

Business Suspends As News Of War's End Received Here

Tuesday night at 7:00 o'clock when the first news flashes came over the radio telling of the end of the war, Plymouth at that hour was a village of quietness, but minutes later, church bells, factory whistles and fire sirens broke loose with a blast of noise that reverberated through the air for miles around. The news of the war was the news that the whole world had been waiting for days, and it came, unexpectedly, to many, and it caught Plymouth unawares, as at that time no planned celebration of any kind for the event.

Parades and celebrations were staged in Mansfield and Shelby Wednesday afternoon. And here on the Square, all through Wednesday, small groups gathered and the main topic was "the end of the war." Within a few weeks more and more boys who have been in service will return home for keeps, and this, indeed, is welcome news to all who have planned celebration of any kind for the event.

However, in the early evening small groups of citizens gathered on the Square; automobiles sounded their horns, and children on bicycles pulled empty cans on strings... anything to make a noise, and this lasted until about midnight. The rain pushed the crowds to shelter, and the night was one of quietness and solitude, although the hearts of thousands were glad.

Business establishments closed Wednesday morning found every business establishment closed, as well as the plant of the Fateroot-Health Co. President D. T. M. announced a two-day holiday for federal employees, and the local post office will remain closed all day today (Thursday).

Employees at the Fateroot Supply Depot at Shelby reported for duty, but were sent home. As the cars passed through here on their return home, occupants were smiling happily, and it can be well said that the occasion was one that made every individual glad.

While the jubilant spirit of the Square was not manifest in Plymouth Tuesday night, it can be said that there could have been no greater joy and happiness than found in the individual heart as the news of the war's end was received here, and it will go down in history, for many, many years to come as one of those unforgettable days.

VJ-DAY IN PLYMOUTH

Since the first break in the news over the week-end of the Jap war lords' willingness to accept the Potsdam terms of surrender with but one exception, giving up their emperor, Hirohito, our town, as well as the entire world, has had its ears tuned to the radio for latest developments. While we have been waiting momentarily for the final word, many expressions have been heard locally concerning the peace offer.

As an illustration, let's take the torpedoing of an American battleship near Okinawa as peace terms were being discussed. This act clarifies the Japanese as a treacherous people. As far as peace terms are concerned, why did the Jap wait until the first of the "A" bombs fall before they threw up their hands? With Russia finally turning its attention toward Manchuria; with American air supremacy overhead, and the Jap navy at the bottom of the Pacific, it does not take a smart Jap to know when to shout "quits."

With all the odds against this bunch of yellow cut-throats, why do the Allies tolerate the Jap warmongers in keeping their emperor, as a puppet leader or otherwise? It is far better to prolong the war three or six months, and sacrifice a few more lives, than to face another sneak uprising ten years from now, which may cause more havoc and heartaches than ever dreamed of. Every American man who has faced the Japs know what kind of people they are, and to ease off, the present situation with the hope of making a comeback later is not Jap ingenuity. With all the policing the Allies may do on the home island of Japan, the cunning Jap will make plans for another war despite the watchful eye of the Allies. It is hoped that the peace terms are so stiff and harsh that with their impotence Japan may fully realize the futility of another war in the years to come. Her possessions should be cut back to the home island only, and with this surrounded by an ever-watchful navy, we can secure ourselves the peace for which we have greatly sacrificed.

Now as to VJ Day in Plymouth, it will be good news to us, no matter what the individual may think of the peace terms and what they designate. It will mean, in the course of a few months, that we will have our boys on the road back home . . . and to our soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen and merchant marines, this will be the greatest day in their lives. There won't be much of a celebration in Plymouth. Perhaps the stores will close, or the fire siren will be sounded. But to the two hundred boys who call Plymouth their home, it will be a day to remember down deep in their hearts.

