk up the hill. The lane got narrower and narrower and he had to pick his way through a couple of giant elm trees, the roots sprawling across the pathway. He would linger and smoke for five minutes or so and remember the joyous days of his youth when on an afternoon like this he would set off with a bag of sun in his pocket and hunt for rabbits, and get back as it was getting dark, and then have a gorgeous late tea with his mother whom he adored. Happy, happy days, thought John Wynter, remembering that mother whom he had lost when he was fifteen, whose loss he had never really got over.

And as he thought now that strange thoughts took another turn. Strange things had happened when he was a boy; since he had grown up he recognized them as all pointing to the fact that he more or less possessed a sixth sense that had been almost alarmingly valuable to him in his profession. But he was not a clairvoyant. Someone; something in his vicinity. Danger. — It was connected with his sixth sense that he had round to his hip pocket he felt the stubby nose of his automatic, and personal danger. He took his hands back again. And then he looked upward. The boughs were thick above his head although leaves; a thick mat of them caught among the twigs. Quite a good protection.

"Hallo!" a white laughing face gleamed down at him. The young fellow, whenever she was, had had a fright. The airframe; John Wynter felt inclined to burst his lungs with the foot glasses, swung by a strap, into his lap! Red-headed, it might have been taken weeks.

"Hallo, what's the game?" John Wynter took off the soft hat. "Why, it's a mania of mine. Look! I don't know how you have caught me." Little as a cat in her gray flannel slacks and jacket to match, Odette Hannan came down hand over hand. Like a gray shadow with the cap pulled down over her ears, it's blind, simply can't resist them. I watch them through these." Odette patted the feet of glasses, swung by a strap. "I photograph them too when I can, but I mayn't now because of war. See my book about the air-drome. Oh, you are a stranger and I oughtn't to have told you. Never mind; see my book about the air-drome; they heavenly!" Talking rather fast in her husky voice, Odette pulled a little book from her pocket. Colored pictures; song birds.

Almost every party leader concedes him the nomination.

The Democratic gubernatorial race is "not in the bag" for anyone, as a few Lausche enthusiasts would like to make the public believe. — James W. Huffman is making the last lap count in the aid of his father-in-law, the vote-getter Vic Donahay.

George D. Nye seems to be away "out in front" for the Democratic nomination for senator, according to word circulating in the capital.

TOMORROW NEVER COMES

I have a letter from a young man of 30 who has one of the most common afflictions. He says he is ambitious, and has many money-making and worthwhile ideas, but that he "can't get started." If he only knew it, that torments about half the human race.

The plain fact is that it takes work to put over anything of consequence, and most people are lazy. They make excuses for not starting. They say, in effect, this is not right; that is not right. They will start tomorrow. And tomorrow never comes.

Mark Twain once told about the most impressive business man he ever met. The man talked about his business for an hour. He rose to such magnificent heights that Mark Twain was all stirred up. Finally Mark Twain asked, "How long did it take you to put this over?"

The man's face fell. "Well," he said, "I haven't quite put it over yet. In fact, I haven't started. But I'm going to get around to it soon."

And so it goes. Most people are going to do something wonderful tomorrow. They haven't quite gotten around to starting it today.

Here are four rules which, if you will put them into effect, I guarantee will get you started.

Rule 1. Begin. I realize this seems almost childish, but few people put it into effect. People allow interruptions to interfere. They think of a dozen things that are more important than starting a difficult piece of work. They must telephone, write a letter, visit a sick friend. Anything but the hard work of actually starting. Paderewski was famous for hard work. Sometimes he practiced 17 hours a day. Sometimes he would practice at his piano so hard that he would forget his meals. Yet he said that he never once started a day's practicing without dread, or making excuses for avoiding it. But after he got started, he could keep going without driving himself.

Rule 2. Go through the motions of starting. Open your book, sign your name to the paper that will start the ball rolling. Actually do something. Make the first step.

Rule 3. Throw aside minor disturbances and distractions. Call off other things that will keep you from carrying out your main objective.

Rule 4. Tell other people you have started. Then the mere matter of pride will make you want to carry on.

