OVENS CLOSE AT LOCAL BAKERY

After serving Plymouth and vicinity for the past twenty-five years with baked goods and fresh bread, the DeWitt Bakery closed down the ovens last Saturday, which leaves the village without a home bakery.

Coming to Plymouth was 1919 from Norwalk, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur DeWitt purchased the bakery operated here at that time by Fred Krumbach. Since then, with the exception of three years, they spent in Florida, they have continuously worked day and night, seven days a week. In the early years they had bread trucks going into Norwalk, Willard, as well as numerous other towns, but with the advent of the '32 depression, they curtailed their service until only Greenwich, Fairfield and Shiloh were on the list. George Shaffer of Shiloh, who was connected with them in 1919 and never missing a week.

The DeWitt's had been in the hope of selling or leasing the bakery, but present conditions make it almost impossible to find a buyer who wants to start in business under present circumstances.

Marjorie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt, will continue to operate the delicatessen department handling outside bread rolls, as well as a full line of dairy products.

It is regretted that the village will be without a bakery, but everyone wishes them much happiness and a long rest in their sojourn to Florida, where they hope to spend some time on a 55-acre plot.

STRICKEN AT 28

Harold Alton Yockey Dies Following Heart Attack.

Harold Alton Yockey, 28, passed away Friday at 7:30 p. m., at his home on Plymouth street, following a heart attack. His death came as a shock to his family and friends, although he had been from since childhood.

Born May 29, 1916 in Ash-ta-bula county, he was the son of Clarence and the late Mary Yockey. He is survived by his father, Clarence, three brothers, John of Shelby, Clarence Jr., and Glenn Miller, Mrs. William Stroup and Mrs. George Stroup of Shelby, and Mrs. Kenneth Mashburn of Jefferson, Ohio. He was preceded in death by his mother, a sister, Jane and a brother, Norris.

Funeral services were held from the Miller-McQuate funeral home on North street at 2 p. m., Monday. Rev. Haines officiated at the church of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial was made in Mt. Hope cemetery, Shiloh.

Mrs. L. E. Murphy Contributes To Boy Scout Building Fund

Mrs. L. E. Murphy of Stockton, Calif., in renewing her subscription to the Advertiser, enclosed three dollars to be added to the fund for the Boy Scouts' hut.

A former resident of Plymouth, she writes: "Many years ago I taught in the primary department of the Lutheran church and I often wonder if some of those Scouts might be sons or grandsons of the boys I taught so many years ago."

"However, I am still very much interested in the doings of my old home town where my own sons were reared and given manhood and I often think what an influence for good it would have been in their lives if they could have had the privilege of belonging to such a wonderful organization and here I hope that the boys will get all the help and encouragement they so well deserve."

"We have had a very mild winter, never had a cover plants or shrubs and now everything is bursting forth into bloom and it will not be long until the ten acres of sweet cherries will be ready for market. A few weeks time later the peaches, walnuts and almonds. Regards to all Plymouth friends."

HELP SCOUTS BY BUYING TICKETS

If you want a good laugh—just buy a ticket from the Boy Scouts which will let you in at the Plymouth theatre for the midnight show Saturday, Sunday or Monday. By laughs, we mean just that, for you will see "Her Primitive Vice" a diverting comedy in which a brilliant cast, headed by Robert Paige, Louise Albritton, Robert Benchley, Edward Everett Horton and Helen Broderick, keeps the action and laughs galloping at a fast pace.

Paige and Miss Albritton, acclaimed in "Fired Wife," which established them as a foremost screen romantic team, are a natural choice to hold up the love interest in this, their second co-starring picture for Universal Studios.

We'd like to tell you more of the story, but rather you see it in its highest and most entertaining comedy and laughs.

Comedy Fresh Alibi
 Walter Catlett, who appears as a hotel clerk in "Her Primitive Vice," was resting after a fatiguing scene, Robert Paige, co-star of the picture with Louise Albritton, had been chasing Catlett all over the place.

After catching his breath, Catlett set up and apologized to Director Lament for being late on the set.

Ordinarily this would arouse little comment in the case of any film actor, but Walter Catlett's case is different.

"For the first time in forty-six years in the show business I've been late on a set. And why?" asked Catlett. "Because I was waiting for a guy to get out of my car. Of course, I've had close calls before," Walter confided. "There was the time I couldn't find my teeth. I was getting desperate and almost on the verge of phoning the studio, but I couldn't make it, when I went to the ice box to feed my cat."

"And there were my teeth on a saucer under the cat's meat. Can't remember what inspired me to hide them there the night before."

 In order to help swell the fund for the Scout Hut, the Boy Scouts are sponsoring the picture, "Her Primitive Vice," which opens at the Plymouth theatre Saturday night and continues for Sunday and Monday. The boys will be on the Square Saturday night selling tickets, and they will also be on sale at the Advertiser's office all day Saturday and Monday. Help the boys by buying a ticket from them.

ROOMIE MOO—It's something anyone can do! It's that funny phrase from "Her Primitive Vice."

TEST PILOT DIES IN PLANE CRASH

PLANE PLUNGES NEAR SHEEN ANDOAH SUNDAY MORNING, KILLING PILOT.

The wreckage of the experimental fighter plane that crashed on the Floyd Williams farm at 9:45 Sunday morning and causing the death of its pilot, was removed to Columbus Tuesday to the Lockbourne air base, where a thorough examination of the wrecked plane will be made.

