

LETTERS FROM OUR BOYS

News From France
Another one of our local boys writes home from France. Pfc. Russell Entler, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Entler, says "Just a few lines to let you know I'm fine. I am deep in the heart of combat and outside of a few German artillery shells and the rain, I'm fine. I've had a few close shaves but think I'll make it. You see I'm in an artillery company in support of the rifle company and I don't have to be the front all the time, but we have our ups there and my jeep puts the wire lines to them. I have to go at that time and when the lines go out we fix them. Sometimes it is so quiet around here you can hear the night birds and other times it is so noisy you can't hear yourself holler. Two other boys in the wire section line and myself live in a hole a few feet deep and sometimes it rains on us, but we don't mind that."
Tel. Tommy I've received one Plymouth paper here and also that his little paper gets around. The scenery here is beautiful, but the towns are being bombed by our artillery fire. France is a pretty country, though.

One of the boys killed a rabbit and we ate it and he said he wanted to kill a calf, but our lieutenant said "no." I am sending a pound note in English money about $4.00 in value. I have a franc note worth about 10c, so please save them for me.

He closed his letter with a few personal remarks to the family.

Reaches France In Gliders
Clay Foraker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Foraker, writes a V-mail letter home from France where he arrived during the invasion. He is one of the few members of the airborne troops from this vicinity and he, too, speaks of the rain. His letter is interesting, and is as follows:

Dear Mother:
Just a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along ok. I hope this letter finds all you folks at home well.
I thought we had a good time, but I haven't heard yet if we would or not.
I am in the 82nd division now. That is where the boys are. I hope I am getting along ok. We are here in France and we have been here ever since we landed and have seen some pretty tough days.
It is starting to rain here again, so I think I had better say good bye for this time. Hoping to hear from you soon. Love to all.

Sagan Railroad Chief Is Shelby Ensign
Dispatcher of the 30-in narrow gauge Sagan railroad, now under new management after its seizure by the Federal Government, is Navy Ensign John S. Stock of Shelby, Ohio.

Through such troubles as Japanese snipers and bomb-blasted tracks operations have been hampered, but the new head man hopes shortly to have a dependable system under way. All trains operating on schedule from Charan-Kanoo and Garapan.

Ensign Stock, at 26, has only two months to 'dispatch' over the sixty mile track laid by the Japanese, but two more are being repaired and Navy Seabees are at work on damaged sections of the roadbed.

"Mud In Your Eye"
What's a little mud in New Guinea even if it is only ankle deep and rain coming down in buckets? After all, it's only mud and rain. Edith Hyer of W. High street received several letters this week from her son, Dan, now located in the G.I. mess. Danny says, "it sure is a mess. We are lucky I guess, at least we have tents to sleep in but half of them are flooded. You get out of bed in the morning and it is still dark and land your feet in muddy water. To get to the kitchen you should have a row boat, but we just waded right through."
Even so, the breakfasts aren't bad, she mentions. "I don't like meat—some call it bacon, but it's hog meat to me, fried potatoes, hominy grits and coffee. I don't like it. Outside of that everything is fine."

A second letter says "things are looking up over here. Maybe we are just getting used to it. It's not half so bad as they say. Of course, we aren't winning, but I don't think anything of it anymore."
"We have a little garden started and I never stops raining long enough. I'll be glad to work in it. When we get straightened out a little, we will have a picture show. What's a little rain when there is a show on? Of course, it's fine."

FORMER RESIDENT OF NORWALK DROWNS
Word has been received of the accidental drowning of Archie Bluff, 57, former Norwalk resident, who has been residing in Toledo. The accident occurred on a fishing trip in Northern Michigan. He was born and reared at Steuben, O.

Survivors include his widow and two daughters, Margaret and Norma at home, a brother, William of Steuben, and a sister, Mrs. Herman Morlock, also of Steuben. A half sister, Mrs. F. L. Bluff, resides in Norwalk.

Funeral services were held in Toledo.

BALLOTS NOW READY FOR SERVICE MEN

The Huron County Board of Elections announces that the court house in Norwalk will be open daily from 9:00 to 12:00 and from 1:00 to 4:00 for any person who wishes to make an application for a ballot to be sent to members of the Armed Forces.

There are two methods by which a member of the Armed Forces may secure a ballot:

1. By sending a letter direct to the Board of Elections office, Norwalk, Ohio, or use the card provided by the Government.

2. A relative may apply at the office of the Board of Elections for a ballot.

The ballots will be ready to mail Aug. 9th. Any person who is home between Aug. 9 and noon of election day may go to the office of the Board in the Court House and vote there.

