

AGED RESIDENT DIES AT 93 YEARS

MRS. MARTHA BROWN SUC-CUMBS AT SHELBY HOSPI-TAL FOLLOWING INJURY.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mar-tha Jane Brown were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from the Miller-McQuate funeral home on North street. Rev. E. R. Haines, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated, and burial was made in Greenlawn cemetery.

The deceased was born July 15, 1851 in Huron county, the daughter of Benjamin and Sara Reynolds and lived in this vicinity practically her entire life. Her last birthday would have been 93 years old.

Mrs. Brown had been residing with her son, Ben Parsel of the Bucyrus road, and on Saturday, May 27, suffered a broken hip. She was removed to the Shelby hospital where she passed away on Thursday, June 1.

Survivors include three sons, W. B. Parsel of Plymouth, B. D. F. D. Parsel of Detroit, Mich., and J. L. Parsel of Crestline. Nine grandchildren and 12 great grand children survive, also does one sister, Mrs. G. W. Tinkey of Mt. Vernon.

NEW SERVICE AT BLACK AND GOLD

With the "help situation" at a deplorable stage, an announcement this week by the Black & Gold Soda Grill of its new service will be welcome news to thousands of patrons who, in the past, have had to wait their turn. Mr. W. W. Weldon Cornell, who operate this popular soda grill, revealed that they have now six full time, well trained waitresses, who will with courtesy, serve all patrons promptly. This eliminates the long wait there are two full-time cooks, Mrs. Bessie Barber and Mrs. Alton Becker, who prepare all meals, including the baking of home-made pies and the making of sandwich meat and salads.

The new waitresses employed at the Black & Gold include Misses Jean and Verna Rae Smith, No-reen DeVoe of Greenwich, Florence Cole and Mollie Duff, Delphi and Patricia Topper of Plymouth. Wayne Ross will have charge of the sandwich grill and assist at the fountain. Ella Jane Eichelberger is on the staff part time.

A new system which has proved very efficient in the saving of time is the installation of a cashier, where customer pay on their way out. This eliminates the loss of time in making change at the tables. Mrs. Cornell and Jean Smith will act as cashiers.

Mrs. Cornell states that there will be more ice cream for sum-mer consumption, but at the present, purchases will have to be limited to one quart per person, and no ice cream cones will be available. The Black & Gold will present their own home-made cream. In addition to plate lunch ser-vice daily, the Black & Gold also has a complete fountain service, sandwiches, candy, magazines and scores of other items in the con-venient line.

With the additional help and improved facilities, you are as-sured of prompt service when you stop in at The Black & Gold.

MAY, UNIVERSALLY WARM, WAS A GOOD CROP-GROWING MONTH

May, 1944, was one of the warmest and fastest-growing months of May on record. Temper-atures ranged in the 80's on six-teen days, touched 90 on the 26th and 27th and reached a maximum of 91 on the 31st. The average for the month was 65.8 degrees or 5.3 degrees above normal.

Precipitation for the month measured 2.45 inches. While this was 59 of an inch below normal, rainfall of .01 or more occurred on nineteen days. The heaviest was .79 on the 5th.

As a result of these warm days and nights and frequent showers, vegetation, fruit trees, flowers—yes, and Victory gardens—made rapid progress.

Farmers have been working early and late, plowing, fitting the ground and planting corn and soy beans. Most corn is up and being cultivated.

Wheat, which got off to a poor start, now looks fine, is headed out and should be ready to cut before the proverbial 4th of July. Oats, with few exceptions, also look good. Meadows and pastures never looked better.

Altogether, we are off to a pro-

SCHRECK TAKES OVER MARKET

Robert Schreck, who recently purchased Jerry's Market, officially took charge of the store this week. The change was due to Jerry Caywood, former proprietor, being called to the ser-vice. He leaves next Wednesday, June 14, Flag Day, and just the day before Mr. Caywood becomes 25 years of age.

In taking over Jerry's Market Mr. Schreck pointed out that he will continue to carry the same high quality merchandise, and that he will endeavor to give the same prompt and courteous ser-vice.

C. C. Darling, it is stated, will continue to be associated with Mr. Schreck.

Although a newcomer into the business circle, Robert Schreck is well-known to the community. He has been connected with the Fate-Root-Heath Co. for a number of years.