Major Christian Petri, Jr., 28, Cleveland's foremost combat flier, was the pilot of the test plane, which crashed on the Williams farm. Mr. Williams states that the ship seemed to go out of control about 200 feet up and nosedived, burying the engine some ten feet in the ground. Petri was instantly killed.

State highway patrolmen and officials rushed to the scene of the accident, and hundreds visited the scene to get a view of the crash. Occurring at 9:45, it was after six o'clock before workmen extricated the body of Petri from the wreck.

After loading the wrecked ship onto a truck late Monday the moving crew decided to park it in Mansfield for the night. However, souvenir hunters forced the crew to remove the truck to Harrington's air port, where flood lights and guards protected it from souvenir seekers.

Petri, it is believed, had 17 Jap planes to his credit, having seen the action from Australia to New Guinea. He had engaged in 50 missions and had never suffered a scratch. He had won for his brilliant action, the Distinguished Silver Cross and the Silver Star.

Plymouth Women To Serve At The Canteen

Monday, May 15th is Plymouth Day at the Crestline Service Center. The women of the Friendship and Nonpareil classes are serving. The generosity of the F-R-H shop men, under the leadership of Elmer Markley, has lifted much of the financial obligation from the women. Their donations have been divided equally between the church group and the Ladies Auxiliary of the American Legion, who expect to serve on June 8th.

If everyone knew how much these boys appreciate this service no one would feel they were doing too much. Only twice since the work started, have the boys been disappointed. The Crestline people, of course, bear the larger part but we all enjoy having a small share in it.

VAN BRUNT TO HEAD SCHOOLS

At a meeting of the Plymouth Board of Education last week, P. L. Van Brunt, Nw Haven school superintendent, was elected to fill the vacancy of E. L. Bailey, whose resignation as the head of Plymouth schools, becomes effective May 30.

Van Brunt is a former mathematics and science teacher in the Willard schools, but last fall accepted the superintendency of the school at New Haven, where he held a two-year contract.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR SCOUT HUT

Plans for the construction of the Boy Scout Hut in Mary Faye Park were discussed Sunday afternoon at a meeting of the Scout sponsors, troop committees and others interested in the venture. The building committee, composed of Ott Kinsell and E. E. Markley, were authorized to go ahead on the plans for the building. Under present conditions the committee is finding it difficult to obtain just the materials desired, but it is believed that a solution will be found within the next two weeks, when it is hoped that actual work on the hut will start.

Additional names of contributors will be printed in the next issue. So far, approximately $700 has been turned in, but several hundred more are needed for the completion of the hut.

ENTERS NAVY; SELLS MARKET

Called for his examination for induction into service on April 24, Jerry Caywood, operator of Jerry's Market, successfully passed for the Navy, and expects to enter into the service some time in June.

As a result of entering the service Caywood announces that he has sold his market to Robert Shreck, who will continue the business and take it over on June 5.

Caywood graduated from Plymouth high in 1937, and after his graduation he worked in various local stores, but for a year before entering in business for himself he was employed at the Fate-Root-Heath Co.

In 1940 Young Caywood purchased the meat market from C. C. Darling, and has successfully operated one of Plymouth's finest food stores.

Young Caywood will be 25 in June, is married and has two children. The community extends to him the best of luck, and regrets very much that he will no longer continue in the food business.

Robert Shreck, who is a local boy, and a graduate of Plymouth high, is well known to the community. He has been employed at the Fate-Root-Heath plant for a number of years. As he takes over his new vocation, the best wishes are extended him for a success.

George Lawrence, Huron County Relief Director, Hands In Resignation

Announcement is made that George W. Lawrence, who has served as relief director over a long period, has handed in his resignation to the Huron county commissioners. It is given out that Lawrence's successor, including the successor, will be released some time next week.

Mr. Lawrence has been a prominent figure in the administration of a number of other county departments, including his services as re-employment officer of Selective Service Board, No. 2, and medical field agent of both local draft boards.

In court house circles, it is reported that Ted Jenkins, superintendent of the Townsend High school will succeed Mr. Lawrence. Mr. Jenkins is a former member of Plymouth High faculty.

WILLARD SOLDIER MISSING

Among the 38 Ohio men reported missing in action this week by the War Department, is Donald F. Robinson, a technician, fifth grade son of Mrs. Nettie L. Robinson of Willard. He was serving in the Mediterranean area.

Around the Square

MUSHROOM hunting proved to be the real diversion over the week-end for most of the fellows! Don Ford claims a haul of about three bushels. . . Eddie Curpen always gets his share (he knows the right spots) . . . John Root had the assistance of a guide. . . Mike Dick chose the west side of the cemetery along the railroad bank. . . Ed Ramsey didn't have the time to go. . . Ott Kinsell had to take his dog for a walk. . . Bud Stewart is also another dog lover —Joe Lash wanted to go but didn't have the ambition. . . but the reports that came in, indicate mushrooms were plentiful and that most everyone got his or her share. . . And the nicest part about it, weather indications for the coming week-end look like it is going to be another ideal pastime Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

LT. LEE RICE of Johnstown, O., was the co-pilot on the Marauder "Mild and Sweet" when the plane made its 100th mission on enemy territory over Germany. "Mild and Bitter" has carried 166 different men. . . 31 crews. . . with never a man injured. The plane made its 100th raid this week when it bombed a German airfield in France.

SOMEBODY told me the other day that Wayne Scmerlitt of Cleveland, former owner of that well-known coffee shop, was in town recently, long enough to look at such a good-looking fellow that sounds like old times to me!

 The Printer stood at the pearly gates. His face was worn and old; He meekly asked the man of fate Admission to the fold.

