NOTHING IF NOT ACCOMMODATING . . . McCALL, IDA.

The page size of the weekly Fayette Lakes Star was increased recently. Editor M. O. Brown said it was necessary "because we've been getting complaints from a lot of folks that our paper was too small to wrap a bottle of whiskey in."

We hasten to correct our statistics on the twin situation. Last week we stated that the Pickens twins were the only twins we knew of in Plymouth for at least twenty-three years; someone we forgot the Darling twins, Patricia and Priscilla. Pat is a Junior in the local high school but Priscilla died at the age of nine and a half months. May be, there are others too, but the Cashman-Pickens twins still claim to twin birthdays—only twenty-three years apart.

MOST PEOPLE think Carl Spangler was a lucky fellow when he won the new Bendix Automatic Wash, Genix Auto Wash. Last week he won. As the winner, Carl can't make up his mind whether to keep the washer or take cash. If he inquires about the washer, he says home he'll need some woman to use it and demonstrate its fine qualities. We are told that several of the girls with whom Carl works at FRH voluntarily have "signed up" a demonstrator, but Carl just can't make up his mind.

THE BOYS in the Carpenter Shop at FRH advised me the other day that anyone wishing to see "Red" Burns can only do so by appointment. It said that Burns has set up a luxurious office, including a lounge room, sometimes called the "blue room" because smoke pours out of it so often. Burns has a "red" will drape some of the windows, and essence of fragrant perfume permeating the air. It said that Burns has set up a "red" himself into the best of everything.

WE'RE mighty happy to have Eleanor Searle Whitney with us this week. And I suspect she's about as happy as we are. From her "tom-bay" days in Plymouth to her present status of heading one of America's wealthiest and best known families, Eleanor Searle has always been "Edwards" in her own way. That's what we like about her. It's a real pleasure to see her visiting and chatting with her old friends. She has known her from babyhood. "Her school chums" and those she used to "chum with." It's a safe bet that Plymouth will always be called "home" by Mrs. Searle, and that's the way we like it.

THE NEW TEXACO Service Station is located on the side of the Square, and operated by Mr. Sherman Fisher and son, Don, opened Wednesday for business. The station gave added appearance to the Square, and gives Plymouth one more firm which helps to make our town the best in this section. The Fishers have a pleasing personality, and will give a "red" service to motorists who patronize them. The boys around the Square welcome "you all!"

WILL SING SUNDAY Mrs. Eleanor Searle Whitney, who is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George J. Searle, will sing Sunday morning at the First Baptist church. The general public is invited. Mrs. Whitney, who resides in New York, before her marriage to Cornelius V. Whitney, sang in the choir of a well-known New York church.

EX-MARINES TO MEET An invitation is extended to all ex-marines in this vicinity to attend a special meeting at Willard at the Railroad Inn, on next Tuesday, Sept. 17th at 9:30.

ARRIVE FROM CANAL Janice Ann and James Steele, children of Dr. Russell Steele of Plymouth, arrived in Plymouth Sunday afternoon and are the guests of their grandparents, at the Shelys. They are entering the public schools for the coming year. The family is well known in Plymouth.

Betty Brown Attends Trial of Nazi Leaders

With World War II more than a year in the past and the trial of the Nazi War Lords grinding out so slowly, that most of us Americans who fought the battles from a safe distance, will find it hard in a few years to remember their inhuman acts and atrocities. However those who had actual contact either in battle or through other channels, will find it impossible to forget, for it is written indelibly in their minds.

Miss Betty Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Brown, who prior to joining up with the American Red Cross for overseas duty, was a feature writer for the Plain Dealer and now writes home her experience of attending the trial in Nurnberg. Highlights of the description are as follows: "It is really something I shall never forget. There sat these big Nazi leaders, all of them looking almost as though they were in the court as the public they would have one think, and that Jodl is one of the meanest looking characters I've ever run into. The day we were there in very fancy seats for visitors are where the little guide I'm enclosing indicates "Press." Every chair has a set of carbones, with four or five places you can dial, one for English, one for German, one for French and one for Russian. They were trying to keep the men in the Nazi party who carried out the orders given to them were as orderly as those who gave the orders. It was very interesting, but the atmosphere of the courtroom seemed such a far cry from the