The best wishes are extended to him in his new venture and all wish him success.

CANNING CLINIC HERE JUNE 13

Miss Betty Newton of the home service department of the Ohio Gas Co., was in Plymouth the past week making arrangements for the Traveling Canning Clinic to be here on Tuesday, June 13.

This mobile unit will be in front of the Brown & Miller store between 2:00-4:00 p. m. where the public is free to ask any canning questions regarding jars, pro-cessing, etc., they may wish. Another service offered by the Gas Company is the testing of pres-sure gauges. These can be tested three at a time and after they are tested the owner will be given slips stating how much the gauge is off at 5, 10 or 15-lb pressure.

Since there are no other testers in the county, so far as can be determined, this is a valuable aid in the correct processing of food.

This mobile unit was formerly used by the Gas Company in con-nection with their famous cooking schools, but recently has been con-verted into the canning clinic.

In Greenwich

The Traveling Canning Clinic will be in Greenwich on Tuesday, June 13, 1944 from 9:30 to 11:00 a. m. It will be placed on the west side of the City Building for convenience of those interested in the questions and answers prob-lems pertaining to canning.

Around the Square

(By Phineas Whittlesed)

I COULDN'T help but think of John Root Tuesday when word was received that the Invasion had started. Starting last Fall he made the prediction that "June—the early part, will be the time of the invasion." Naturally, I as-sumed that he knew no more than anyone else—but now, since being informed that the wgyther was to be the deciding factor for the time the place and how—I am convinced that Mr. Root had been delving into weather records. As you know, he is the official ob-servor for Plymouth, and he can tell you many uncanny things concerning the weather and its records. At any rate he had con-vinced himself as to the time the Invasion would start, and there is every belief that many others to whom he had talked, somewhat agreed with him.

Plymouth celebrated the day of Invasion Tuesday by rais-ing the flags, and the President's Prayer was repeated by several groups. Services were held at the Presbyterian church. At the confirmation of the news church bells tolled at an early hour. It was a day of joy and concern—and while the news is still good, we are bound to feel fearful. But it was GREAT news!

JIM WARD was in town Sunday visiting old acquaintances. Mr. Ward moved to Norwalk about 15 years ago, but manages to get back to his old home occasionally. He's 74 now, still active and en-joys fishing immensely. Starting in Plymouth many, many years ago he learned the cigar trade here, where he worked for a long number of years. And today, he still rolls 'em... and we were de-lighted with a sample!

MR. WARD'S SON, Lloyd, 35, was the draft age in February of this year, but as a postman in Norwalk, he didn't ask for any deferments, to which he was entitled. He felt his duty, as is a Ward tradition, and he bade his wife and four youngsters goodbye and joined Uncle Sam's army. He is now stationed at Camp Lee, Va. Another son, Horace, was a Marine in World War I, but he failed to return home.

IN HIS proclamation naming June 14 as Flag Day, President Roosevelt this year directed Federal officials and requested offi-cials of State and local govern-ments to have the United States flag displayed on all public build-ings. At the same time, he urged people to fly the flag from their homes, arrange for wreaths, posiees for joint displays of the emblem of the United Nations. Let every flag around the Square be dis-played.

AN ILLINOIS JUDGE contends there is something the matter with a married man who wants to be free as a bird. Maybe they are half cuckoo!

JUNE 18 is Neektie Day or Fa-ther's Day—It's all the same!

We live in dark no years; In thoughts, not breaths; In feelings, not figures On a dial.

We should count time by Heart-throbs. He most lives Who thinks most, and to be Life's but a means unto An end that ends, and so Beginning, mean, and to All Things—GOD.

—Philip James Bailey.

POLICE . . . inspectors
If things go as some social planners would have them, our society will eventually reach a state where at least every other man and woman will serve in the capacity of a policeman.

During the war we have seen this trend develop by leaps and bounds. When the OPA was set up it was necessary to employ large numbers of inspectors to see that rationing was enforced. When the army and navy gave out tremendous war orders, a regiment of inspectors was employed to see that supplies were made according to specifications. When taxes were increased and millions of additional people had to file reports, more thousands of men were employed to aid in checking the accuracy of the reports. And the food industry, of course, is notorious for the number of people employed to inspect animals, to inspect stockyards, to inspect packaging plants and to inspect the handling of food by dealers and restaurants.