THERE IS every reason to believe that some day Plymouth will produce a genius. At least this is my impression after talking to J. Howard Smith Monday. Mr. Smith, who is a man of figures, being the chief accountant at FRH. In discussing our ambitions of life, he revealed to me that some day he hoped to have a laboratory where he can work out some of his experiments and ideas. Asked what he had in his mind to develop that would be the greatest benefit to mankind, he replied: "I hope to develop a grass seed that can be planted and grow only a certain height — so that mowing won't be necessary." I think we all should wish him success.

THE FURNACE is still going, and we're buying more coal—who the heck said "May is the month of flowers"? He didn't live in these parts. . . DON'T YOU like the new uniforms our postmen are wearing —makes 'em look so well until it adds a little touch of pride when they hand you the mail. Congrats, fellows!

Six Inch Sermon

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Paul Crosses Into Europe. Lesson for May 7: Acts 15:25, 16:40; Epistle to the Philippians 3:17-24.

After disagreeing with Barnabas, Paul chose Silas to accompany him on his second missionary journey. "Confirming the churches" in Syria and Cilicia and reaching Derbe and Lystra, Paul made a convert here to call his "son in the gospel."

The "spirit suffered them not" to go into Bithynia; Paul and Silas went on to Troas on the Aegean Sea. There the vision of a man of Macedonia led Paul to cross into Europe. At this point in the narrative of Acts the word "we" indicates that Luke, the author, had joined Paul.

Nearly 500 years before, 2,000,000 Persians had crossed the Hellespont but had not conquered the Greeks. Paul began a different and vaster conquest than Xerxes had dreamed.

The name of Philippi suggests another name, Lydia, the owner of the riverside who took the disciples into her home. The stay in Philippi was brief, by the incident of the jailer, the trouble her owners received, the beating and jailing of Paul and Silas.

After their release from prison, they were warned to leave the city. After visiting the home of Lydia, the disciples departed for Thessalonica.

Limited space does not permit extended comment on the Epistle to the Philippians. The lesson text, written from Rome, it declares Paul's love for the Philippians, his own purpose in writing, and includes an exhortation, and a concluding testimony.

Doings In Congress

By Cong. Wm. Lemke.

CONGRESS IS NOW DETERMINED to put an end to unconstitutional executive orders. It has made up its mind that neither the President or the bureaucrats will hereafter be allowed to disregard the Constitution -- to usurp the power of the courts. The House voted an investigation of the high handed, unlawful seizure of the Montgomery Ward & Co.

THIS IS NOT A QUESTION OF

Whether Montgomery Ward was right or wrong. The question is whether the courts should be allowed to function or whether one man and his bureaucrats can do as they please with the lives and property of the people of this nation. If they can seize Montgomery Ward & Co. without authority of law, they can seize your home.

IF, BY EXECUTIVE ORDER

and in violation of the Constitution, the President can throw an old man out of Montgomery Ward and Company's buildings, then, he can throw the farmer, the laborer and the business man out of his home. Such arbitrary actions have gone too far. The courts must again be allowed to decide these disputes. The mili-

CHAPTER VI

Dr. Warner upon meeting the post-matrons and the two letters to Miss Maturin, owner of the Pole Star House. One of these letters is from the British government, the other is from the relatives. Mrs. Maturin is much upset over the order of the London Times offering accommodations for four people in the Pole Star House.

"I have seen Mrs. Manvers-Pollok advancing toward the gas fire. 'If this I shall write a few letters,' she said.

"Forgive me, Mrs. Maturin," said Mrs. Manvers-Pollok, "if I ask you to refrain from questioning me as well as that of my word. And with that she shook such unbecomingly desire to be alone that Joan took the hint and left. Wretched and weary, she went up the stairs.

"Always a mistake to admit a woman into your house," she groaned as she walked into the kitchen. "But directly after dinner Mrs. Manvers-Pollok had decided it was best to buttonhole the tall man whose name she had ascertained was Mr. Maturin. She had a great deal to say to Mr. Maturin about this matter."

"Last night I was up to my eyes in the matter," she began. "Last night I was up to my eyes in the matter, and as my window was rattling, I got out to slip in a wedge that would hold the curtains together."

"I see," through the smoke that hovered between him and the fire. "You were watching Odette. Odette. 'Would you mind telling me exactly where it was?'"

"I believe I have about three pairs," Odette turned to the shelves. Her flushed cheeks moved among the boxes. "Yes." She took them down and turned again.

"I'll take all these socks. How pleased my wife will be to have them to darn for a week or so."

"Yes. Turning to replace the socks, she had his hand on her fingers cold on the cardboard. Wife. . . The magic gathered there, and a hiss so low, so low, so low. She could feel it all around her.

"Are you married?" said John. "No."

"How much, Miss?" John stood there with a handful of silver, smiling.

"Are you really married?" Odette asked because she simply had to know. "She was wrapping up the socks in a bundle."

"Really?" The brown was too simple to suggest anything. She dragged the parcel open again and stooped under the counter to find the money.

"Didn't I do it well?" "Why did you do it at all?" "I was so lonely. I felt you were lonely. Look here, you can't do up a parcel any better than a child can. I'll show you how to do it. Her hands on hers and held them imprisoned.

"What do I care? Kiss me. Quickly or I'll come round the corner and see you. He felt the scalding." John spoke with a laugh but his eyes were not laughing. At last, his heart sang the words . . . at last. It had come to him, at last it had come. What he had wanted, he had. He had the thing. The light that never was on sea and land. God in heaven! He could not help but tremble under his lips trembling under his. "I must see you again. When?"