PLAN BETTER CROPS DRIVE

Heyman will head the Huron county campaign for the Ohio Field Crop Improvement Fund, to finance a program of research and education aimed at developing and promoting superior strains of field crops throughout Ohio. Dismisses Suit Against Merchant

An injunction suit filed against J. W. McIntyre, as operator of the Plymouth Dry Goods company, Plymouth, was dismissed Friday in the United States District Court at Toledo at the request of Price administration. According to the OPA, McIntyre, who had failed to maintain proper pricing charts, and to file base period prices in the operation of his business, now has complied with all pricing regulations.

MORE LOSE JOBS AT SHELBY PORT

Employment at the Parcel Air Supply depot at Shelby will be reduced by another three hundred and ninety persons effective September 19th. Lt. Col. S. H. Raymond, commanding officer, announces. This reduction follows one of two hundred persons ordered reduced by the war department in accordance with a congressional directive to the Sledge bureau. The directive instructed government department to absorb the cost of pay increases voted to civilian service employees, Col. Raymond said.

Throughout the nation, the war department will reduce its civilian personnel by $5,079 by Oct. 1. It had 575,979 on the payroll July 1st. "An additional survey will be conducted by the plans and personnel division of this department and additional cuts will be based on the present work load," Col. Raymond said. "All reductions in force are effected in accordance with civilian service procedure and the law will be followed specifically."

S. S. INSURANCE NOW AVAILABLE

How insurance protection under Social Security has been extended to the families of World War II veterans, under the recent amendments to the Social Security Act, was explained recently by Edward P. Blonston, manager of the Mansfield Social Security office. Insurance benefits are paid under the Government system of old-age and survivors insurance on the basis of wages received from jobs covered by Social Security, Mr. Blonston pointed out. Since no Social Security credit was given for service in the armed forces, World War II veterans were unable to build up or maintain Social Security rights during the time they spent in the service. The new legislation provides generally that full Social Security rights be given to the survivors of World War II veterans who also claim three years of discharge—if the discharge is other than dishonorable. As explained by Mr. Blonston, these are the significant points in the law.

The new legislation applies only to the surviving family of a veteran who dies within three years after discharge. It does not change the Social Security status of a veteran who dies, or died, in service. It does not change the status of a veteran who survives more than three years after discharge. The amendments provide for full Social Security benefits even though the veteran had never held a job at all under Social Security. The effect of this legislation is retroactive to cover veterans' deaths which occurred before its passage by Congress. The surviving member of a veteran's family who should apply for insurance benefits are the widow, children, or parents, in that order. The Social Security Administration has no mechanism for initiating applications for benefits by veterans' families newly protected by this change in the law. They must take the initiative and apply to the nearest Social Security office for complete information.

Survivors of veterans who died after their discharge are urged by Mr. Blonston to get in touch promptly with the Mansfield Social Security office. He pointed out that the families especially affected are of two kinds: 1. Those to whom no Social Security benefits have been paid because the veteran had not worked long enough under Social Security to become insured. Insurance benefits may now be paid in these cases even though none could be paid before. 2. Those to whom Social Security benefits have ALREADY been paid.

In these cases will be reviewed to determine if a higher benefit amount can be paid under the amended law. The new provisions of the Social Security Act, do not apply to dependents of veterans who are qualified to receive compensation or pensions from the Veterans Administration. This disqualification does not include National Service Life Insurance.