These are just a small sample of the great number of police jobs handled by our government at the present time. All of them are jobs which may be necessary. But there must be some limit put upon the government's willingness to assume responsibility for protecting us against all eventualities or our peacetime police force is apt to become bigger than our wartime army.

BRANDS . . . labels
One plan, now being considered in some government circles, would probably require the employment of more inspectors than all of the present force put together. That is the plan to have compulsory grade labeling of all kinds of products.

Of the surface this grade labeling idea may sound like a worthwhile public service. Its purpose would be to make it possible for the shopper to know whether she was getting the best quality or inferior quality food and other goods. The label on a can of food would tell whether the contents were A, B, or C quality. Gasoline would be graded in the same way and so would hundreds of other items which we purchase.

But to have inspectors check every lot of canned goods packed by all of the canneries of the country as well as all shipments of every other kind of product included in grade labeling, would be such a herculean task that it is beyond the realm of practicality.

And, if it were ever attempted, one of the chief problems which would arise would be that of how to check the checkers to see if they, as well as the manufacturer, are doing their grading properly.

Fortunately, however, there seems to be no need for grade labeling in a country where advertising has reached the advanced stages which it has in the United States.

NAMES . . . investment
It is merely a matter of plain common-sense business management for national advertisers, who spend a fortune to tell the public about the quality of their products, to maintain the highest possible standards. They realize that in a competitive market, if they don't live up to their claims the public will quickly turn away from their product.

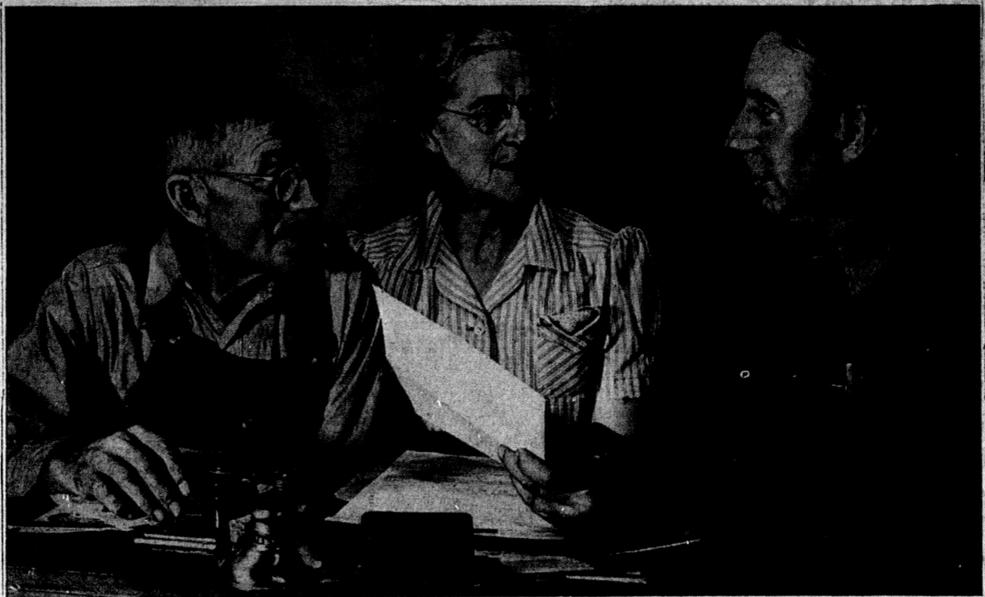

There may have been some product from time to time which have enjoyed temporary popularity because of exaggerated advertising claims, but we know of none that have survived for any length of time without furnishing the best quality obtainable.

Because advertisers of well-known branded products have such a great fortune invested in their names it would be suicide for them to permit their reputation to become tainted by distributing any inferior goods.

That's why, it seems to me, grade labeling is totally unnecessary. There is no reason why we should employ thousands of checkers to inspect nationally advertised brands when the very existence of those brands depends on the most careful inspection by the manufacturers themselves.

The American housewife has learned to select merchandise according to favorite brand names and knows that by doing so she has greater protection than she would ever have from disinterested checkups by government inspectors.