The Board urges all parents and relatives to make an effort to see to it that their boy is given an opportunity to vote.

SHELBY DEPOT NEEDS HELPERS

An airplane is a weapon only if it can be kept in repair, so, with the invasion of the continent, whole repair and supply units must follow the planes to advanced, isolated positions, fully equipped to operate under fire. Supply lines, long and difficult even before D-day, must be kept functioning under even more adverse conditions—for an air force is only as good as its supply lines. The Air Service Command provides mobile repair units, the air transport service, and the advanced depots, which can be moved forward in entirety in 12 hours with their own transportation, but back home, parent depots, such as the 831st at Shelby, Ohio, first must handle all this.

Men and women are needed there to get these vital supplies started on their long journey to the front. Clerks, typists, telephone and mimeograph operators, Jr. carpenters, fire-fighters, licensed boiler fitters, office appliance repairmen, radio and truck mechanics, warehousemen, and freight handlers, all are needed now.

Persons interested in these U. S. Civil Service jobs can be obtained by seeing Mr. Paul Daugherty, who will be at the Plymouth post office on July 22nd between 11:45 and 12:30.

Persons already engaged in essential war activity are not eligible for these positions.

DIES AT 85 YEARS

Henry Clayton Deck Dies In New London; Services Tuesday

Funeral services for Henry Clayton Deck, 85, were conducted on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Miller-McQuate funeral home on North street. Rev. H. L. Bethel, pastor of the Presbyterian church in New London, officiated. The deceased was born Feb. 21, 1859, the son of John Frederick Deck and Mary Ann Deck, and lived in this community practically his entire life.

Mr. Deck followed the carpenter trade and has worked on numerous houses and barns in this vicinity. He was greatly interested in trapsetting and followed it as a hobby for a long number of years. It was his honor and pleasure to win the Grand American trap contest at the National event at Vandalia, Ohio.

He passed away Saturday evening in New London at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. J. Deck. Survivors include: one daughter, Mabel Pfahler of Tiro, Ohio, one grandchild and two sisters, Mrs. Van Vranken of New London, and Mrs. Chas. Smith of Crestline.

Funeral services were held in Toledo.

"SOLDIERS WITHOUT UNIFORM" STAGE BATTLE IN WHEAT FIELD

If the Nazi could have seen the "squad of American soldiers" in a battle staged near Plymouth last Friday, they would have been amazed. Our soldiers didn't have on uniform, they weren't firing real guns and ammunition, but in their own way, they were really turning the heat on the enemy.

As though they were caissons, two large wagons, each pulled by a team of horses, passed over the 20-acre field, and the boys reloaded the ammunition by loading the wagons in record time with heavily loaded wheat shocks which were fired into the separator going full force in the nearby barn.

Yes, Friday was a day of action at the George Myers farm when eighteen farmers gathered to do a job of harvesting. There was the absence of danger from bullets and shrapnel, but the work was as strenuous as found on any firing line, and beneath the blistering rays of the sun, without a break in the activity throughout the day. At the close of twilight, just as the sun was setting, the wheat shadows, the men had thrashed 582 bushels of wheat, which in a small way, went to aid victory.

George Myers, the tractor man combine, which was introduced a few years ago, was the old-fashioned thrashing parties are fast becoming extinct. But the old timers will tell you that while it is a lot of work and takes many man hours to handle the wheat crop with the old separator, they will also admit it is a lot of fun.

Even in the face of the newly developed labor-saving combines and changing weather conditions, there are many farmers in the community who still cling to the separator as the only thing to do with wheat. As a result of this demand, there are a couple of outfits which do custom thrashing, one of them being the County Line, and the Kochendorf outfit, which operates mostly south of Plymouth.

The Clyde Smith outfit was at the George Myers farm Friday. Mr. Myers operates 217 acres with the help of his 13-year-old son, Charles, two teams and a tractor. This year he has 32 acres in oats, 20 acres in wheat, 39 acres of corn, 23 acres in soybeans, and 20 acres of wheat, averaged 29 bushels to the acre, of a total of 582 bushels.

Friday morning the group of eighteen men gathered at the farm and started on the wheat field. They have a system of "rotating" their help, and as a result, the men will help each other until all wheat is harvested. The party included Boyd Ferrell, Virgil Schaffer, Richard Wilford, Ben Brightman, Charles H. Tom, Myers, Henry Myers, John Kaufman, Lehman Hopkins, Anthony Fidler, David Dick, Robert Gilpin, Ray Arnold, Carl Ehret for Jud Sloan, Mahlon Nimmons, Carl Taus, George Myers and son, Charles.