Doings In Congress

By CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM LEMKE
Lasting and permanent peace? Where, is it? The fifty-two "peace-loving" nations have run amuck. They remind one of fifty rebellious young brats calling names and sticking their tongues out at each other. The way we were propelled into World War II by an administration loaded down with deception and fraud is now revealed in all of its ugliness. The parents, brothers, sisters or wives whose son, husband or brother gave his life are wondering what for and why?
If it was necessary to plunge our nation into World War II to save the British empire and the Russian distasteful, then we should have exacted terms in black and white over their signatures that they would not liquidate or spray lead on, other nations' people. We should have demanded an agreement over their signatures that after we finished the war they started—after we finished Hitler—they would get now liquidating and spraying lead on, other nations' people and grabbing everything in sight. History repeats itself and falsehood doubles up on itself. In World War I, we had the slogans "Too proud to fight," "Peace without victory," "He kept us out of war." At the same time Britain was informed that if she hung on until after election, the yanks would come. Then, "Make the world safe for democracy," and "War to end all wars." After victory, the League of Nations was born and proclaimed the dove of peace. But, because of internal dissension—because of the greed and deception of the Big Three—the League failed in its laudable purpose.

Again, in World War II, we had the slogans "Raise the arms embargo and save our boys," "Draft the youth and stay out," "Give us lend-lease and we will bury you out," "The Atlantic Charter," and "Never Again," and then "Unconditional Surrender," "One World," "Dumbarton Oaks," "The San Francisco Conference," and "Breitton Woods." Each and every one of these slogans, we were told would give us permanent and lasting peace, but unfortunately they were and are automatically, simple as rolling off a log. All you have to do is to go to Russia.

Magidoff was leaving for the USSR, where he's NBO's Moscow correspondent, after a three-month vacation in the U.S.A. and his president possessed by a 1946 four-door sedan which he had just purchased for exporting to Moscow. "It's easy to get a new car these days if it's for export. All I did was give a touch with the car people and tell them what I wanted it for—and presto, I had a new car!"

"That struck us as a simple way of doing things. But, we figured maliciously, there must be a catch somewhere. "How about gas?" we asked.

"That's not much of a problem. I get a monthly ration of 150 liters, which is about 45 gallons. That's ample."

"Ah yes, but aren't the roads in Russia pretty tough on a car?" we asked, hopefully.

"They're not too good outside of Moscow," Magidoff said, "but in the city they're as good as anywhere else in the world. And most of my driving is done in Moscow."

"How about spare parts? Your car's going to bust down sooner or later, and it's a cinch you won't be able to get spare parts in Russia for an American car."

"That, too, he had taken care of. He was shipping over with him a two-year supply of spare parts, complete with tires and tubes."

"We tried one last question. Knowing Magidoff's unfamiliarity with the more intimate aspects of the horseless carriage, we thought we had him trapped. "Who's going to fix your car when it breaks down in the middle of Russian nowhere? There aren't any service stations over there."

"I have a chauffeur," he replied. "Everybody in Russia who owns a car has to have one. Mine used to be Ambassador Bullitt's chauffeur. He knows more about American cars than Henry Ford."

So now—as if it does us any good—we know an easy way to get a car.

Dak Carnegie

HERE are a few suggestions, on the sure-fire ways of losing friends. 1. Be sloppy. Drop the rings of your friends and leave rings from your drinking glass on the table. Break dishes, and burn holes in the sheets. When you borrow anything at all, either forget to return it or send it back damaged. It requires little effort to deposit a book, or to mark the pages with a pencil. If the article borrowed is clothing, it is a simple matter to return it with a greasy stain or a ripped seam. Never be punctual; always keep the other fellow waiting for you. How could you know that his time is of importance to him.

"When you stay overnight at a friend's house, leave the bathroom in a mess of wet towels and spilled powder. Ten to one the articles of the dresser, too, with very little effort. Send letters without sufficient postage, and always mail your Christmas cards on December 24th. The chances are you were just as busy on December 15th, but—

"2. Be over-sollicitous. If a friend has a cold, keep fussing around him as if he were dying of pneumonia; tell everyone how awful he looks and how worried you are over him. Force gifts on your friends until you embarrass them; especially if you can't afford it; give the impression that you have to bribe your way into their friendship. Run futile little errands for them that they never wanted done, until they are crushed under a load of obligations.

"If you will follow the above, plus yesterday's suggestions, in all probability within one year you will not be bothered by having any friends at all. If by chance a few obligations occasionally linger on, I can offer a brief post-graduate course guaranteed to produce results in even the most aggravated case. This involves understanding with your friend's discipline of their children, causing trouble between husbands and wives, and involving them in your personal affairs. That is, you can invite you and Tom to the same party, or Nell has to be sure you never find out that she still sees Harold, and a little of this and you will find yourself permanently blessed with solitude and in possession of unbroken privacy for the rest of your life."