Shiloh News BARNES HEADS SHILOH BANK

At a meeting of officials of the Shiloh Savings Bank on Monday evening, T. A. Barnes was elected president, and George W. Shafter, vice president.

The former president of the bank, Mr. Wolever, had been a director since 1925, and president since 1938.

Mr. Wolever, who was very careful of his own finances, made a most trustworthy and efficient servant for the people. During his presidency the resources of the bank have grown to $500,000. The passing of Mr. Wolever is a great loss, but a higher power has necessitated the change of bank officers.

As they take their place at the helm this community will be well satisfied as they have absolute confidence in these men who are both successful business men and prominent citizens.

Mr. Barnes has been a director since 1908 and vice president since 1938. The vice president has been a director since 1916.

FINE SUPPORT GIVEN CANTEN

All the talk about failure on the home front has no connection with this community, can't hurt it and can't give it its continued support for the boys at home and those on the sea or on foreign soil. The work and contributions for the Canteen at Crestline on Saturday is positive proof that the people here are taking their responsibility seriously.

Twenty-five ladies in three shifts served food to the boys on furlough trains passing over the Pennsylvania Railroad Saturday. The first shift was there for the morning train and remained until noon. The second shift went on at 12:00 and worked until 5:00, and the third shift took over from 5:00 to 12:00.

Over 1200 cup cakes were given by the farm women. The total amount of money donated was $71.15.

It is all you can realize the great and good work accomplished in one day, an itemized account is given of all expenditures:

- 110 lbs. of meat $38.50
 - Coffee 12.96
 - Chocolate 3.20
 - Condensed Milk 2.00
 - Bread 7.50
 - One telephone call05
 - Total $64.31
- Ten women made 1000 cakes. The boys are so happy to get home cooked food, and food for which they do not have to pay.
- Some of the cup cakes were left over and they were used for breakfast of the boys on the first train on Sunday morning.
- The money left over will be given to the canteen.
- One of our Shiloh boys, Dwight E. Wallens, was on one of the trains who received his food with the others.
- An average of 1,000 boys are served every day at the Crestline Canteen.

LOCAL SCOUTS ON WESTERN TRIP

Plymouth's two hitch-hiking "Eagles," Gordon Sealhous and Paul Scott spread their wings on Friday, June 3, and started for the State of Golden Sunshine—California.

They left town about 8:00 a. m. and arrived a little way past Ft. Wayne, Ind., in Cherubusco, at about 3:30 where they spent the rest of the day and overnight with Paul's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hull. On their way again Saturday they made Waukegan by 9:00 p. m., where the Traveler's Aid Society and a bus rovers with bath for $1.00. Bright and early Sunday they met Mrs. John Sealhous and the group went to Great Lakes Training Station where Mr. Sealhous was in training and also had a good chat with Quentin Ream. The size of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station was almost unbelievable to them.

Monday found them in Chicago where they took a bus to Joliet, arriving there at noon. From Joliet they hitch-hiked to Jefferson City, Mo., in three different cars, the drivers being mighty nice people. The next card came from Oklahoma City, noted for its oil wells. Amarilla, Texas, was their next stop with jack rabbits reported the size of young deer, and the country beautiful and green. Here they were fortunate in making the acquaintance of a man in the Air Force who was enroute to Palm Springs, Calif., and was willing to help the travelers along. Palm Springs is also the destination of the boys where they will visit Paul's brother, Ralph, who is stationed in that city. Their new found friend expects to stop over several days at the Grand Canyon, which is to be on D-day of Tuesday the 5th. After visiting Ralph Scott and seeing the places of interest, the boys will return by the northern route—the same way, hitch-hiking.

Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Scott and Gordon is the son of Mrs. Sealhous. Both boys are Eagle Scouts and will enter their senior year in school this Fall.

In this sermon three questions will be considered: What is prayer; in what does a true prayer consist, and Why we ought to pray? One of the finest arts of life—prayer—is most severely neglected. Even Christians often neglect to pray. In these troublous days the world is in need to return most seriously to the art of prayer. It, too, is an art that must be learned. A MEMORABLE DAY

When the first flashes of the invasion came last Tuesday morning, it must have been a moment that thrilled the entire world. Radio commentators, news analysts, press correspondents and photographers no doubt will admit that the day was the biggest event in their lives. As for Plymouth and the rest of the world, it will be a memorable day—and coming on a date so near to our Flag Day, there will possibly be some move to combine the two dates—and in that event our Flag Day will bear a world-wide significance.