The forenoon passed away very quickly, but shortly after 11 o'clock Mahlon Nimmons must have inhaled odors from the kitchen, for he was very faint by the time the dinner bell rang. However, the men were ready for chow for pitching shocks, spaghettis and meat balls, separator, sacking and keeping the straw down, naturally works up an appetite for any husky.

So at noon, the men were called into dinner, which proved to be a most appetizing feast. Mrs. Myers, with the assistance of Mrs. Verdie Horner, Mrs. Taus, Mrs. Willford, Mrs. Hazel Myers, Mrs. Margaret Guthrie and Mrs. Geo. Myers, had prepared a meal that would satisfy any man's fancy and taste.

The menu consisted of fried chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy, spaghetti and meat balls, vegetables, pie, cake, jelly, lemonade and coffee.

There is genuine friendliness and understanding among a group of thrashers, and you can see their inner-soul when you look into their faces. They seem to have a better understanding of human beings and nature than most men and best of all, when you see a group working together like this, one you can bet that they're one hundred per cent American, for which we in this community, are justly proud.

RAIN SLOWS UP WHEAT HARVEST

The heavy rain which fell early Wednesday morning halted farmers from gathering in their wheat. While a large majority of the fields had been combined, the rain which fell over the harvested. A large number of farmers were in the act of thrashing, but with the heavy rain, which totaled almost a half inch, the shocks will have to remain in the fields for a few days, until at least they dry out again.

The rain which fell over a wide area Wednesday morning was the first for some weeks, and it was welcomed by everyone.

Corn and soybeans were beginning to suffer from the drought. The shower also helped gardens, and even the indicator, vegetables will again start to grow.

WHEAT BURNS

Fire, believed to have started from a spark from a passing locomotive on the B. & O. Railroad, destroyed about three acres of wheat at the farm of Chester Yates, at Neuman's Corners, northeast of Plymouth. Prompt work on the part of the Willard fire department, aided by others, extinguished the blaze before it spread to the remainder of the nine acre grain field.

STAMPS SELL FASTER

The new $5.00 federal use stamp for automobiles is selling a little faster these days. A 22 county drive against violators of the federal law requiring motorists to have their cars now under way and already motorists in several nearby towns have been caught.

NAME SHELBY PRINCIPAL

Byron H. Cramer, present superintendent of schools at Lexington in Richland county, has been named principal of Shelby High school. He will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Robert G. Winter, who has accepted the principalship of the Piqua high school.

BIG VOLUME OF WHEAT HANDLED AT ELEVATOR

George Rogers, proprietor of the Plymouth Elevator, revealed Wednesday that a record had been established in handling this season's wheat crop, in that not only had the elevator shipped two cars in a single day, but that the number of bushels taken in this season will top that of any previous year.

In checking over shipments made last week, John Ganzhorn, manager of the Plymouth Grain & Elevator, stated that during the season of 1943 only nine carloads of wheat were handled here. Last week shipments from Plymouth totaled eight cars, and there is every indication that at least this many more will be shipped again this week.

What is testing unusually high, and the yield is considered exceptional. The price paid in Plymouth are comparable to those of other markets. Last week one farmer, who sold his entire crop to the local elevator, received almost $1,200 for his wheat. The elevator paid out more than $18,000 to farmers last week for wheat in bushels.

In order for our readers to visualize the magnitude of wheat shipments, let us break down the carload shipments into bushels. In other words, try and picture 17,000 bushels of wheat stacked in rows. Then you get an idea of the quantity of wheat handled so far this season by the Plymouth Elevator.

Both Mr. Rogers and Mr. Ganzhorn wish to express their appreciation to the farmers in this community for their goodwill and patronage. The management of the elevator strives at all times to render an honest and fair service, and this is evidenced by the continuous growth of patrons.

STRICKEN AT STATION

Mrs. Margaret Morrison, 70, died Sunday at the Willard hospital, unexpectedly. She had been visiting a nephew, N. H. Barnes, for the past six weeks and was on the part of the Willard fire department, aided by others, extinguished the blaze before it spread to the remainder of the nine acre grain field.

RUSSELL NORRIS, Military Police Escort, was in Plymouth Wednesday visiting his mother, Mrs. Al Norris and sister, Mrs. Glenn West and husband, Mr. Norris, who have on Tuesday leave out of Boston, where he had docked Monday, accompanying a prison ship from Liverpool, England, with more than 2200 prisoners of war. The MP's have had a busy time the past month, dispatching prisoners for miles to Cheshburg area to Scotland and the States. Enroute, he stopped in Shelby to visit his wife.