Meets In Bougainville

Chaplain M. P. (Pat) Paetznick of the Flying Marines, and a former Shelby pastor, arrived in Bougainville, South Pacific, by plane on April 15 and was to leave again within a few days for Emirab by boat, according to a letter received by Mrs. A. F. Cornell, from her son "Pete," who is member of the famous 37th Division, now stationed on Bougainville.

The former Shelby pastor looked fine, the letter read, and revealed he played basketball with the fellows at the base. Chaplain Paetznick had seen Junior Viers of Shelby at Hawaii and believed him to be on his way home.

Pete Cornell is a member of the famous 37th division which has seen action at the Fiji, Bougainville, Islands and at Munda. With the division since it left the States

Cornell recently refused a furlough so that he might have a chance to see further action in a new location.

MISS THELMA FOX MARRIED FRIDAY IN WASHINGTON D. C.

Walter Reed Memorial Chapel was the scene of a pretty twilight wedding, Friday evening, April 21, when Miss Thelma Fox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Fox of West Broadway, exchanged marriage vows with Sgt. Luther C. McDaniel of the Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C.

Lt. Colonel Donald C. Stuart, Supervising Chaplain of the Walter Reed Post, presided at the double ring ceremony. Miss Nellie Bow, friend of the bride, singing Bach-Gounod's "Ave Marie" and "Because." She was accompanied at the organ by Sgt. Chas. Henderson.

The bride given away in marriage by her father, was pinned in heavy ivory satin made on princess lines with charming lace insertions in the sleeves, bodice and long train. Her veil was of finger-length and in her hand she carried a prayer book covered with gardenias from which hung showers of lilac-tinted tulle. She wore her sister Pauline's gold necklace set with sapphires.

The matron-of-honor, Mrs. Eugene S. Koschin, with whom the bride has shared an apartment since her employment in Washington, D. C., wore a blue chiffon gown. The two bridesmaids, Mrs. John R. Davis, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Geraldine Walters, roommate of the bride, wore gowns of taffeta and ninon in pastel pink and aquamarine. All the bride's attendants wore matching veils and carried colonial bouquets of sweet peas, jonquils and roses.

Best man was Sgt. Merle S. Keener. Ushers were Corporal Lester Swanson and Sgt. Jerald Rolston, all of the Army Medical Center.

The bride's and bridegroom's mothers were dressed in powder blue with black accessories and wore orchid corsages.

Immediately following the wedding a reception was held at the bride's apartment where a four-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom greeted the guests upon their arrival. Mrs. Doris Himes and Miss Edith Carlson, members of the bride's church school class, presided at the punch bowls.

For her wedding trip to New York City Mrs. McDaniel was dressed in a lilac woolen suit with black accessories and wore a gardenia corsage.

Mrs. McDaniel was valetocran of the Plymouth High school, class of 1932, and before her departure to Washington, was very active here in church affairs. She is presently employed as assistant to the Clearance Representative of the Red Cross IV office of the War Management Commission.

JOHNNY'S HOME AGAIN . . .

Back from the war . . . back from those faraway places with queer-sounding names . . . back on Main Street . . . back home looking for a job . . .

Perhaps he's been wounded . . . he's disabled and at loss. Perhaps all he requires is some personal guidance and counsel . . . someone who "knows the ropes" and can translate a maze of alphabetical bureaus into specific help for a specific man.

Wherever he is . . . whatever his needs, a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post will be nearby to serve him. THAT job has been given the Veterans of Foreign Wars by the United States Government . . . to serve as a liaison with the returned veteran and to see that all the aid and benefits to which he is entitled are his, without cost to him.

It is a gigantic task! And to meet it, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, for the first time in its 45-year history, is appealing to the public for financial aid. $1,500,000 will be needed to launch the program.

GIVE NOW!

Not too little - Not too late.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Welfare Fund

Every Dollar Will be Used for Veterans' Welfare:

- 1. A Service and Welfare program in each state, to be directed and coordinated by State Service and Welfare officers employed on a full time basis.
2. An active Service and Welfare Officer in every Veterans of Foreign Wars Post, especially trained to assist all needy servicemen and their dependents in matters of rehabilitation and employment.
3. Expansion of the housing facilities of the organization's National Home at Grosse Pointe, Michigan, to provide shelter for additional widows and orphans of members.