The only thing we can say now is to pray and buy bonds—our boys will do the rest!

POSTWAR PLYMOUTH

For more than one hundred and twenty-five years Plymouth has remained traditionally a rural American community. It has passed through many wars and all the economic upheavals without showing any distinct loss or gain.

In the past decade farming has been turned from the long laborious task of man-killing hours to an industry of food production, done in a scientific and mechanical way that only America knows. It is but natural then that Progress is slowly forcing itself upon Plymouth.

When our boys return home we want them to realize that their home town offers them a future... business and employment. We want them to know that Plymouth did not die a natural death during the period of war, but instead planned a sound growth for the town. It is very gratifying to know that one of the main projects which the village is in hope of seeing completed at an early date after the war, is a sewage disposal plant. Already our officials are looking forward to the day when complete estimates and plans are completed for a plant of this kind which will greatly improve the health and living conditions of the town.

Another step of post-war planning is a complete overhauling of our fire-fighting equipment and the purchase of a new and improved fire truck. Our present equipment has long since outlived its usefulness. With the addition of another truck the village would then be in position to enter into contracts with New Haven and Plymouth townships for fire protection. At any rate we need a new fire truck and the quicker we get it the safer the town will be from hazardous fires.

The big question or rather problem for Plymouth citizens to face after the war will be its schools. The building program which was started some two years ago had to be abandoned due to circumstances caused by the war, but which has left the town in a rather peculiar predicament. The old grade school has been dismantled, a small addition has been built at the high school, and all we can do is to sit tight and wait until the right time comes along.

In its original program, a $75,000 grade school had been planned. In connection with NYA and other government aid the town floated a $48,000 bond issue. Today, there remains in the bank approximately $30,000 to be used for the new building. If the original plans called for a $75,000 structure, how then, can a new building be erected for $30,000? The fact remains that the citizenry will have to float an additional bond issue, or be content with a suitable addition at the high school site.

These in brief are the major projects that should hold the attention of the villagers, and should be studied from every angle. We have the facts to face, which will determine whether we step forward with progress or revert to a backward trend. Let us study, think and plan now so that when the time comes to act we will be in a position to make a safe and sound decision on every issue, which we are sure will be for the betterment of the community.

A LATE RECOGNITION

In these days when the average small town editor has to play every part from "printer's devil to holding down the editorial desk," it has meant that many oversights have and do occur. One of these happened recently when we prepared a story on the auxiliary power unit installed at our water plant. As we all know, the council is the legislative branch of our village, while the board of public affairs is the administrative branch. The council and mayor approved proposals for the improvement. Then, too, a great deal of credit should have been extended to P. H. Root, who has and is always interested in Plymouth's light and water supply. He gave freely of his time and helped in many ways in seeing the improvement through. Councilman Luther Fetters also devoted much of his time to the project. He made out-of-town trips, looked after certain details and assisted greatly in the final installation of the engine and generator.

To Mayor Willard Wirth, Councilmen Joe Lasch, Ott Kinsel, Mahlon Nimmons, Raymond Steele, Harold Ruckman and Luther Fetters; members of the Board of Public Affairs, N. B. Shepherd, Otis Downend and B. R. Scott; Clyde Crawford, village electrician, P. H. Root and others who assisted in the erection of the auxiliary power unit, the town is indeed grateful for your foresightfulness, and the fact that your work and cooperation insures the town a safe and uninterrupted service.

Mary E. Daque

If you have covered most of your gardening space in an available garden, the converted planter and planting of flower boxes will mean more than ever this year. Cleverly thought-out flower boxes add much to the attractiveness of a house and are a source of real pleasure. They have a variety of uses in connection with architectural features and are a source of advantage in full sunlight or in shade. Over doorways, in front of balconies, on the sides of walls, around the edges of paved terraces, beside steps and on stairways—all these places can be beautified by the use of the right flower box. Aside from this, it takes very little time to care for the plants and you can satisfy your longing for a few flowers.

Flower boxes used at windows may be placed above the sill level if you have double hung windows. But where you have shutters on your house that are intended to be closed or if you have out-swing casement windows, then you will have to place the boxes low enough to allow for clearance of these moving features.