"I'll come to you. Her eyes hung on his as she stood there. "Tomorrow then." "Anything but that." "Nothing could be better than that. You shut at once. I'll be there. I'll be there up here this evening and we'll go for a drive and have dinner somewhere. She turned away, her old foot coming in to buy darning cotton.

LIFE SPAN

The expression "the first hundred years are the hardest" is getting closer and closer to being an actuality, according to life insurance statisticians. The life span, it seems, is approaching the century mark by leaps and bounds and, if it continues at the present rate, by the year 2044 practically everybody will live to be 100.

The statistics show that where the average life span was 49 years in 1904 (the average taking into consideration babies that die at birth), the normal length of life today is about 65 years.

This information may be cheering to those who want to have an extra 20 years added to their lives, but the statistics are most important as a yardstick for measuring the accomplishments of medicine, of science and of accident prevention.

They show, beyond question, that great strides have been made in these fields since the beginning of the century and should be inspiring to those who are endeavoring to provide us with still better health and safety in the future.

MIRACLE HOMES

There has been so much talk about the "Miracle Home" of the future, that a lot of us are beginning to wonder if it would be impractical, immediately after the war, to consider building an ordinary home when one that runs by push buttons and can be built for a song may be just around the corner.

But a recent survey of the building trade indicates that the miracle home, like the miracle automobile of the future, will be a matter of gradual development--each year's model will be a slight improvement on the previous one.

Furthermore, the improvements that do come along will be ones that can be added to old homes as well as to new ones--which might not be considered of the miracle variety--are larger windows and wider use of glass for better lighting, more built-in storage space, better designed kitchens, built-in furniture and improved landscaping. That is as much as the building trade is ready to promise now.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C. (WNWS)--An urgent demand for the removal of all government control over wages and salaries of people earning under $300 a month, in order to safeguard the health and economic standards of 20,000,000 white-collar workers, has been made to the senate by a committee studying wages and living costs. The committee analyzed all phases of this subject, but its report is concerned chiefly with the plight of the white-collar group which is reared by the Wage Stabilization act, to exist in wartime on prewar wages.

The committee reports that the average weekly income of 4,500,000 white-collar workers is now $28.69 as compared with $23.64 in 1940, an increase of 21.4 per cent, but points out that without consideration of the increased cost of living all of this extra income is now being deducted from wages. The committee gives figures to show that deductions among this group for income tax, social security, war bonds and company retirement funds average 22 per cent.

Their standards of dress and nutrition, their continued education, their health safeguards and such most security as they have been able to set up against future needs are being foregone," the report stated, "in a desperate attempt to meet the demands of the moment."

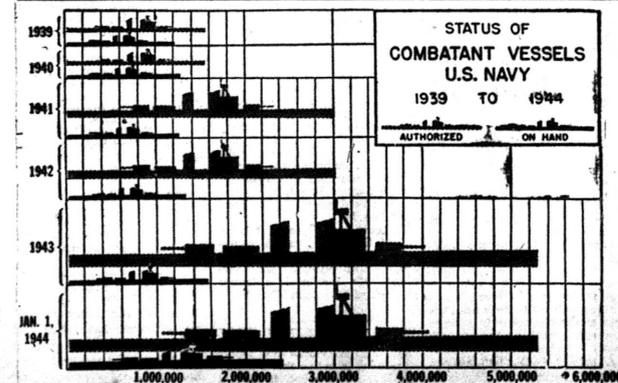

Forseeing opposition on the grounds that the removal of government curbs over the wages of this large group would encourage inflation, the committee stated: "Inflation is augmented by overpaying on the part of those who have more money than they need. The essentials of life, vast majority of persons in the white-collar and fixed-income groups do not belong in the surplus-income category. Granting them the opportunity for an adequate diet, decent clothing, medical and dental care and other basic necessities will not encourage inflation." It is expected here that the committee will act on the proposition, and that congress will, as soon as possible, end the curbs on giving the higher wages in civilian businesses would attract workers to non-essential industries rather than to war jobs. Because of the present shortage of help in most civilian businesses, it is believed that action of this kind by the government would lead most companies to compete for help by offering higher attractive wages and would quickly out of the maximum permitted by law.

It is also unlikely that congress will act on behalf of the white collar workers, during this election year, without also taking some action to break the Little Steel formula, which has governed the wages in labor unions. Labor organizations are carrying on a vigorous fight to scrap that formula and it is probable that it will be relaxed unless the president insists on keeping it in order to guard against inflation.

Although the labor unions are strongly supporting the President and the War Labor Board in their action against the Montgomery Ward mail order house in that company's effort to test the legality of the board's orders, the unions are also vitally interested in finding out what the courts have to say about the authority of the W.L.B. For if claims do not have the power it claims to have they see an opportunity to get out from under the control which the board has been exercising over them.

U. S. Naval Strength From 1939 to Date

WASHINGTON--The above chart prepared from figures in the report of Adm. Ernest J. King, commander in chief, U. S. Navy, Secretary Frank Knox, shows the progress of our warship building program since January 1, 1939, to the end of 1943. In addition, the 2,000,000 tons have been delivered. The completion of this gigantic program will give the U. S. the heaviest fleet in history.

"Are you really married?" Odette asked because she simply had to know. "She was wrapping up the socks in a bundle."

"Really?" The brown was too simple to suggest anything. She dragged the parcel open again and stooped under the counter to find the money.