Chicken sandwiches will be used to outfit a room for the Junior Grange. Anyway, what do you care about the night of July 28th? Because you get so much in return for so little—home made ice cream and cake! Let's all go over for a bite!

EARL McQUATE was telling me about his friend in Cleveland, who is a floorwalker. He quit his job in this capacity and joined the police force, and the only reason he gave was that he wanted a change to a place where "the customer is always wrong."

CLINT MOORE is all hot and bothered about the boxing show which is being staged in Willard on the night of July 28th. It's a benefit booth sponsored by the VFW, proceeds to be used for the cigarette fund of the Service Club. The show is a sure ticket to help this good cause.

EDITORIAL

HITLER'S COWARDICE CONTINUES

If the final decision in war was in the hands of a referee, as it is in a prize fight, this would seem the logical time for him to step into the center of the ring and stop the fight. For there is no doubt that Hitler is leaning so heavily on the ropes that he hasn't a chance to come back. The humane thing, under the circumstances, would be to end the battle and declare the Allies the unconditional winner.

But the big difference between this war and a prize fight is that Hitler has others doing his fighting for him. The tall-tale blows which the Allies are delivering may hurt Hitler's prestige, but the real pain is felt by the German soldiers and civilians who are being forced to continue fighting. Therefore, because of Hitler's unwillingness to give up in the face of certain defeat, thousands more Allied soldiers and probably hundreds of thousands more of his own people will have to die.

Even the Germans will soon realize that it isn't courage which keeps Hitler forcing them to fight—it's the rankest form of cowardice—the fear of what will happen to him personally when he admits defeat.

RUBBER SOLUTION PERMANENT

One of the greatest permanent benefits our nation has derived from our war with Japan is the overcoming of our dependency on remote islands of the Pacific for our supplies of vital rubber.

When the war started, the processes for making synthetic rubber had been fairly well worked out. But had it not been for the war it probably would have been many years before synthetic rubber would have been made in quantities large enough to meet the demands of American industry. Now, however, because our life almost depended on the speed with which we could make a substitute for the rubber seized by the Japanese, we have managed to boost synthetic rubber production, in two short years, to the point where it now equals the quantity of rubber which we used to import.

Never again will we be put in the position of having to depend on imports for our supply of this vital material, which is a great step forward in our nation's self-sufficiency.

Dale Carnegie
Author of
"HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

WIN ARGUMENT AND LOSE FRIENDS

Here's the old story of winning an argument, but losing a friend. But this one has a new twist. It's from Renaud Gauthier, who is a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Oh, yes, after his name add the letters LLR.

He has written to me as follows: "I have always loved to win an argument. But I was so filled with elation that I did not see the effect it had on my opponent."

One day Mr. Gauthier had an argument with one of his colleagues who knew a great deal about airplanes. They locked horns, got no place.

Finally they decided to put it up to a superior officer. This superior officer listened to both sides, then said that Mr. Gauthier was right. Mr. Gauthier was immensely pleased. But he noticed that his former friend was cool and distant; in fact, so cool that a great chasm formed between them.

Then Mr. Gauthier asked himself "What have I gained? I have won an argument, but I have lost a fine friend."

About a month later another argument developed with the same man. Naturally, Mr. Gauthier wanted to win, to show how superior he was. Then he remembered the lesson taught him by his previous experience and he toned down his voice and his self-assertive manner. Finally he told the other man that he was right in some things, and that he, himself, was right in some of the details. With this mutual understanding, the argument died away and there was no problem of which person had won. The two men, who had once been pitted against each other, now respected each other and are now friends, which is of vital importance because they are of great assistance to each other in their flying work.

Thus Mr. Gauthier, using his head and putting down his egotism, was able to keep a friend when he was on the point of losing him.

This is a vital principle and can be used by anyone. Ask yourself, when you get into an argument, "Am I trying to settle something, or am I trying to triumph over the other person?" And remember, the other person does not want to be triumphed over. And that is only natural.

Keep your friends, Ralph Waldo Emerson, our American philosopher, said: "Every time I lose a friend, a little of me dies."

The very easiest way to lose a friend is to show him up in an argument. In doing that, you deflate his ego, you have made him feel of less importance.