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON. — Tension has eased somewhat at the old-fashioned, many chimneyed, gray stone department building over the Yugoslav ultimatum. There continues however to be an air of gravity as a result of the meeting in London, for in diplomatic circles it is recognized that this blunt, blistering note to a more or less unimportant puppet state was aimed, not primarily at Marshal Tito and his communist regime, but at the great power which is guiding and shaping the destiny of Yugoslavia. . . . Russia.
This incident served to give notice to the Russians that this nation has drawn a line beyond which we will not go, and, when in conjunction with the ultimatum to Marshal Stalin concerning the Dardanelles, marks a new high in American foreign policy setting up a point where in our dealings with the Soviet Union, Russian expansion will be met without compromise or appeasement.
The Yugoslav incident has overshadowed all other activities in the national capital and the highlight of the affair, the golden lining to the black cloud of international affairs, is the fact that the world organization of the United Nations has met its first test of world policy.
Even Russia did not dare to defy the United Nations and demand moderation to its proposal, when the threat of the ultimatum was to halt the offensive nation before the fact of public opinion before the security council of U.N. Our state department has demonstrated to the world that an ultimatum with an "or else" attachment does not necessarily mean, in these days of enlightenment, mobilization of armed forces.

The "or else" can and does mean that there is a new movement in the world which is taking the place of armed forces in our world which is more effective, more civilized and more Christian. In 1914 and again in the 1930s an ultimatum such as we dispatched to another nation almost surely would have meant war. Today even the threat of nuclear action before the security council of the United Nations brought a blistering communist reply to his senses and forced his mentor, Stalin, to treat softly.

In diplomatic circles here the result of American action, taken as it was during the Paris peace conference, is once a demonstration of our faith in the United Nations and our love of peace, but it is even more a dramatic illustration of the value of world authority such as the United Nations for the prevention of hostilities or armed force.

There may be other "incidents" aimed to provoke the United States or backed into a corner. This is not our business, however, but our state department met with firmness and understanding likely will persuade Russia and any other of the hostile Balkan states, that while we are patient, we are determined to build a permanent peace and we are ready not only to invoke our own full power, but the power of world action through the United Nations to bring about that peace.

SOLED before the ink got dry . . .

That's exactly what O. E. Wells wrote us concerning a wood and coal range he advertised in last week's issue of The Advertiser. Mr. Wells ordered the ad to appear two times, but as usual Advertiser Want Ads bring results in a "one-time" issue.

People today are reading the Want Ads now more than ever before. Certain shortages and scarcity of some items force them to look out for advertised items. And, too, Advertiser Readers are a thrifty group, who read the Advertiser, not only for the home news, but for the many want ad bargains that are found each week in the Want Ad columns.

If you have something to SELL, you'll be surprised how FAST it can be sold through an ADVERTISER AD. And you'll be doing a real service to the community if you dispose of those articles for which you no longer have any use.

MANY FARMERS find it profitable to use the Want Ad columns in the buying and selling of Livestock and Farm Equipment. . . . Farmers, too, read the Want Ad Column of the Advertiser consistently. So when you want to buy or sell, use an Advertiser Ad!

The Plymouth Advertiser

There are few drives in Ohio, for that matter, in the country that have the scenic charm of the lake road in the Sandusky area. The highway hugs the shore of this great inland body of water for many miles.

At one point it crosses Sandusky Bay on a long bridge. Lake Erie is worth seeing in all seasons and in all weathers. When the winds are blowing, huge waves beat against the sandy shores and the rock ledges.

Far out can be seen freighters carrying their cargoes of ore from Lake Superior to the steel mills of Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Closer in are usually myriads of pleasure craft—sail boats, speed boats, row boats. From the latter hopeful fishermen drop their lines in what is considered one of the state's best fishing grounds.

But scenery is not the only attraction by any means. From Sandusky ferries take the visitor to the group of islands which picture the west and the west-turequely dot the western end of Lake Erie.