"Didn't I do it well?" "Why did you do it at all?" "I was so lonely. I felt you were lonely. Look here, you can't do up a parcel any better than a child can. I'll show you how to do it. Her hands on hers and held them imprisoned.

I'll be there up here this evening and we'll go for a drive and have dinner somewhere. She turned away, her old foot coming in to buy darning cotton.

"I don't sell it," Odette burst out laughing. The shop was full of laughter, she could hear it. The parative on the little garden path didn't exist any more. Pain didn't exist any more, nor did hunger. Treasury didn't exist either. "Tomorrow night then. Heavens, I haven't paid!" Shoveling silver out to the counter, John laughed. "How much, Miss?"

"Ten and sixpence." "Thank you very much. Good day." Lifting his hat John went out. Dr. Warner was met by Joan as he hurried up the little garden path. She led him into her little sitting room where he laid down his hat and held out his arms. "Only because you look so unhappy," he said as he dropped a gentle kiss on her hair.

"Hugh, who is Mr. Wynter?" Joan asked. "Secret Service! Heavens, how madly exciting. Now I'll tell you something," she said. "Mr. Wynter has fallen in love with Odette Hannan."

"What?" Looking down into the delighted eyes of the woman he loved, Dr. Warner wondered vaguely why he hadn't thought of that before. Odette Hannan, of course, Wynter had come down at Battle Point to catch a girl out. To get to the bottom of the signaling, for there undoubtedly was signaling going on, the spies of Odette and Dr. Warner were spying on him. It would be torture to have an attractive man like Wynter so near to him, to multiply with the object of eventually handing you over to a firing squad. "I'll take all these socks. How pleased my wife will be to have them to darn for a week or so."

"Yes. Turning to replace the socks, she had his hand on her fingers cold on the cardboard. Wife. . . The magic gathered there, and a hiss so low, so low, so low. She could feel it all around her. "Are you married?" said John. "No."

Mr. Vinson as co-ordinator. This co-ordinator juggled and tried to reduce this increase to only four cents an hour.

THEN THE PRESIDENT SEIZED the railroads and later on, to correct his mistake, increased the pay from eight to ten cents an hour. But many of the railroads boys know that there is danger in such performance. They no longer feel that their welfare is safe in any President's hands. They prefer to do their own organizing. They do not believe that labor and organizations should be controlled by executive order and seizure.

By the HIGH-HANDED procedure used in the Montgomery Ward case labor gains nothing. The Labor Board created by Congress to adjust wage scales, increased the wage of railroad work eight cents an hour. It was conceded that even this eight cents was far less than employees were paid in many other industries. The president appointed a

BANQUET TO BE DISCONTINUED

It is with considerable regret that we, the officers and executive committee of the Plymouth High School Alumni association, announce that the annual banquet of our association are to be discontinued for the duration of the war.

The reasons for our decision are:

1. So many of our members are in the service of our country.
2. Because of gasoline rationing it would be very difficult for many of our members who live some distant away to return for the banquet.

3. Most of the officers and members of the committees are too busy in defense work and cannot take time off to prepare for a banquet.

And last, but not least, practically all of the boys of this year's graduating class have enlisted in the service and thus could not attend a banquet.

It is our sincere hope that it will be only a short period of time until the banquets can be resumed; that members who have been so faithfully serving their country can be welcomed back, and that members of the class of 1944 can be formally brought into our association at a banquet as has been done in past years.

Because we are looking forward to larger and better banquets in the not too distant future we are, at this time, asking all members to pay the association dues of $1.00 to our treasurer, Mrs. Helen Sams.

Respectively and sincerely,
James Root, President,
Arline Schock, V-President,
Florence Danner, Secretary,
Helen Sams, Treasurer.
Executive Committee: Marjorie Ehret, Helen Sams, May Fleming, Gertrude Major, Sam Bachrach, Willard Rys.

WILLARD MAN DIES IN LEAP

JUMPS FROM ENGINE AS TRUCK STALLS ON TRACK NEAR DEFIANCE.

Jumping from a Baltimore & Ohio engine on which he was riding as brakeman, Foster Beamer, 38, died Tuesday morning in a Defiance hospital. Beamer, it is reported, was a brakeman on a "light" engine at the time of the accident. As the engine neared Defiance, a truck stalled on the tracks, and Beamer jumped from the moving engine, sustaining injuries which caused his death. The mishap occurred Monday afternoon.

Beamer had been employed by the B. & O. as a yard brakeman and was a road "extra." Previously he had been a plumber and a garage mechanic, having worked for the Landeford garage in Willard.

Surviving him are his widow, Eva; a daughter, Barbara; a son, Bruce; his mother, Mrs. Emma Beamer; and two sisters, Mrs. Ethel Hardy and Mrs. Emma Harmon, all of Willard. The body was brought to Secor funeral home in Willard.

WORDS barrage
It is discouraging to contemplate the barrage of high-sounding but meaningless words which will soon fill the columns of the daily newspapers as the presidential election of 1944 gets under way. It is completely and extremely doubtful, unless the people show genuine resentment, that the candidates, whoever they are, will let mere words interfere with the fanfare which has accompanied every election since the beginning of our democracy.

It is vitally important to all of us that we become thoroughly familiar with the aims, the abilities, and the philosophies of the various candidates - and to that extent a certain amount of speech-making is essential - but if the ballyhoo could somehow be squeezed out of the coming campaign, the people be blessed to our nation and a decided contribution to the war program.

REASON plan
In a recent talk before a thousand publishers, newspapermen, Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, outlined his plan for a kind of an election which, it seems to me, we should aim to have this year.