Doings In Washington
By CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM LEMKE

THE NATIONAL conventions are over. Congress meets again on August 1. This will be for observations only. The members of both parties will size up the national situation. Dewey and Roosevelt are the Presidential candidates. Both were drafted—drafted themselves. The truth is both wanted the nomination and especially did the President nominate himself, as he had it in his power to do, or to advocate the nomination of someone else.

NO INTELLIGENT person is fooled by the apparent reticence of the two candidates. But let's get to the issues. There will be continuity in the national and international. A lot of unpleasant things will be brought to light. The idea that our domestic policy is all haywire and our foreign policy perfect will be disbanded. Our foreign policy has been just as bad, if not worse, than our domestic policy.

THE PEARL HARBOR episode with all its ugliness will be brought to light. The warning of

WOMEN . . . jobs

The "woman's place is in the home" idea, which has been under attack ever since the war started because of the need for women in factories, in business and in the armed forces, will probably appear as old-fashioned as a hoop skirt when peace is here again.

For millions of women have discovered, for the first time, that operating a factory machine or working at a desk from nine to five is like a holiday compared with cleaning and cooking on a 16-hour schedule, and it is going to take a lot more pressure to get them to return to the kitchen than it did to persuade them to leave it.

All surveys among women workers show that the great majority of them have no intention of going back to their household duties when the war ends. A recent one made by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company showed that 71 per cent plan to seek postwar jobs while only 17 per cent are planning at the present time to return to full-time house-keeping.

This is a situation which may not be taken seriously enough by those who are trying to figure out how employment of men can be kept at full capacity after the war. For in addition to setting up job economy so will include jobs for the men now working and those in the armed forces, it looks as though 10 to 15 million women will insist on being dealt in on the redistribution of jobs.

ABILITY . . . accuracy

At the present time there are over 12,000,000 women employed, which is more than 6,000,000 above the employment total in 1940. In addition to vast increases in the employment of women in critical war industries, such as airplane and ship building, women have entered many other occupations which formerly were handled entirely by men. More and more we see the pending attack by our Ambassador in Japan and by secret service agents under Edgar Hoover will come to the front in spite of the fact that Admiral Kimball and General Short will not be court-martialed. You can't know things of this kind forever under a bushel.

THE SQUANDERING and wasting of our resources, not in war effort, but in an attempt to buy or bribe good neighbors, will be revealed. This in order to get their aid for some sort of an international super government. Some of our Generals may even do some talking about how our war efforts have been interfered with for what they consider political reasons. Some of these may tell us that we have been successful in our war efforts in spite of political interference. This because of the splendid patriotism and cooperation of our people with our armed forces and the unexcelled bravery of our sons.

THEN THE REAL ISSUE of government by bureaucracy will enliven the struggle for votes. The unnecessary hardships that have been put upon the people by an ignorant bureaucracy will be the real battle on the home front. The waste of manpower due to rules and regulations will be debated, the building of roads, oil pipe lines, as well as railroads for foreign nations that have nothing to do with the war effort, will demand the attention of the taxpayers of this nation.

FINALLY there will be the issue of doing justice and giving our boys, returning from the battle fronts, an opportunity to get a new start in life. Don't forget the boys will have something to say women driving taxis, taking tickets on railroad trains, running buses, carrying mail and delivering groceries. We have yet to see traffic being directed by a policewoman, but imagine that is going on in some part of our country right now. Employers say that in many jobs filled entirely by men before the war, women have proved more satisfactory than men. While most employers would be unwilling to hire women for heavy work, they are more and more eager to get them for precision jobs which they can handle faster and more accurately than the clumsy male.

CHILDREN . . . care

With women now enjoying equality with men so far as pay is concerned, the easy way to find jobs for the 10,000,000 men in our armed forces would be to give them the jobs held by women. Part of present government planning is based on that answer. But it seems probable that it will be just about as easy to get these jobs away from women as it would be to persuade them to give up the vote. As far as they are concerned, if there aren't enough jobs to go around, men can have a turn at cooking, dishwashing and house-cleaning and see how they like it.

Of course the one thing which always has and always will keep women from trying to take over the reins of industry is the problem of children. And it is probable, unless industry cooperates with women by offering company nurseries, or unless adequate care of children is provided by the state as it is in Russia, many women will reluctantly abandon the temptation to earn money in order to assure their children of proper home care.

But for women who have no children, or whose children are old enough to take care of themselves, there is no question that they will be active competition with men on the job market for a long time to come.

about this when they get back. I know because I receive letters from practically every battlefield. These assure me that they are going to have something to say about our problems when they return.