On balconies you can easily put your flower-box where it will be most convenient and attractive. You may want to increase the effect of height by putting the box on top of the railing. An effect of width and breadth is obtained if the box is placed in front of the balcony. Drainage is very important in all window boxes and must be handled in the usual way by using a layer of coarse gravel or broken crockery in the bottom of the box. If your box has a metal lining this should have holes in it in line with holes in the bottom of the box.

Plants that will keep in good condition throughout the season are desirable. If you want a flower effect petunias and geraniums and lobelias are satisfactory. Dracaena, crotons and Kenilworths may make good foliage plants. Catclaudium with its lovely rose tinted leaves are satisfactory. Fuchsias and lantanas are delightful in flower boxes and do well in partial shade. Coleus is a snooty colored plant that prefers more shade than sun.

The laundering of summer dresses is an easy task if you follow the following rules. Dark colors should be ironed on the wrong side to prevent iron marks from showing on the right side. Textured materials, too, should be ironed on the wrong side in order to bring out the texture of the fabric. Pin-tucks, lace and embroidery should be ironed on the wrong side. Ironing should be done on iron for rayon fabrics. All synthetic fabrics should be ironed on the wrong side. Ironing should be done on the right side, use a press cloth.

HARMONES TO INCREASE HUMAN HEIGHT

The scientific world is hailing another brilliant achievement—the isolation of the "growth hormone." The climax of a laboratory adventure, this hormone is one of the most important of any detective story, this new wonder-working extract taken from the pituitary gland of cattle adds inches or feet to one's height. For more on this interesting subject, read "The American Weekly with this Sunday's, June 11, issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.

Doings In Congress

By Cong. Wm. Lemke.

CONGRESS IS NOW HURRYING

ing legislation in order to recess for the national convention. The question of the Arabian oil line is again with us. I am satisfied that Congress will not appropriate 165 million dollars of the taxpayers' money to finance the Middle East oil line—the Arabian oil pipe line. This proposition has been steadily promoted with the American taxpayers' money. It is an attempt to fleece the American taxpayers for foreign promoters.

GRADUALLY THE TRUTH IS COMING TO LIGHT is coming to light. Unfortunately, however, about 95 per cent of all avenues of publicity are in the hands of a few internationalists. They control the radio, the press, and the Metropolitan press. They would tax the coast off the backs of Americans in order to play Santa Claus to foreign and domestic financiers. When this Arabian project is first proposed to Congress and the public, millions of tons of print paper were used in spreading false propaganda — in misinforming the American people — as a war effort. It was blazoned on front pages of newspapers all over the nation. We are told that our domestic oil supply would be exhausted in 14 years. A careful checkup, however, reveals that there are, in potential existence in the western hemisphere, over two hundred billion barrels. It is now estimated, by men who know, that we have a potential oil supply in excess of that available in this country to last us, at least, a thousand years, and there will be other discoveries.

THIS PROPOSAL WAS HAILED AS A WAR EFFORT

CHAPTER X

Mrs. Manver-Pollock, the guest at Pole Star House, off the coast of England, believes that she is going on a trip to the hotel. She tells John Wynter, an earnest agent who has come from London to check up on this, and he notes a tiny twinkling signal in the darkness. He sees the signal, Alfred Cummins, who proves innocent enough, Cummins is the man Wynter that "that man" is at the hotel, and has taken a room overlooking the sea. Wynter details Cummins to watch the man and report on everything he does.

"Before God, sir," said Alfred, his eyes wide and strait as if he were in a trap. "Yes, I think I can trust you all right." John was silent for a second or two. "You're one of his lot, 'Hell Hitler'?" "Say it under your breath when you're adding round his room, so that you can turn it off into a joke if necessary. If you can bring him back, Alfred, you're a made man."

"Sir." "And now you must get back," said John briefly. "And don't forget this, Alfred—as he stood there looking at you, put your hand on his shoulder—you're embarking on a dangerous and difficult job. Mr. Lecker is not a man to be taken as a common criminal. I'll explain as much as I can to Mrs. Maturin. Good luck."