The pagan world millennium ago looked down upon the new doctrine taught by the apostles as sheer foolishness. The opposition showed itself in pride and show of mystery. In their unregenerate natures they tried to beat down the messengers and the message of Christianity by sneers and cruelty. With all the fires of impassioned rhetoric and by fire and sword the opposition sought to destroy the belief in Jesus Christ. Yet the little band of unarmed followers of Jesus, even though they were put to death, gained the victory. Let us be thankful that there are still believers who confess: I believe in Jesus Christ His only Son, our Lord. Show yourself as a confessor by attending your church.

SHILOH SENIORS ENJOY THE CITY

Time — 3:00 o'clock Saturday morning. Twenty-one people of Shiloh were slowly fighting sleep to get up and catch a 4:50 train for Cleveland. At 4:30 all twenty-one of us were at the station. At 4:40 Mr. Clevenger came down and informed us that the train would be an hour late! Knew I shouldn't have gotten up so early! At 6:05 the train pulled out of Shiloh. There were just six people in our coach, besides us. But every one was so sleepy, the journey was comparatively quiet. We arrived in the terminal at 7:10. Cleveland was on slow time, so we had a good four hours wait before the stores opened. Luckily, we got our hotel rooms immediately.

Saturday, we were on our own. Most of us were shopping and Miss Felt wonders ever since, and his orchestra was one of the main attractions. Most of us saw "Cover Girl," and "Lady in the Dark." A few of the kids went to the Alpine Village in the evening.

Sunday morning every one slept late. Dona, Joan, Avis, Janice, Miss Pettit, and Mrs. Huston, went to church at the Old Church, Guess the rest were sleepy! Who can blame them? At 1:30 we were at the stadium for the double-header between Cleveland and Detroit. Cleveland lost both games, much to our disappointment.

At 7:00 we checked out of our hotel rooms. The train was scheduled to leave at 8:15. It was on time! Will wonders ever cease. We pulled into Shiloh at 9:53. Everyone so dead tired they couldn't see, but that was all right. The train home was very crowded, but all of us got seats. However, we were scattered all over the train. Guess all of us were glad to get home, but who wouldn't do it again? Don't everybody answer at once! —Betty Rinehart.

JUNIOR NEWS

This week we'll give you a short synopsis of the play, "The Old Judge." It is the story of a boy, Austin Goetz, with six males and six females. It's a play that fairly bulges with witty lines, comical situations and show-stopping laughs.

Judge Adams, Appley, who is known as "Old Coach," wisely dispenses justice in the courtroom but unwisely dispenses with it at home. "Plain man of the people," though he claims to be, he simply makes himself ridiculous by his pompous manner and his tantrums. The big moment of the first act is when his son Jonathan comes home from the university with a wife. The fat is in the fire. The judge sets off for Philadelphia at once to have the marriage annulled. Delicious. In fact, the judge has forbidden his entire family to have anything to do with any of the Townsends. In the second act, the biggest thrill comes when the judge returns unexpectedly, having missed his train, to find the whole Townsend family seated in his living room. The judge bulges up but Mrs. Townsend is a royal match for him. You'll think, "You could be funnier. But your biggest laugh is in the third act, Henrietta, Adam's long-suffering wife, still smarting from the humiliation of his treatment of her friends, vows that she will repay him in his own coin. The judge receives word that two of his most important relatives from England are to visit him. He gives the family their instructions as to how to behave, what to wear, etc., during the visit. His big idea, for once in his life, is to make a good impression on someone else. But Henrietta gathers her family and the maid, Hetty, about her and gives them the final instructions which are just the opposite of Adam's. They all — well, guess you'd better come to finish that sentence!

The play starts at 8:15, Friday, April 28. See you then. Junior McQuate

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO KNOW:

Why the seniors were so droopy-eyed, Monday morning.

If Wolf will ever learn to read signs after Sunday?

How the seniors liked Cleveland?

Why Denver wants to take lessons from Janice?

Why some people persist in driving in peoples' yards? (meaning a red Dodge!)

Where Joan got such a good going in throwing peanut shells? If Audrey ever did wake up Sunday?