"Too bad there isn't a law or something to be sure their wishes are carried out, Judge."
"There is in one state I know of, Steve. Just recently it passed a law prohibiting the calling of any prohibition election until a year after the peace is declared."
"That really makes sense to me, Judge."

PRESBYTERIANS SERVE 800 SERVICE MEN AT CANTEEN

Unless you have assisted in serving at the Canteen, most people have no idea just how much food is required to take care of the boys in service passing thru that city in one day.

Last Thursday the United Work Last Thursday, United Workers of the Presbyterian church, served approximately 800 boys. Sixteen women volunteered for the two shifts and all report it is one of the most worthy causes that civilians can contribute to.

The day was ideal and the usual ham sandwiches, cookies or doughnuts, milk and coffee were served. One load of boys were coming home from service in England and several remarked that the milk was the first they had had in twenty months. Not knowing that everything was free several of the boys hesitated, and then politely inquired as to the price of sandwiches and drinks. They were quite delighted to learn it was "all free on the home front."

YOUTH PROGRAM GIVEN AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

A Youth Program was given in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning. The title was: "The Church in Thy House." The seven Sunday school missionaries were represented by Luella Vandervort, Mary Alice Weller, Rebecca Keller, Mary Bevier, Helen Gowitzka, Evelyn Burkett and Evelyn Cunningham. They showed how our missionaries brought hope and cheer to many lonely homes.

On the platform and behind a long table were seated seven young people representing seven different groups who receive help from the missionary work of the church. The Porto Rican was Patty Clark; the Negro, James Kelley; Indian, Barbara Lamberjack, Leland Cole; Bride, Sally Steele; Mourner, Frances Beyer; Alaskan, Marilyn Steele.

On the table were the miniature homes showing graphically where these people reside. Each missionary placed an open Bible in front of a house as an emblem of the Church in Thy House. As a part of the service Johnnie Fetters sang a hymn.

The offering was to aid in maintaining the 112 Sunday school missionaries who work from Alaska to Porto Rico.

ATTENTION! All Home Caniners!

Before you begin your 1944 canning, Good Housekeeping Magazine advises you to use the boiling-water bath method for tomatoes and fruits, only. Can all vegetables except tomatoes by the correct use of a pressure cooker. To be sure of killing botulinus germs, in the last few years, cases of botulinus food poisoning have cropped up in widely different parts of the country. Buy, borrow, share a pressure cooker—but don't can low acid vegetables any other way. If you want further information, write Good Housekeeping Magazine, 959 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

AT CLEVELAND GAME

A good-sized delegation from Plymouth attended the Cleveland baseball game Sunday. Some left for Shiloh and others from Shiloh, via the Big Four. While they made it to the "big city" ok, the transportation problem home was the "big issue" of the day. The trains out of Cleveland were so crowded they closed the doors to cars and left scores standing at the station. Some were lucky to get the "next train" out, and some who bought tickets at Shiloh found themselves at home they had to get off in Shiloh, as the train did not stop at Shiloh.

Among those from Plymouth at attending were Fred Holz, Walter Dawson, Harold Teale, Harry Trauger and son Ronald, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lowry and son Richard, Whitney Briggs, James Rhine E. L. Earnest, Christ Sheely, C. W. Fortney and a group of younger boys.

Roger Miller and Bill Miller left this morning for New York City and other eastern points on a business and pleasure trip.

IF There Was A Service Flag For Those Who SERVED AT Home It Would Have A Big Star For All Independent Grocers

And they'd deserve it . . . for the man behind the counter in your neighborhood independent grocery is one of the unsung heroes of the war. He has wrestled with innumerable retail problems . . . he has watched his help, one by one, go into other war work or into the armed forces . . . he found stocks more difficult to replenish each day . . . he saw the black market sell things he couldn't get for his customers . . . he spent his days serving you, and his evenings (when he wasn't filling out complicated government reports) doing civilian defense work . . . he sacrificed a part of his profits to keep prices down to the lowest levels possible . . . reluctantly, he finally gave up deliveries or other services. Yet he's still behind the counter . . . smiling . . . and striving to give you, his friends and neighbors, the best service possible . . . offering the foods and the quality you like.

You can always depend on your independent grocer . . . who today supplies his store, and your table with the BEST, most nourishing bread ever baked.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD FOR LESTER WILFORD, SUNDAY

A special memorial service was held at the First Lutheran church on Sunday, July 16, 1944. The church was filled with an attentive audience. The American Legion and the Auxiliary were present and the flags of both organizations were set up in the rear of the church. In the center stood a table, and a picture of the hero was draped with the American flag.