During the past three and one-half years of war, our town has missed the fate of those villages and hamlets in Europe and in the islands of the Pacific. We never knew the fear of bombs and gunfire; we burned lights at night; food was plentiful, even though rationed; and as a whole, we as a community, missed the hardships generally brought on by a devastating war. We never experienced the influx of our own military operations in camp or training center, and with but one exception, the building and operating of the Parsel Air Supply Depot, we missed the congestion and inconvenience so commonly felt in war areas.

Yes, VJ Day in Plymouth will mean much to all of us, but to those families whose boys made the supreme sacrifice, it will bring back memories . . . and wonderment. It is our hope that the community will commemorate a fitting memorial to these heroes, for it was they who brought the war to a quicker end, and to them, who gave their all, we shall always owe to them the freedom of living for which they so gallantly fought.

And as the closing days of the war come to a final end, it will be but a matter of weeks or months before those who have been gone from us so long, will again be back with us. It will be a joyous day, not only to the servicemen themselves, and to their families, but to our town and community. VJ Day in Plymouth, of course will be appropriately observed, but in our opinion with each arrival of one of our boys back home, it should be an event for a celebration!

Doings In Congress

By CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM LEMKE

Sick and tired of foreign propaganda and intrigue, Congress recessed until October 8. It should be compelled to recess for one month every three months to go home and get acquainted with the Nation and its affairs. This would enable them to get a domestic view of their Nation. At present they are completely submerged by foreign pressure groups, who dominate Washington and the Atlantic seaboard. These groups hibernate and have their headquarters in New York.

Our government has spent millions of the taxpayers' money entertaining foreign royalty - foreign kings and queens, kinglets and what-nots. It has built and refurbished guest houses, and wine and dined these diplomats at the cost of millions of dollars. This has become an age of liquor diplomacy, with Uncle Sam as the bartender. This at San Francisco, Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and various other conferences.

We have billions for foreigners, but little for our own returning veterans. Let us forget, we niggardly gave the veterans from $100 to $300 mustering-out pay. We passed the GI Bill—a bill of deception and red tape. It should have been called the lender's guarantee. The disabled veterans receive some benefit under this Bill if they can get by the red tape and delay in the Veterans' Administration. So do also the few who wish to attend college. Most of the veterans, however, have already graduated from the school of hard knocks.

But this Bill does very little for the able-bodied veterans. It guarantees a loan that a veteran makes up to $2,000 at 4 per cent interest. If the veteran can get by the red tape and the restrictions he can go into business or buy a home or a farm, and Uncle Sam guarantees the loan. Then if he makes a success, he, not Uncle Sam, pays the $2,000.00 with 4 per cent interest. If he makes a failure, he and his family, if any, will have to shift for themselves, but his Uncle Sam pays the $2,000 with interest to the lender. This GI Bill consists largely of lip service. But the boys are now returning in numbers, and I am sure they will demand the same compensation on an average that the stay-at-homes received. No honest person, except the cost-plussers and a few foreign propagandists, will object to this.

Congress will have to pass the Bill that I have introduced, or some similar bill, for the veterans. Under this bill the veterans would receive, in addition to all other benefits, a paid-up life insurance policy at the rate of $150 per month for home and $300 for overseas service. They would be enabled to borrow 75 per cent of the face value on this policy without interest for two years, and two per cent thereafter. The proceeds of such loan must be used in a productive enterprise.

Under this Bill any number of veterans may form a partnership or corporation and use their combined loans for any such enterprise. The net income of such enterprise to be exempt from state and federal taxes for a period of five years. We are going to take care of the veterans first, and then if we have anything left we can give it to the foreign nations.

"HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

SMALL START ENDED BIG

IN 1918 the Frisco railroad ran a demonstration train on what was called its "Egg and Poultry Roof Branch." The train passed through Clinton, Mo. Egg experts were on this demonstration train and they went to the high school auditorium and talked on eggs and poultry. The people in the audience put their names in a hat and prizes were given by the railroad to the winners.

In the audience was a high school senior. His name was called as one of the winners. His prize was a setting of pure-bred White Plymouth Rock eggs. His first thought was to eat the eggs, then he said to himself, "These are fine eggs. Why not set them and learn something new?"