Here is Put-in-Bay with its towering shaft commemorating Perry's victory over the British in 1813. On the very top of this 332-foot granite column is a platform giving the visitor the magnificent view of the lake islands and the Ohio shores to the west.

In Sandusky Bay itself is Johnson's Island where Confederate officers who were prisoners of war were housed.

Nearby is Kelley's Island with its mysterious Inscription Rocks and its huge Glacial Grooves. Near Castalia is the amazing Blue Hole. The outlet to an underground river, the level and the temperature of the water remain constant. Tradition says that the depth has never yet been plumbed.

At Cedar Point there are beaches for those who wish to lie on the sand and sun themselves or enjoy the coolness of Lake Erie's water.

Hotels and tourist houses are plentiful for those who wish to spend a longer time in this historic and scenic area.

Phil Harris And Alice Faye To Take Comedy Reins of the New "Bandwagon" Show, Sept. 24th

HOLLYWOOD—Alice Faye of the films, and Phil Harris, Jack Benny's wise-cracking, Dixie-loving bandleader pal, become radio's newest husband-and-wife comedy team when the "Fitch Bandwagon" starts the new season on Sunday, Sept. 22 (NBC, 7:30 p. m., EDT).

Phil, who bragged often of his attraction for the ladies during his 10-year tenure on the Benny Show, is due for a surprise when his pretty wife starts checking on some of his stories. The fast-talking maestro will have to put that talent to good use when Alice calls upon him for a few explanations.

Phil, adopted by Southerners as one of their own because of his pleasant drawl and "that's what I like about the South" sentiment, was born in Linton, Ind. The Dixie accent was acquired in Nashville, Tenn., where he attended school. He began his musical career as a drummer but switched to singing because it required less effort.

Forming his own orchestra, he became a "triple threat" entertainer by crooning love songs that were the rage of the young college set, and tossing off quips from the bandstand between choruses. Harris was signed to the Benny show in 1936, where his smart, satirical and misanthropic humor have become an important feature of the Sunday evening program. He continues on that program, which precedes his own by a half-hour.

Alice was graduated from the chorus line to film stardom. The baby-faced New Yorker began her career as a dancer in vaudeville and was one of the chorines in George White's "Scandals" when Rudy Valee met her. The crooning bandleader taught her to sing and gave her a job as vocalist.

When the Valee outfit went to Hollywood for the screen version of the "Scandals," Alice was given a featured role, and she clicked. She stayed in Hollywood to become one of the cinema capital's leading actresses.

Two of the cutest kids in Hollywood will be playing the parts of two of the cutest kids in the San Fernando Valley in the Harris children-on-the "Bandwagon Show." Jeanine Roos, whose "Hiya Hotshot" has been familiar to Jack Benny fans for the past sevson, and Anne Witfield, who is Penny in NBC's "One Man's Family," will play the roles of the Harris children.

When the phone rings in the Harris home, usually one of the children is on the extension phone. "That's why the kid's couldn't play themselves on the new show," says Phil. "They just talk too darned much."

Crisp Irish Linen Sets Inviting Table

FOR an inviting Indian summer dinner, the table setting as well as the food should look invitingly cool. Begin with white embroidered Irish linen place mats and set a bowl of full-blown white roses in a free form of rock-salt crystals for decoration. As the first course serves an eye-appealing salad and remember, as the salad fork is the first piece of silver to be used, to place it to the left of the dinner fork.

POPULARITY IMPORTANT TO CHILDREN

DOES your child bring friends home from school with him? Is he excited and happy as he speaks of school activities and of the boys and girls in his class? Most children nowadays like to go to school, but if your child is one of the few who still fret and fume about it, ask yourself several searching questions concerning him. Is he enjoying maximum health? Are his eyes steady for school tasks—do they may be six years old by the calendar now, still be a year or so behind in the ability of his eyes to focus on the printed page. Have you had his hearing tested? Is he getting enough sleep? Is he happy at home and unworried about his relationship with both parents? Is he jealous of a brighter or more lovable brother or sister?