The regular morning services formed the introductory part of the worship hour, the pastor preaching a brief sermon on the fourth petition: "Give us This Day Our Daily Bread." The memorial service is introduced by an appropriate solo sung by Orva Dawson. "Farewell

My Country," accompanied by the organist, Mrs. Guthrie.

Pastor Lambertus read the obituary and then read the prayer at his address upon Ps. 90:3: "Thou turnest man to destruction." The speaker said in part: "The message of the day is that of the few days ago through the War Department, confirming the death of your son is not only shocking to you as the family, but it is also deeply concerning our congregation as today the first grad star is placed upon our Service flag."

When such notices come they are, nevertheless, unexpecting. None now, since the invasion of Europe has opened and the offensive is carried on all over the world, we expect such notices with appalling frequency. When old folks die, we accept such occurrences with a degree of expectancy. But when the flower of manhood dies, whether upon the battlefield or otherwise, the extinction of life is as if no one had ever lived. It affects individual families but casts a disastrous effect upon social and business life.

Your youngest son has paid the supreme sacrifice. As a soldier he has laid his life upon the altar of our nation together with many others, in order that we might have freedom and security at home against the dreadful enemies that surround us on all sides. You have two other sons in the service of the nation. This fact may fill your hearts with a certain justifiable pride on the one hand, but will also cause your heart to be filled with fear and dismay.

"When we view the wholesale slaughter of life in this present World War there are some questions awakened within us—questions as to the value of life—life worth living? Is God really mindful of us: are we the victims of blind fate: . . . whether shall we turn for light out of this gloom?"

"But let us not question the issue of Divine wisdom, justice, and love. Let us take to heart the lesson that even this dreadful war is an instrument in the hand of God to carry out His divine will and purpose. Our eyes are bandaged so we do not see the things of His divine plans. Let us rather turn our thoughts inward and recognize our sinfulness and our failure to follow His will. Only such a disposition will comfort our mourning, knowing that the believer is in God's care—no matter what kind of death one dies.

"In all this, God is stretching forth His hands to you. He has had a loving heart that your hearts might be drawn closer to Him in your affliction, so that you also may be able to say what the apostle Paul wrote to the Corinthians, 1st chapter, verses 4-6: 'Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforted us in all our tribulations; that we may be able to comfort them which are in trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also abounds; that we may be able to sympathize with them who are afflicted; it is for your consolation and salvation which is effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer; or whether we be comforted it is for your consolation and salvation.' (2nd Cor. 1:3-7)

"Many all others who are paying the supreme sacrifice may not die in vain in order that our nation, under God might live." A prayer for the deceased and the mourners followed. Then the benediction was spoken. The congregation remained standing as a gold star was placed upon the service flag by Mrs. McGinty. Then taps were sounded by Don Einsel, and the congregation left the church after a brief silent prayer.

CHAPTER III

Madame Fabre-Laurin becomes indignant at her old butler, Rudolph, who has been serving her for 20 years. Rudolph explains his chameleon by pointing to a picture in the paper showing a small pretty girl and two little ones over the caption: "The Princess Meridol of Graten and her cousins arrive in Quebec to seek refuge with rich uncle in milk and walked up the steep road to 'rich uncle,' and explains that at Graten he was the Baron Rudolphe de Morpin, and that he and his wife, the Princess and her cousins as his guests. The Princess and her children arrive and Madame Fabre-Laurin over as housekeeper of the Chateau.

Perhaps one would never learn. Michel had always been an enigma. Not even madame, who had the wisdom of a woman, was really understood Michel; otherwise she would not have tried to force her will upon him; to make a tampon of one who would range like the hawk.

In the evening stillness, Roger Fabre heard children singing. He smiled, pleased, got up from his chair and crossed to the window. He saw a tall girl whose hair was a glory in the sunset and two little blond children frisking about her as they walked up the steep road to the lawn toward the beech trees.

Roger disobeyed madame's injunction, and went quickly down the back stairs and out into the garden. After all, it wasn't every day that one could see a real live princess, even when they were a dime a dozen and no takers at that. He strolled along the bank of the little stream that wound through the park and flowed into a miniature lake at the foot of the hill.

The young moon was bathing in the lake when Roger came there. He stood at the bank, looking at its rim, white and straight and virginal, and in their leaves was a soft green and yellow and blue air rich with the smell of clover and white thyme and damp earth and the faint, faint smell of a frog croaked in a deep basso and heard the winnowing wings of the night hawk rattling in the sky.