But he did not have a hen. So he rented one from the foreman of the railroad section gang at five cents a week—15 cents for the three weeks that it took to hatch the eggs. Thirteen fine downy chicks were hatched; so he rented the hen for two more weeks to take care of the chicks. The chicks grew and thrived; he sold half of them at a profit. Meantime he was learning something new, getting a peek into a world he'd known nothing about.

Next he bought some more eggs of the same pure-bred strain; by the time he was ready to graduate from high school he had a good-sized flock of pure-bred White Plymouth Rock chickens. He bought a second-hand incubator and started in earnest to learn everything he could about the chicken business. He read everything on it, went to every lecture he heard of, read all the poultry bulletins issued by the Agricultural department, Washington, D. C.

He put a small ad in the paper offering baby chicks for sale. People came with boxes, buckets and baskets. Then he said, "Why won't this work by mail?"

He discovered that a chick does not need food or water the first 72 hours after hatching. During that time it lives on the sustenance absorbed from the yolk. He ran an ad in the paper announcing this, saying he could ship chicks before they need any food or water.

Well, today Clinton, Mo., is the "baby chick capital of the world," and Royal Booth is a rich man. In 1943 he sold six million baby chicks.

Third Week in WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Since even the most recent history books have been under revision, the changes in the cabinet made since President Truman went into office, this seems a good time to review the changes which have been made and list the names of those who now handle the 10 cabinet posts.

Since President Truman took his oath of office on April 12, he has accepted the resignations of six members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet and received the following appointments: Edward R. Stettinius, Secretary of State; Francis Biddle, Attorney General; Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture; Henry Morgenthau Jr., Secretary of Treasury; and Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General. After making his new appointments, and keeping Mr. Roosevelt's appointees to the four other posts, his complete cabinet is now as follows:

- Secretary of State — James F. Biddle.
- Secretary of Treasury — Fred M. Vinson.
- Secretary of War — Henry Stimson.
- Secretary of Navy — James Foran.
- Secretary of Labor — Lewis B. Schwellenbach.
- Secretary of Commerce — Henry Wallace.
- Secretary of Agriculture — Clinton P. Anderson.
- Secretary of Interior — Harold Ickes.
- Attorney General — Tom C. Clark.

The possibility of an 11th cabinet post, that of Secretary of Education and Social Security, is being seriously considered. This would be part of a move to reorganize the legislative branch of the government and would be in keeping with President Truman's desire to concentrate authority in the cabinet.

If this new department of government were established, it would take over the functions now handled by the Social Security board, Public Health service, Food and Drug administration, Vocational Rehabilitation and perhaps some of the leading war agencies such as the War Relocation Commission and the United States Employment service.

Rationing will probably go on at least on some items—throughout most of 1946, in the opinion of Chester Bowles, head of the Office of Price Administration. But he expects that rationing will be all over by the end of next year and that the new No. 5 ration book, which will be distributed in December, will be the last book to be issued.

Use of rationing stamps is said to be simplified in the new book. The new stamps will have only a number, instead of a letter and number. It will have red stamps for meat and blue stamps for other foods. Other stamps are provided for sugar, shoes and miscellaneous items which may be rationed.

In December a new gasoline ration book will also be issued, indicating that gasoline rationing will also continue for most of 1946. The new "A" gasoline coupons will be the same as at present except that they will be a different color. By changing the color they will make it possible to issue coupons which are now in the hands of the black market as well as those which have been counterfeited.

Mrs. McFadden in turn has purchased the property on West High Street belonging to Fred Schneider. Mr. Schneider is building a new home on Route 224 where he has a small farm.

NORWALK FAIR STARTS AUG. 28

HURON COUNTY'S BIG SHOW IS ALL SET WITH BIG EXHIBITS AND FUN

Norwalk, O. — Premium books for the twenty-third annual Huron County Fair, to be held here Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Aug. 28, 29, 30, and 31, are now available at the office of the Fair Secretary, Mrs. Elnora Crayton, in the courthouse building here.