What made Charlotte and Betty blush?

What Bob got Jean in Cleveland, Saturday? Nice graduation gift, Bob!

If silver dollars still grow on trees?

SNOOPER'S "I"?

Guess some of the seniors will have to get together and teach Raymond Wolf to always read the signs! Don't you think it would be a good idea, Raymond?

If anyone heard any commotion, Saturday morning, it was just the seniors, taking off on their trip to Cleveland. The train would have to be an hour late!

Just why did Mr. Miley hurry out of the office, Monday morning? Won't your animals stay at home, Mr. Miley?

Just four more weeks of school. Sure isn't very long. Seems sorta funny now that the end is so near. I'll be the last time for 19 of us.

I think that there should be a law passed forbidding people to look in windows. Didn't know people were so nosy! What you don't see, though!

Wasn't it a shame that "Coach" was unable to go to Elyria, Saturday night? Too bad, coach, maybe you'll have better luck next time!

And just who was the "dear" person who rang our telephone at 6:30, Sunday morning? I sure would like to ring their neck!

I think about the only thing that the kids complained about this week-end, was that their "dogs" couldn't take it. It wasn't just the girls that were complaining, lither!

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to want the girls have been thinking about all winter! Oh yeah!

Bill, will you please keep your dates straight? Seems to me you got sorta mixed up, Saturday night.

HIT PARADE

"Oh, What A Beautiful Morning" — you don't mean, Saturday? "I Remember You!" — please don't!

"I Couldn't Sleep A Wink Last Night!" — last night or this morning?

"Thanks For The Memories" of rainy afternoons in Cleveland! "Long Ago And Far Away" — who doesn't like it after "Cover Girl?"

"My Dream Book of Memories" — the Senior's sure should be full.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"We can't argue with the Judge on that point, can we Mabel? It's not fair to penalize the many for the actions of the few."
"That, folks, is exactly what we would be doing in this country if we ever voted for prohibition again. Authorities who have made a careful study of the problem, report that only about 5% of those who drink abuse the privilege occasionally... 95% drink sensibly. Probably doesn't compare with the number of folks who overeat and do other things to excess. Prohibition certainly isn't the answer. It's not that simple. We had nearly 14 years proof of that, didn't we?"

"The real answer is education and better control. In fact, the responsible members of the distilling industry are working constantly toward that end. They don't want anybody to abuse the use of their product any more than the three of us do."
"If everybody would take that sensible attitude, Judge, and cooperate as more and more are now doing, we'd be a lot better off a lot quicker."

WOULD NAME BATTLESHIP FOR "OHIO" Congressman Alvin F. Weichel announced that there is a drive by Ohio Members of Congress for recognition of the State of Ohio in the naming of a principal street in Washington and also the naming of a battleship, "Ohio."

It is being spearheaded by the veteran Ohio Congressman, Thom as A. Jenkins of Ironton. Altho Ohio, by virtue of its large population, has given great numbers of men to the armed forces of the United States, especially to the Navy, there is no battleship named after our State. Some of the most distinguished personnel of the Navy come from Ohio and one of the most prominent is Admiral Ernest J. King of Lorain.

In view of the great contributions of the State to the Federal government, it is believed that we deserve such recognition. It would be helpful in securing these honors that the various patriots, civic and fraternal groups as well as the community public officials urge this recognition by letter or resolution to the Honorable Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C., with reference to the naming of the battleship, and to the Honorable James Russell Young, Chairman, Board of District Commissioners, Washington, D. C., with reference to the naming of the ship.

Shelby Surgeon Receives Commission In the Navy Dr. E. L. Jackson, Shelby physician and surgeon, received his commission as a lieutenant (sg) in the navy, and is awaiting further instructions. This will leave Shelby with only two doctors. No plans are made for securing another physician as yet, but a town the size of Shelby is in need of more doctors. The Shelby doctors now have more step ladders, sewing machines, corner cupboards, 10 Pennel Neck Brahma Hens and many other articles too numerous to mention. Terms cash. Wallace Sinsinger, H. B. Miller, and A. A. Barton, Clerks, Don Hamman, auctioneer. 27-4p

POULTRY PRICE TO GO HIGHER

Last Saturday morning it was announced over the air that OPA had sanctioned an increased price on poultry meat. It's high time this came. A fair increase will stabilize the market and reestablish the poultryman's faith in his product.