Professional advice where necessary, extra love and understanding about home difficulties, these are the general remedies for meeting the problems implied by our questions. But there's another important question to ask about your child in determining whether he needs help in making a satisfactory adjustment to school—is he popular with other children?

First, mothers should bear in mind that it is often tragic for a child to be different from other children, even when this difference is a trait his parents are proud of. It is of particular importance that he be dressed very much as other children are. This isn't difficult today when magazine and stores present attractive school wardrobes in several price ranges, yet looking almost identical. As a matter of fact, the mother who is most likely to make mistakes is the one with too much money who can't resist flattery for her children. The over-dressed child reacts either with inufferable vanity, or if sensitive to the approval of other children suffers from looking different.

A little pocket money is also important to a child's happiness within the school group. He ought to be able to join the others for a soda now and then without running home first to ask for the money. If your young hero has a Saturday Children's show, your child will miss a whole week's chatter if he can't join the others in discussing it.

Keep your child as free as possible of special restrictions—at the other boys ride their bikes to school, don't insist that Junior leave his at home because you are afraid the gang may wander too far afield after school hours. Investigate all possible dangers to your children's free movement in your community. These regulations prohibiting the talking of serious risks, but don't tie them down to a certain area just to minimize the wear and tear on your own nervous system.

Of course you can only go so far in making children alike. Gifted, creative child can never be poured into the common mold. He is a gift, though, from the disdain of his classmates if his parents brag about him or build up his ego too much at home. The superior child should be given every encouragement to develop his talents, but at the same time he should have modesty, generosity, and kindness held up to him as of equal importance to achievement.

WHAT AND WHERE IS HEAVEN

by Dalton F. McDougall
Part III

A few weeks ago a description of the new Jerusalem was given, and that it was located in the third heaven. The question that naturally arises, when will this new Jerusalem with all the saved in it descend to this earth? Rev. 21:2 says "and I John saw the Holy City, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." The saved of all ages will go to this new Jerusalem at the second coming of Christ. (John 14:3) Then they will reign with Him there in glory for 1000 years. (Rev. 20:6) At the close of this 1000 years this new Jerusalem will descend from the third heaven to this earth. (Rev. 20:7-3) The wicked of all ages who will then be raised in the second resurrection will attempt to capture it, but the fires of hell will consume them. This devouring fire from God will purify the earth from all sin. Then we wonder what will become of this earth when all sin and sinners are destroyed? We are not left to wonder long, for if we look in the book of 2 Peter 3:10, we will find these words: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall be dissolved with fervent heat; the earth and the works that are therein shall be burned up." Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwell the righteous. Matt. 5:13. The Bible expression "the end of the world" means the end of this present order of earthly things, or the end of this age.

This globe on which we live will never come to an end, because this earth will be regenerated into a perfect new earth through the stand throughout the eternal ages. This very earth of ours when purified from sin and made new by the hand of God will become the heavenly inheritance of the saints. (Rev. 21:1) The new Jerusalem will remain on the new earth as its grand capital. (Rev. 21:1-3) This new earth with the new Jerusalem in its center will constitute the eternal home of all the saved. At this time a great promise of Christ will be fulfilled. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5:5. The meek will be exalted to inherit the earth when the wicked are cut off, and the earth is made new. (Ps. 37:34-11) Nobody will be left to live in that new earth except the obedient and the good.

Part IV will take up the question "What prayer will then be answered?"

Son of Former Plymouth Superintendent Married in Cleveland Heights

The following social news items are of interest locally as the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Davis now of Cleveland Heights, formerly of Plymouth. Mr. Davis was superintendent of the local schools before leaving for Cleveland. The article was received by local friends and taken from a Cleveland paper:

The custom of open church was observed for the wedding last Friday evening of Miss Neva Janis Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lester Foley, 18406 Newell Rd., Shaker Heights, and Mr. Alan Judkins Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thoburn S. Davis, 3230 Hyde Park ave., Cleveland Heights. It was a simple and informal wedding at 8 in the Church of the Saviour with Rev. Vermer S. Mumbulo performing the ceremony before a setting of white gladioli, candelabra and greens. A reception for friends and relatives was held afterward in the church.