According to the new premium book, many new exhibits have been added to the fair this year, and the premium payments in many departments have been increased, and changes made in other departments.

Heading the list of added exhibits in the Fair this year is the increased number of classes in the saddle horse show, which will be held opening night, Tuesday, Aug. 28. In past years there were but nine classes of saddle horses shown. This year the list has been increased to twelve and several of the premiums have been increased.

In the cattle department, in addition to the regular premiums, the Ohio Holstein Friesian Association of Wooster, Ohio, is offering a total of $75 in special awards to certain Holstein classes.

Premiums have been increased and two fur classes have been added in the rabbit department while the Special Victory Garden offer has been extended to Junior victory gardeners of Huron and Erie counties.

Several new articles have been added in the Home Furnishings department, including home made accessories, new garments made from old materials, and articles made from feed or flour sacks. Mrs. Robert Finlay is the new head of this department.

A department added to the Fair this year is one for the display of home made labor saving devices. This department was created in order to bring before the public new ideas to help solve the home and farm machinery problems. Exhibits in this section may include home made tractors, home made manure spreaders, home made barbed wire reel-tractor attachments, and any other home made labor saving device.

The entertainment program has been well filled this year, and includes the saddle horse show Tuesday evening, horse racing and pony races Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons, cattle parade Wednesday evening and the horse parade Thursday evening. Also the horse pulling contests which will be held Wednesday and Friday mornings. The fire acts on the entertainment list this year include a Victory Revue, which will be presented Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings.

The closing feature of the Fair will be the WLS Circus, which brings its celebrated White Horse Troupe back for a return engagement this year. Last season this troupe made such a tremendous hit with Fair patrons that officials decided to bring them back for a repeat performance this year. The Circus will present two shows Friday evening.

BRADENTON, The Beautiful 'Twas on an October morning, We drove down the road by the bay, Nearing the end of our journey, From Ohio far away.

As we neared our destination, One question enters our mind, Who does Bradenton care for, That we left Ohio far behind?

Gentle breezes were blowing And I felt just like Spring, And glorious sunshine covered everything, And nature smiled with gladness Wherever we turned our eyes, From vegetable gardens To blue azure skies.

Even the air bid us welcome As we drove over Green Bridge, We saw the Chamber of Commerce on the pier, And smiling faces greeted us everywhere.

And the pleasant nods of welcome, We saw on every hand Made us feel at home in that goodly sunshine land.

Every car brought guests Like an invading army they came forth, From Ohio, where the frost king Holds sway in the North.

A miracle it seems, in a few days one can go, From the land of ice and cold and snow, To land where flowers grow.

Birds sing sweetly in the trees And orange burdened branches Were to us a pleasure rare, And the perfume of sweetness Filled the pure sweet air.

The majestic Bradenton court-house, And the Buzzard's Roost played a part To give us welcome, As we clasped the hand of F. Emory Sharp.

Here are places of amusements With lectures and a few, The Women's Club, the Tourist Club, The fraternal meetings too.

Then on an evening we would go To the most pleasant Trailer camp

You can find in the whole U.S.A., Class the hands of friends and say, Are you happy, healthy and gay?

Here are oranges, tangerines and grapefruit Oh, so sweet, They will make your mouth water, And tempt you at any time and anywhere to eat.

Here comes the cripple and the lame, To enjoy God's sunshine and water, Which turns their moans and cries To tones of mirth and laughter.

Many States are represented And their opportunities compared With the State of Florida, Whose blessings it will share With law-abiding people who come here to dwell,

From States where living is almost like — well, Where in Ohio, you're taxed when you walk also when you lie,

Not only what you are taxed to eat, but a coffin when you die, Oh, Bradenton, the Beautiful, Forever you will be all the places in the Southland, The pleasant spot for me.

Where's a poor man has a chance to make a living, While here in Ohio, sure as fate, If the politicians find him taving, They'll double up his rate. Dr. Geo. J. Searle.