Today the industry faces a most critical position. Perhaps a more accurate statement would be to say the Nation faces a critical poultry shortage this Fall and Winter. The drop in egg prices and the cost of feed has discouraged many chicken raisers. So much in fact that produce houses in some sections of the country report from twice to five times the receipts of hens as for the corresponding periods in 1943.

In time of war this is a serious condition. The only common sense answer indicates a shortage of eggs and poultry meat by late Fall. For two or three months poultry raisers have the jitters but this turn in events has raised hopes in every section. Those who raise an average flock this year—in spite of feed prices—will realize a fair profit on their investment next Winter.

Visit Member of Maj. Miller's Squad In Carey

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Miller and Tom Carr of Willard, and E. B. Miller and son Bill of Plymouth, motored to Carey, Ohio, Sunday afternoon where they had the pleasure of interviewing Sgt. James Vaughn, recently returned from active duty in Italy, and a member of the late Major Wm. Miller's squadron.

Sgt. Vaughn was an engineer gunner on a Liberator and had been reported "missing" after being shot down, with five other members of the crew, while on a raid over Germany. Bailing out one at a time, the group became separated for several days, but later got together and returned to their base after 37 days of traveling. He reports the people in that section as being unusually poor, the entire family living in one room, and even that, divided by a small fence which separated their living quarters from what little livestock they possessed.

Sgt. Vaughn is now recuperating from some hazardous experiences and while he may be returned to active foreign service, it will not be in the European theater.

REV. WILLIAMS PASSES AWAY

Rev. Williams died at Municipal hospital in Willard, Saturday where he had been a patient for 12 weeks. He was a life-long resident of this area. He served churches of United Brethren churches and later operated a drug store at Shiloh. He was employed as a pharmacist at a Willard drug store when he became ill. He is survived by his widow, Minnie of Tuscon, Ariz., a daughter, Mrs. Donald Stout of Big Springs, Tex., and a son, Edward, in India.

Japs Face Fury of the Fleet

Swearing vengeance for Bataan, American forces have launched sweeping drives in the Southwest Pacific. General MacArthur has scored spectacular successes in island invasions, while the Pacific fleet has executed daring assaults on main Jap bases. Admiral Nimitz has declared his intention to establish Chinese coastal bases from which long-range bombers could strike. Many planes like the Dauntless dive-bombers above, have knocked out 4,316 Jap bombers and fighters, against the loss of 921 naval aircraft.

GRANGE HAS FINE MEETING

With 53 members present at its meeting, Friday night, April 21, the Plymouth Grange enjoyed one of its finest programs so far this year. The program was in charge of the Roberts and Amend families and featured music, contests and readings, which kept everyone entertained after the business session.

The Plymouth Grange has been very active the past months, and many plans are being made for its future growth. It already has a membership of almost one hundred. The degree team of the Grange has put on work in Willard and Shiloh recently, and this team is fast becoming one of the best in this section.

Through Rev. H. L. Bethel, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Plymouth, the Grange was extended an invitation to attend the Presbyterian church services in a body on Sunday, May 14. Rev. Bethel, who has been active in Grange work in earlier years, will have a special message for this occasion. Officially, the observance of "Rural Life Sunday" is held by the Grange on May 21. However, the Grange accepted the invitation and will attend the services in a body on May 14.

Purchase Building Members of the Grange have voted to purchase the abandoned school building, just south of town on Route 98. They have met in this building for some time, and it being ideally located, the Grange has decided to make the purchase, beautify the grounds and repair the structure. The building is situated on an acre of ground, which many years ago was dedicated to school purposes. In searching through the records at Mansfield for the deed to the land, it was revealed that the title was dated beyond the year of 1800, which makes this particular spot an old landmark.

It was voted at Friday night's meeting to secure land, approximately 20 acres, and cooperatively, the farmers of the Grange are to put it out in beans, the proceeds of which are to be used for the improvement of the newly-acquired Grange property.