"Thank you, sir," and Alfred had gone. The manager of the Point Hotel spoke respectfully to Fergus Leiter. "Yes, he's a good boy, sir, is Alfred. Very handy with his fingers and his mind. He's a good fellow, if he might unspack for you. Well, thanks very much. I'll remember that for the future. Oh, about the phone in my room, how does it work? Is it on the main line or is it connected up through the hotel?"

"The hall porter does it, sir," Alfred said. "He's a good fellow, but he's a bit slow. But Fergus did not want to have one's mind absolutely clear and not make a false move. It was the day of the big raid on Swansea. Before then he would have been a great help, but he might even know a little more in what direction the boy Alfred's sympathies lay.

Fergus Leiter got up and walked to the window. About three miles out to sea those planes would pass on their way to Swansea. No shutters to his window, but that need not matter, as Odette had shutters to hers, and very useful they had been during the last few days. "Come in!" He turned at a knock. "It's only me, sir, wondering if I could do anything to help." Alfred, sitting at the desk, was standing with his hands together. "Oh, thanks very much. You've done a great deal for me already. Fergus spoke cordially. "How did you know I hated unspacking?"

"Did you, indeed? Do you often feel things of that kind?" "Yes, sir. I think I might as well find out what he could about this youth. Never neglect an opportunity to get across the room and get into him during his Heidelberg University days. What attention to detail the fellow had, and what in what good stead it had done them. Look at them now, for instance, the great actor, the man at the Daily Telegraph map planned neatly on the wall. Ah, the boy was a genius from the start. He was tipping across the room to look at it more closely.

"Fergus spoke easily. "They've overrun the whole continent, blast their eyes. Well, there's no more to be said. I came to unspack for you, I saw it first thing."

"Did you, yes. I always carry it round in the car with me, drawing pins and all. Yes, it's an awful thing. Fergus, lighting a cigarette. "Doesn't it seem to you that a lot of little brute dominating all these millions of helpless people? Horrible!"

"Yes, sir." "It does seem to think so," said Fergus with a smile. "Oh, yes, I do, sir," said Alfred, suddenly swinging round his honest to goodness wide open. "But there's another side to it, sir, and you being a gentleman won't misunderstand me. Even the Hitler, he is at least a man! Fancy having a man like that to look up to and follow. It's a good thing, sir. Alfred stopped speaking.

"I would die for him, sir," said Alfred earnestly. "Oh, I know I ought not to speak to you like this, but you won't be against me, will you?" "No, I'm interested. I like to hear young man like you say things of your mind. It won't go any further, I can promise you that." "Fergus smiled. "Look at us here, for instance, half asleep we are. There's only one of us that seems to me fit to be a leader." "No," and then Alfred stopped dead. Had he gone too far? His queer intuitive brain waited for his reaction. No, he was all right. He stood with eyes cast down. "What's the matter here?" Fergus was laughing. Nice hearty laughter, useful for encouraging confidence.

"Well, it's like this, sir," Alfred came picking his way across the carpet. "It's this, sir, there's a young lady here, sir. I won't say her name, better not. But I've a feeling that she's in Hitler's pay, sir."

"What?" And now Fergus really shivered. Because it was this youth who had said that. "Go on," he said. "I've no reason for thinking so, sir, except that it takes me here," said Alfred, pressing his hand to his white coat pocket. "And sometimes it's all I can do not to say to her, 'Let me help you, miss, let me help you.' And then it comes over me all the same. 'Alfred, you're a traitor to your country.'"

"I see. Enough for the moment, Alfred," said Fergus suddenly. "Better not go further, than this till he was more certain. At Pole Star House, John Wynter stood at his bedroom window staring out to sea. He wanted to get his bearings properly before the black-out. Warner had been extremely nice the evening before, and so he had decided to make a clean breast of everything. Dr. Warner had listened and grasped the situation instantly.

"No, stay on here," he said as John stepped out. "There may be complications. It might be necessary for me to have Miss Hannan under this roof," said John. "I don't know if it may not be safer for her to continue to live alone and unprotected."

"It makes me feel a cad," said John quietly. "to use this house as a sort of jumping-off point for my underground activities. Miss Leiler stick at nothing. He intends to give information across to the planes flying in the South Seas. The Germans are not tender in their methods of gathering. Well, there might even be danger to John simply."

"In which case I should be useful," said Dr. Warner whimsically. "If by extending our hospitality to you and Miss Hannan we can help you in any way, we are prepared to do so. That is to say, if Miss Hannan is not acting treacherously. Of course, the student's come here."