Miss Foley wore a white matron's dress with a white tulle-trimmed gown made with peplum of eyelet embroidery which material also formed the ruffle outlining the drop shoulder of the fitted bodice. Her skirt was full with a long train and her finger-tips veiled in real lace was held to her head with an orange-blossom crown.

Her cousin, Miss Doris Lyman of Shelburne, Falls, Mass., was her maid of honor, and serving as junior bridesmaids were Marjorie Louise Foley and Catherine Davis, sisters of the bride and bridegroom.

His best man and ushering were Messrs. Theodore Kohl, Mark O'Neill, Pitt Curtis and William Elvery.

The couple are now honeymooning and on their return will be in New Haven, Conn., as Mr. Davis will be entering Yale as a sophomore.

During the war he served as a first sergeant with the 990th Signal Corps stationed in Vienna, and Metz, France. He was graduated from Heights High School and was awarded duplicate scholarships at Yale for high athletic as well as scholastic standing. After entering the Army, the scholarships were turned over to other candidates and Mr. Davis will now enroll at Yale under the Veteran's Plan.

His bride attended Hiram College and received her degree as an Occupational Therapist at the University of Pennsylvania. Since obtaining her diploma she has been employed professionally with the Veteran's Rehabilitation Service.

Brown and daughter Janet of Southampton, Mass., Mrs. Robert Scott, Shelburne Falls, Mass., and Mrs. William Caldwell, Hartford, Conn., and the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. R. D. Jesus and Covetousness.

Lesson for September 15: Exodus 20; 17; Proverbs 11: 23, 24; Luke 12: 13-21.

Memory Selection: Proverbs 11: 24.

Last but not least among the Ten Commandments is this: "Thou shalt not covet." For besides this law can lead man into many temptations and cause them to break other commandments. A man in his desires must respect a neighbor's possessions, if he is to abstain from taking them.

The Proverbs show that the desire of the righteous man is only good, but the expectation of the wicked leads to ruin.

The covetous man who sought the aid of Jesus in getting his brother to divide the inheritance, led the Master to speak of the evil of covetousness. A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things he possesses.

Thus he told the story of the rich and foolish farmer, whose life had proceeded on three great mistakes—that he could live for and unto himself alone, that he could feed his soul on corn, and that he had unlimited time to enjoy what he possessed.

He put his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." He spoke to his soul as if he might stifle his soul and feed it like the beasts of his farm; and he counted on many years to enjoy his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." He spoke to his soul as if he might stifle his soul and feed it like the beasts of his farm; and he counted on many years to enjoy his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." He spoke to his soul as if he might stifle his soul and feed it like the beasts of his farm; and he counted on many years to enjoy his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." He spoke to his soul as if he might stifle his soul and feed it like the beasts of his farm; and he counted on many years to enjoy his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." He spoke to his soul as if he might stifle his soul and feed it like the beasts of his farm; and he counted on many years to enjoy his life for himself alone; he had said to his soul, "These harvest goods laid up for many years: take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." ROADS SUFFER FROM MISHAPS

Real property damage resulting from 1945 traffic accidents on Ohio's rural state highway system amounted to $2,341,000, State Highway Director Perry T. Ford announced.

That figure is large, the director said, but the figure, estimated by adding hidden costs to the property damage total is staggering — $24,000,000. These hidden costs include such things as wage loss, doctor and hospital fees and overhead cost of insurance.

The $2,341,000 figure was computed from the estimates of damage submitted with the traffic accident reports received by the State Highway Department's Division of Traffic and Safety from the State Highway Patrol, county sheriffs and other reporting agencies.

In 413 fatal traffic accidents during 1945, property damage amounted to $197,424. This represents an average cost of $501 per fatal accident.

In personal injury accidents, the accumulative total of property damage was $1,260,700, or an average of $24 per accident.

Property damage totals in property damage accidents was $82,462, or an average of $160 per accident.

While these costs primarily are the result of damage to vehicles, Mr. Ford said, they also include damage to state property or equipment. Last year damage to highway guard rails, signs and markers totaled $32,600, representing the cost of repairing or replacing such damaged equipment.