For a while he did not see her standing there, leaning against the trunk of a birch. She wore a white dress that was not unlike the one she moved that he marked her presence. Her face was pale, the eyes large and dark in that crepuscular light, and she was hiding the beauty of her hair, the slender grace of her as she walked along the path toward him.

"Good evening," he said. "I hope I do not intrude."

"Intruders in that dress, monsieur, are welcome among most people in this world today. So come in, please!" I am Roger de Morpin."

"Roger Fabre. I—am Madame Fabre-Laurin." "Oh, Madame Laurin. But she is a lovely old one! I am so glad to meet you, Monsieur Fabre."

"It is lovely to see you. I have never talked to a real princess." Meridol laughed and the night hawk rose in the sky above her and carry it away among the trees. I am just Meridol now. I must forget the name of the little place, Graten, but it was lovely. Lovely in an old way, with red brick houses and the lanes and old windmills and the castle of Graten high on its rock, its turrets seeming to be made of gold in the sunset."

"You will miss it, Your Highness!" I shall miss it. But this—is so beautiful, this land of yours, this beautiful land of yours, it is God's great kindness that there was such a place for us in which to seek refuge. For myself, I did not mind. I would have stayed at Graten—something in her voice made him look at her sharply and he saw that her eyes were gazing far off, not at the night hawk, but at the crimson sky or the mirror pool in which the moon bathed.

"But let us not question the issue of Divine wisdom, justice, and love. Let us take to heart the lesson that even this dreadful war is an instrument in the hand of God to carry out His divine will and purpose. Our eyes are bandaged so we do not see the things of His divine plans. Let us rather turn our thoughts inward and recognize our sinfulness and our failure to follow His will. Only such a disposition will comfort our mourning, knowing that the believer is in God's care—no matter what kind of death one dies.

"In all this, God is stretching forth His hands to you. He has had a loving heart that your hearts might be drawn closer to Him in your affliction, so that you also may be able to say what the apostle Paul wrote to the Corinthians, 1st chapter, verses 4-6: 'Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies,

"Good evening," he said. "I hope I do not intrude."

"The floor—" "We had to run—run quickly—more planes were coming over this time, a bomb set fire to the cottage, and men were parachuting down. All this might have happened if we were safe to go. Then we met an old peasant with his cart and he started us on the road to Paris and there Meridol found us. It was God who helped her to find us and bring us here."

"Yes," said Roger softly and his eyes were steady on Rudolph's. "It was indeed God who helped her."

"And He will take care of Bonhomme Fricot up in heaven," said Rudolph. "And perhaps that is why he killed him. Bonhomme Fricot was bent and his beard was long. He would harm no one."

"It is murder to kill like that," said Pol Martin. "Then to laugh, to smile as you do!" "It is done with you. Finished, eh, Rudolph?" said Roger.

"The princess, too?" Roger sat up eagerly. "Bonhomme, during the pleasant ride to the city, made Roger sit in front with the chauffeur of the ancient car. Her bright black eyes glittered impishly. "Later the princess may wish to ride up the Mount in a barouche and perhaps you'd like to go with her. They tell me it is lovely up there—a marvelous vista and the stars very close to one."

"Would you like that, Meridol?" Roger asked. "It is really very beautiful."

"But yes, I should love that, monsieur. I have not been on a real mountain since I met Graten. I shall look forward to it."

"And so, in the warm, languorous evening, they drove up the mountain and Roger told her of Maison-neuve, of the golden history of the castle, of the friendly people. It is lovely up there—a marvelous vista and the stars very close to one."

"That I have found already, Roger," said Meridol. "I have seen it. I have found here more of comfort and luxury than I ever had in Graten. I have never seen teeth glimmered whitely. There we were poor, though we lived in a castle; we often ate bread pudding from gold plate and the royal car was one of the earliest models made in France."

"A mercy madame didn't see it, mused Roger; she'd have wanted it herself," he grinned, recalling again the scene of the banquet in the steered along St. Catherine Street amid applause of the multitude. "Uncle! I have never seen a really wealthy man," said Meridol.

"Oh—why, yes, of course. You'll never have ever stored about money any more. It is a pity you ever had to."

"I was sure to be sure. I thought that, when I came to Canada, I should find some work to do, get a job myself, and be useful to my family. "Roger's lips were dry, "I'd like—" "But they were at the top of the Mount now and the barouche had stopped and the obsequious coachman was waiting to help make the moisteille alight. For a long while they stood looking down in silence at the city, at the blue distance of the star-spangled sky over Afridrandes.