"Yes, that's the point," said John. "In this house I should have two motives. One to keep her safe from harm; the other to catch her in an enormous amount of writing to act treacherously. I am fairly certain of that."

"I see," Dr. Warner pondered. "Have you any way of being able to catch her out?" "Immediately," said John. "I'll tell you. I'll tell you. Warner smiled. "I shall not tell Mrs. Maturin, but I know that she would be content for me to decide for myself." "Thanks very much," and as John stood and stared out on to the darkening horizon he said to himself that it would not be long. The next day he kept to the house. He had an enormous amount of writing to do—reports to be sent in. So he did not slide into the curb outside Odette's shop until nearly six. The shop was empty. Leiter had been there; there was no need even to wait for him. "You look tired," John set his hat down on the counter and narrowed his eyes. "Who wouldn't, after a day in a shop like this?" "Somebody! But I'm sorry I can't ask you to stay because I've got some accounts to do."

Alfred, you're a traitor to your country.

"I'm sure you're excellent at accounts. I can disentangle all the difficulties in the same time that our friend Jack Robinson could have done them."

"Sorry, but I don't want you here tonight." "Don't be a goose," John smiled. "At what time exactly are you expecting that nasty piece of work from the Point Hotel?" "Who are you referring to?" "Who do you think?" John sat sideways on the counter and twitched at a silk tie. "I will give you three guesses," he said. "Please go away and leave me alone." Odette's trembling hands were busy with her hair of silk stockings. He leaned forward and took them in his.

"Why have her pale gaze leaped to the glass door. If only the brute would arrive and see them like this 'might save quite a lot of time. John reflected. He slipped his fingers to her wrist, holding it fast. "Why have you suddenly ceased to like me?" "You take too much for granted. Let me go."

"You take too much for granted. Let me go." "You take too much for granted. Let me go." "You take too much for granted. Let me go."

"I have already told you that I can't have a single idea. I will wait in fact, if you weren't so frightfully conceited you would have gone away long ago."

"For answer he took her face between his hands and kissed it as gently as he could. "I'm not sure, in fact, if you weren't so frightfully conceited you would have gone away long ago."

"I am not afraid of him," Odette said. "I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him."

"I am not afraid of him," Odette said. "I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him."

THE TIME HAS COME THAT

we demand a higher standard of honesty from the international clique that wishes to establish world monopolies. That wishes to establish control of the world of other nations by putting Uncle Sam's dollars into foreign pipe lines, and then having Uncle Sam's sons guard and protect these investments. These un-American hypocrisies must be broken. Americans still believe that the flag follows the dollar.

Invasion's Vital Miles

Map above shows varying distances Allied invasion craft face to effect landings at opposite ports on the coast of Hitler's European Fortress. They will travel under the most gigantic "aerial umbrella" of planes the war has produced. Fueled with U. S.-made 100-octane gas, which enables them to carry a greater bombload than otherwise possible, Allied bombers will blast Nazi beachhead defenses and the reserves far behind battlelines. Photo below, radioed from London, shows U. S. invasion boats massed in English harbor, awaiting D-Day order. "Shove off!"

OBITUARY

Helen Grace Snyder, daughter of Phillip and Alice Snyder, was born in Greenwich, Ohio, December 15, 1881, and departed this life on May 29, 1944.

Her girlhood days were spent in Greenwich and it was here she became a member of the Church of Christ.

She was married to Jay B. Snyder on January 30, 1904, and to this union were born four children, Alice Lucille, Madge Christine, Donald Phillip, and Billy Edwin. Her parents, two brothers and a sister preceded her in death. One brother, Warren W. of Cleveland, Ohio, is still living. Last rites were held Friday, June 2, with Rev. H. L. Bethel, Presbyterian pastor, officiating, and burial made in Greenlawn cemetery, Greenwich, Ohio.

In Memoriam
 You cannot say, you will not say, that she is dead.

She is just away!
 With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
 She has wandered into an unknown land,
 And left us dreaming how very fair
 It needs must be, since she lingers there;
 So think of her faring on, as dear,
 In the love of There as the love of Here,
 Think of her still as the same, and say
 She is not dead, she is just away.