"We should make this a campaign of calm reason rather than the usual blarney for the sake of principle, rather than hollow slogans. The stakes are too high, the occasion too vital, to be endangered by unscrupulous vote-buying."

And you, I am not asking for the surface unanimity all too familiar under the totalitarian dispensation. The last thing I would recommend is a namby-pamby, punch-pulling campaign that results in a divided and indecisive. Honest men must be forthright and unafraid in defending their convictions and principles.

EVASION politicians
The preliminaries to the 1944 campaign are not too promising. It is being a clean-cut, above-the-board contest. For it is obvious that practically all leading candidates are jockeying for position, closely following the advice of their political henchmen, saying only those things which is "safe" to say and refusing to reveal their stand on vital subjects until they consider it the appropriate time from the political viewpoint.

Thomas Dewey, the leading Republican candidate, has never repudiated his original statement that he would not run, although Republican leaders all over the country seem to take it for granted that he will; President Roosevelt has so far been unwilling to let the people know whether he will run for a fourth term; Wendell Willkie has apparently dropped out of the race but is rumored to have something "up his sleeve"; Eric Johnston has said he is not interested in being a presidential candidate, although many people close to him feel that he is the very man intelligently if he thought he had a fair chance.

So, as matters stand now, when it comes to the people, the candidates and convictions of all candidates, we are actually put in the position of not being officially knowing who the candidates are. If there is any chance that this situation will be changed Mr. Johnston proposes, it would seem that the first immediate step would be for all candidates who are solicited to run to lift their hats off the stage and throw them squarely into the middle of the ring.

PRIMARY VOTE WAS LIGHT HERE

The primary election held in Ohio Tuesday night have caused quite a bit of interest in some sections of the state, but as far as Plymouth goes, it was an unusual primary in that only 109 votes were counted at the end of the day. This totals both the Republicans and Democrats.

In the Huron county precinct only 31 Republicans voted and 14 Democrats, making a total of 45. The Republican nominee for governor in this precinct polled the following votes: Paul Herbert 10; Thomas J. Herbert 7; James Garfield Stewart 14. Lausche, the Democratic candidate, polled 7. M. L. Sweeney 3, and Frazier Reams, 2.

The Republicans out for Huron County commissioner nomination received the following in Plymouth: O. K. Austin, 6; Dave Berry, 7; Wm. Bolton 3; Harry McLaughlin 11; John Feichtner 11, and Harry VanBuskirk 15. Democrats made their selection. Stewart received 21 votes for the Republican nomination as governor, while Lausche polled 17.

Richard county precinct had 64 voters, while Huron county had 49, making a total of 109 who voted in Plymouth Tuesday. Late Wednesday the returns in the Republican race for nomination for governor was a close between Tom Herbert of Cleveland and Stewart of Cincinnati.

Hit Japs in New Pacific Sector

Smashing Allied six raids on Jap bases in Sumatra have opened a new phase of the Pacific war. Lord Mountbatten has begun his drive to recapture Singapore and to seize air bases in the Malay-Sumatra area. Control of this sector would (1) neutralize Jap positions in Southeast Asia, (2) Cut off Jap supply centers at Rangon and Bangkok, (3) Make possible a co-ordinated drive on the Philippines by MacArthur-Nimitz-MacArthur forces, (4) Make possible a drive fueled by American 100-octane gasoline, five ships like the damaging Jap vessel above, in their attack on Sebang.

WILL CONSTRUCT $50,000 ELEVATOR AT MONROEVILLE

At an estimated cost of $50,000, the Monroeville Co-operative Grain Co. will erect a grain storage plant with a capacity of 125,000 bushels of small grain. This capacity roughly, would be equal in volume to the grain hauled in a freight train of 125 cars. It also has been decided when the building is completed to install a grain drier of 350 to 500 bushel capacity drier space of 16,000 bushels.

The new storage unit will include four white columns 106 feet high atop a head house, 32 feet high, which will give the imposing structure a maximum height of 138 feet.

The new department will prove a commanding feature of Monroeville's skyline. The stock owners unanimously approved the improvement.

SENIOR NEWS

Saturday evening, the seniors were honored by the juniors at the annual Junior-Senior banquet. It was a beautiful banquet, kids, and our thanks is just a small part of the way we felt—Betty Rinehart.

JUNIOR NEWS

The date is May 6, the time is 6:30, the place, the school auditorium; the occasion, the annual Junior-Senior banquet. Around 6:30 Mr. DeVito lined us all up to have a group picture taken. About 6:50 dinner was served. The decorations were to represent the inside of a circus tent. Brightly colored streamers made the shape of a tent over our heads. In the center hung a large green and white pom-pom. The tables were placed in the shape of a "U". Candles of blue, yellow, orange, green, red, etc., marched down the center of the table. Between the candles stood all kinds of circus animals. Our name cards were in the shape of a seal. Our memory books were circus wagons. It really gave an atmosphere of gayety and fun.

The menu was as follows: fruit juice, fried chicken, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, sunshine salad, hot rolls, relish, ice cream, cake and coffee.

After eating came the "Bill of Acts." Dean Wolford acted as ringmaster. Bob Wagner, as president of the Junior class, was Barker. Marcella Clark, as president of the Senior class, answered Bob's speech, and had "top billing."

Janice Black had the "Spotlight." Although she was a Senior, Janice consented to play for us. She played two numbers, David Rose's "Holiday for Strings," and Sigmund Romberg's "Selections from the Desert Song." Mr. Miley, as the "lion tamer," gave a short talk, after which the "ringmaster" said we should consider ourselves dismissed.