LETTERS FROM OUR BOYS

Pfc. Russell Norris, son of Mrs. Lula Norris of Plymouth and a brother of Mrs. Glen West writes to his sister regarding the terrible conditions in Germany. It is hard for us in Plymouth to realize that such terrible hunger and conditions exist, even though we get first-hand information about it.

August 4th, 1945
Ansbach, Germany

Hello Kids,
I received my first letter since I was transferred to this division and it was from you Ruthie and I was really glad to hear from you once again. What is Glen's trouble; is it caused from low blood pressure or does he just lay it to old age? Why doesn't the damned fool give up and realize he isn't as young as he used to be and not nearly as good a man as Mabel's husband and that also goes for Crawford and his frau; they can't and never will catch as many fish as I can. So Aunt Thelma and Uncle Evan were down to Plymouth on a visit; I sure would like to see them as we always did before good times together, especially when Pop was living. Ruth I can't realize that Dad is gone and won't until I get home and he isn't there with his always happy go lucky talk. How are you all of Uncle Evan's boys? Have they all survived the war or in other words have all of us boys been lucky enough to come through this war with our lives? I hope and pray that all are safe and sound, also Harold Britton. Have you had any word from him in recent months and if you have would you please forward his address to me as I lost all addresses that I had along with everything else when I was captured by the Japs and all other addresses that you have that you think I might be interested in.

The people of these foreign countries are going to starve to death unless something is done before cold weather sets in as there are so many still on the roads going towards home in every thing from horses and wagons to pushing their worldly possessions in a baby buggy on their backs and, Kids, this is a heart breaking sight to see starving women and children, also men. They are a good many miles from home living as they can or stealing from the other guy. Last night, on town patrol two kids followed me for three blocks waiting for me to throw my cigarette away so they could get it and take it home to their father so you can see how hard pressed these people are for even the unnecessary things of life. But a fellow can't help all of them as he wouldn't have a doggone thing left for himself but I just act as though I didn't see them and go on about my business. Well, Kids, I must close as I go on town patrol at 7 o'clock and walk until 12 and it is 6 now so Goodbye until my next letter.

Oodles of love,
Your Brother
Russ

Visits Soldier.

Mr. and Mrs. Liland Wallen and family spent Sunday in Cambridge where they visited Lyman Sheele, who is taking treatment at Fletcher Hospital for burns and other injuries received in the South Pacific.

In a letter to his mother, Sgt. Bob Ruckman tells about his location since the war has ceased. They are living in a castle here. It is very old, built according to the Bourgeois, about 1400 A. D.

Since, of course, it has been remedied and was used for the apartment-house. It's a huge wall four stories high and about 40 feet thick, where the rooms are. This wall completely enclosed a large courtyard with the exception of an archway, which is the only entrance. On each corner of the castle is a tall tower with built in rooms.

All the walls are about three feet thick which in my mind the incident when we captured Herman Goering's castle at Newhouse, Germany.

We fired our tank destroyers at the castle and the damage we did was to knock off a little plastering. It wasn't until we moved in a little closer and fired through the windows that we did any good at all.

I arrived at this castle where we are now living as an advance party. I had to set out a guard over the area in town. Then I returned to the castle to wait for the rest of the company. I started to explore the place and on the third floor in one of the walls, I ran across some stolen loot from Russia. The Germans had brought it from Russia and hid it in the castle. Later the loot was valued at over a million dollars. There were thousands of old coins, dated as far back as 1100 A. D., boxes of oil paintings over 700 years old, also pottery and stone weapons, old stone axes and human skulls and a rifle about seven feet long. We immediately put an armed guard over the place and notified army authorities.

My room here is on the third floor on the south side and as I am about 100 feet from the ground it affords me a pleasant view of the country. I can see the Danube river about a half mile away.

Next Thursday, July 26, I am leaving on a pass to Paris.

I am sure glad for the chance since I have always wanted to see it.