We really had a lot of fun planning this banquet, and hope the Seniors had as much fun during the banquet as we had planning it.—Junior McQuate.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

Tuesday, the Latin II class rode to Plymouth on their bicycles. They ate supper there and attended the show. Donna Garrett, Leatrice Whitcomb, and Nadine Reed are on the refreshment committee.

In English we have been selecting short plays. Different members of the class have been acting out the parts.

By the way, did any of you hear the piano duet of Ginny's and Naomi's, last Saturday on the Kiddie Hours?

Did anybody notice those cute, stubby piglets which were wandering around the school the other day? Sophomores, of course!—Betty Rose.

FRESHMAN NEWS

The Freshman class is planning a party before school is out. It is still undecided whether to go fishing or go to Plymouth park for a lunch and attend the show later.

If you see anybody walking around with their nose in literature book, you can be sure it's a freshman. We are reading Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe." It is very dry reading, but most of the class has struggled through it.—LaVaughn Oswalt.

Things We'd Like To Know:

Why medals for good marksmanship weren't given to some people, Saturday evening?

Who got Mrs. Huston her purty corsage?

If some of the kids enjoyed the "moonlight on the water"?

Who it was that got in about 5:55 Sunday morning?

If everyone enjoyed "Let's Face It"?

If everyone saw what was written on Mr. Miley's napkin?

If Junior McQuate wasn't sorta overdoing the manpower shortage Saturday night?

HIT PARADE

"I Couldn't Sleep a Wink Last Night"—"couldn't" or "didn't"?

"The Same Old Story"—but it still gets a laugh or two!

"My Prayer"—that the banquet should be a success, juniors?

"You Ought to Be in Pictures"

—DeVitt hands that line out to everyone!

"Take It Easy"—only two more weeks of school.

"Two Sleepy People"—couldn't have been Richard and Juanita?

"How About You"—just how about you?

SNOOPER! ... #1

It seems to the Snooper that there were a lot of plans made in an awful hurry on some peoples parts, Saturday night. The suspense was killing. Or was it? I rather enjoyed it!

They tell me that never again will they sit Grace Wolfersberger, Richard Cuppy and Dick Pittenger at the same table again. They were almost as entertaining as the program.

If anyone should ask Richard Cuppy what "good manners" means, he'll tell you that means you should keep your feet out of your plate. That's what you were informed, wasn't it Richard?

Anyone heard the story about the soldier that brought the hand grenade home—or the one about the moon that was walking down the road? Ask Bob Wagner for the former, and I believe, the editor can inform you on the latter.

Didn't you think the auditorium was attractively decorated, Saturday night? And there sure were a lot of purty dresses floating around—plus what was in 'em!

Why is it that one night out of a year, that you want to have fun, you always find a kill-joy in the party?

P. S. Snooper! To you and the staff who has worked so faithfully on the School News, let me as editor of the Advertiser, extend congratulations and wish you, the staff and all the Seniors, the best of luck.

It has been a pleasure to publish the school news each week.

For I always found it interesting, as well as instructive and entertaining, as well as informative. And, too, the promptness and dependability in receiving the news on time was greatly appreciated.

As for your column, "Snooper" it exemplified your keen wit and humor throughout the year—the fairness in which you conducted it, the little laughs you have brought to our readers—all go into one thing—you should continue to write—a natural gift should not be ignored. And so we write 30 to the end of a school news session which we have enjoyed and shall miss in the future.—PWT.

The Italian 'Failure'

Before the Allies drove the enemy out of North Africa and took Sicily and southern Italy, shipment of war material through the Mediterranean was fraught with such dangers from enemy submarines, warships and land-based planes, that traffic had to be routed all the way around the Cape of Good Hope at the southern tip of Africa. This entailed such vast distances as to make a British naval attack-in-force upon the Japanese positions in Burma or in the East Indies, next to impossible.

When the Italian campaign—so often now-a-days called a "failure"—was launched, it made it possible for the Allies to concentrate large naval forces in the Bay of Bengal with which to whittle at the Japanese positions in Burma, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies. The attack of a few days ago on the western tip of Sumatra would appear to be the opening of such a campaign.

forces in Burma go by ship around Singapore, through the Straits of Malacca and northward to the Malay Peninsula to Rangoon in southern Burma. If the Allies can retake Singapore and the Japanese forces in northern and western Burma will be hopelessly stranded.

present position of the Japanese in North Burma which is holding up the construction of a road from India to Hanoi, with the old Burma Road and on into China; and it would seem obvious that the struggle between the two around Imphal and Kohima — so much in the news today — is to make possible the construction of this road by the Allies—or prevent its construction by the enemy.

The situation in China today is not very cheerful, and if our Far Eastern ally should be driven out of the war, or should have to quit for lack of material with which to fight—it might mean that we could never drive an enemy out of China and so be able to attack Japan from the mainland. It isn't a situation which can be permitted to lie dormant pending the termination of the German phase of this war, but it is getting any stronger, it can't fight with bare hands, and the present state of inaction there is helping to break the camel's back.

If the fighting admiral — Lord Louis Mountbatten — is getting the ships, men and weapons which he requires, we will probably begin to see "go places" in this theatre of warfare before it is too late. The Japanese have had doubts as to whether they could overcome some tough obstacles to the west of Bengal itself in a position where it does get its teeth into something it seldom lets go.

All this has been made possible by the Allies present position in the Mediterranean; so what particular advantage would there be in driving the Germans — at great sacrifice — all the way to the mountains, and we would simply shorten the German lines, lengthen our own, and release a number of their divisions to operate elsewhere. It seems to this rocking-chair military analyst that the criticism of the Italian campaign may be a bit premature.

THE BOY WHO HAD NO CHANCE

This is the story of the boy who had no chance. His name is Joe Kovalsky and he was born in the town of Snook, Pa. His father had been born in Czechoslovakia and spoke broken English. There was a large family and the father had to support them by working in a coal mine in Pennsylvania.

Something was on the father's mind, and finally he told what it was. He wanted to send his son to school, but the men working in the mine had little or no education. Since he had just left school, this made a deep impression on him. He made a decision that changed the course of his life. He decided to go to school, even if he had to work in a coal mine.

He looked around for a night school, but the only one he could find was run by the Westinghouse Electric company, so he asked the company if he could attend school there. Since he was not employed by them, they said it was unusual but they would consent. So he worked by day in the coal mine and attended school at night.

The more he went to night school, the more he believed in it and believed that he had found the secret of advancement. Finally he got up his coal mining job and got a place running an electric wheelbarrow for Westinghouse. At least, that was what it amounted to.

He still attended night school and studied such brain benders as mathematics, chemistry and electro-magnetics. He went to night school four years. Years that most boys his age wasted.

With this much education he went steadily up. Better and better jobs. He got a patent for a device pertaining to voltage regulators for generators.

Finally he became a "design engineer." He got more patents. In fact, he has had 17 patents.

Suddenly he became important in American life. Our fighting ships are driven by electrical power, and a central power plant on a ship must be built to supply electrical energy to the hundreds of electrically operated devices on board ship. Joe became an expert at this, and is now helping win the war—this man who worked in a coal mine as a boy but decided that the way to advance was to go to night school. And how old do you suppose he is? Only 39.

Think of starting in a coal mine and at 39 being able to do something important for your country. An inspiring story. Hats off to Joe Kovalsky, the boy who got an idea in a coal mine and carried it through to success!

Grace is a hidden strength and purity of heart; grace is a quality of charm; grace is founded upon the fear of the Lord; grace is precious in the sight of the Lord.

Mother's Day receives a new significance in the light of the present war. Never before have there been so many men in the service of our land than now and never before have there been so many mothers who are deeply concerned about their sons and daughters in the armed forces of our country.

"A noble army—men and boys. The matron and the maid, Around the Savior's throne rejoice. In glory of the light arrayed. They climb the steep ascent to heaven Through peril, toil and pain; O God, to us may grace be given "To follow in their train."

DON'T USE SARCASTIC

One of the big "don'ts" psychologists are telling parents these days is "don't use sarcasm when correcting children." One psychologist backs up this statement by giving the Greek meaning for the word "to be by the roots."

Certainly sarcasm can be destructive to a child's mental health. For that matter, what adult likes to be subjected to it? An out an out insult is usually easier to bear.

The main reason why sarcasm is cruel when directed at children is that it leaves them in the dark as to just what you mean. Therefore, if they have a guilty conscience anyway for some slight misdeed, they may magnify a sarcastic remark until they feel themselves entirely rejected. An example of this was told me by a friend who, as a child, used to spend several weeks each summer on her grandmother's farm while her mother and father took a vacation trip.

Emily's grandmother used brown sugar, which Emily wasn't used to at home, and the moist lump of sugar in her grandmother's wooden sugar bucket were a good substitute for candy which wasn't very plentiful at Grandmother's. The sugar bucket sat on a low shelf in the cupboard and the summer Emily was five she found she could reach it and help herself. She probably knew she should have grandmother's permission, though she had never been taught at home to look upon sugar as a special treat you had to ask for.

After a few days of enjoying sugar lumps whenever she pleased, Emily found on one of her trips to Grandmother's cupboard that the sugar bucket had been moved to the top shelf. Emily was sufficiently aware of her own offense to know why Grandmother had put the sugar bucket out of her reach, so she asked no questions. But that noon when she was helping with the dishes, Grandmother handed her a bow to put away in the cupboard. "Put it where the sugar bucket was," she said. "I had to move it with a snif, I had to move it sugar. Some folks seem to grow fatter than their morals improve."

Emily wasn't the least in the dark about whom Grandmother meant by "some folks." But the rest confused and worried her. What were morals? She'd heard of manners, but not morals. Evidently they were something bad — and she, Emily, had them—and they hadn't improved with age, as Grandmother had evidently hoped they would. So she must be different—worse than other children. For years Emily kept this sense of uneasiness in her heart and never told a soul, so no one had a chance to explain that Grandmother just had a stiffnecked way of expressing herself.

Now what Grandmother should have done when she discovered the raid on her sugar supply was to say, "Emily, when you want a sugar lump, please come to me and ask for it. We have to make the sugar last until Grandfather's next trip to town—it's an all day trip, you know, not like going to the corner grocery the way your mother does."

But instead, through her sarcasm and by removing the sugar bucket from the child's reach, Grandmother plainly implied that Emily couldn't be trusted. A pretty heavy burden to put on a five year old in payment for a few lumps of sugar!

When you correct children use simple statements you know they understand. Then when they've learned the right way they can discard the wrong way and forget about it, not keep all their past mistakes hanging around their minds like dust swept under rugs instead of taken up with a vacuum cleaner.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night... about all the grain used to fill war-alkohol not really being used by her. She didn't realize it either."

"It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to the farmers in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling... the part recovered is a highly-purified concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain... products rich in vitamins B1 and B2... so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."
