'Parents' Nite' Held By Scouts

They One held another one of its FIRSTS last Monday evening when a Parents nite was observed. This is the first time in the history of the troop that a meeting of parents only has been held according to Chairman Harold Sams.

Also present were Area Executive Carl Bachmann, District Commissioner Don Einsel and Community Club President Ford Davis. Remarks were given by these men. Scoutmaster MacMichael using two perfectly uniformed scouts, gave a demonstration of the proper use of the insignia on a Boy Scout and Explorer Uniform.

The picture "Years Between" was shown in technicolor. Also a short of the 1939 Camporall. This short is in color and was taken by Jim Root. Our many thanks to the Presbyterian church for the use of their projector and to James Cunningham for his time in running the machine.

Chairman Sams conducted an abbreviated Committee meeting and provisions were made to collect waste paper. The market has opened up once again. The date has been set for a week from Saturday. More details will follow. It was also suggested at the meeting that a date be set for another Parents Meeting in the month of December.

Refreshments supervised by Assistant Scoutmaster Don Smith followed the meeting, attended by about forty people. Pictures of the group were taken by Peyton Thomas.

NEW ALTAR FOR CHILDREN

A new small altar for the Children's Worship Services, preceding the Methodist Sunday School, was installed and used Sunday for the first, and was very impressive to the children. A new white cross, and white candlesticks and candles and The Bible rested on the new altar.

On the long window sill below the large stained class window were white wooden candelabra. Special songs for the opening worship service are being learned by the first three classes of the Sunday School, and this group will have their own ushers and collectors.

Parents who have children in the first three classes are asked to see that their boys and girls are at Church a little before 10 o'clock Sunday mornings so that they may attend the full service and not interrupt the service by coming in late.

JOIN OUR BOOK WEEK AND SEE— THE WORLD!

Next week, beginning with Sunday, November 13, is National Book Week. If you have not as yet visited your Plymouth Library, make it a promise to do so next week, and be sure to take your children with you.

To quote from a recent publication—"to provide books for people to read and to get people to read books" is the first purpose of a Library. Plymouth Library offers a variety of books and reading material so that all ages of readers and interests will be pleased.

Have you ever associated the idea of books and libraries with Democracy? Democracy such as we enjoy could not be continued if the reading of books and their selection to suit the individual, should suddenly be forbidden. Only in a free country can you select your own book and read as you please.

Here's another idea—would you like to enlarge your circle of acquaintances? This is one way, and we quote—"you may go to the library shelf and by the simple act of taking down books and turning their pages, secure an introduction to the wisest men and women of the ages."

NEXT WEEK IS BOOK WEEK —BE SURE TO READ A BOOK.

MASONIC LODGE TO HOLD ELECTION

The Richland Masonic Lodge, No. 201, F. & A. M. will hold its annual election of officers at the next regular meeting, Monday, November 14, 1949. A turkey dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. preceding the meeting at 7:30 p. m. All members are urged to attend.

REMEMBER !!

Come to the Junior Class Play "People Are Funny" on November 22, 1949. This comedy in three acts will provide plenty of enjoyable laughter for young and old. If you think that an evening of absolute amusement and relaxation is worth 30 cents to you and 25 cents to your children and students, then drop around Tuesday November 22 at 8:00 p. m. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the Junior Class.

The cast is as follows:
Francis Bevier—the ambitious mother
Louis Root—her only son
Eugene Koser—Just I.e. father!
Barbara Fox—the older daughter;
Penny Christian—the younger daughter
Mary Jo Ganzhorn—the girl next door
Donald Ray—the father next door
Lewis Schneider—a young man from Chicago
Larry Schreer—a friend of the man from Chicago
Shirley Birath—a social queen
Beverly Williams—a secretary
Carol Teal—her traveling companion
Joyce Donnerwirth—the aunt from the country
Janet Robertson—her daughter
The director of the play is Mr.

Samaha.
A few of the actors are having some difficulty with their parts Mary Jo Ganzhorn, (Winnie), was Mr. Samaha in a dither because of her obvious inability to giggle, which is called for quite often in the script. Due to Frances Bevier's (mother) constant practicing of her fainting scene, the life of the davenport will probably end abruptly one of these evenings. The actor experiencing the most difficulty learning her part is Carol Teal, whose lines consist of mastering three words. Despite this and the fact that the actors have the urge to constantly walk into the scenery instead of through the doors, Junior Play practice is getting along splendidly.

Miss Sully Fenner Becomes Bride of Salvatore J. Glorioso

The wedding of Miss Sully Fenner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Fenner, 193 Nicholas Ave., Plymouth and Mr. Salvatore J. Glorioso, son of Mr. Tony Glorioso of Mansfield was solemnized Saturday, November 5th in St. Joseph's Catholic church. Rev. Fr. George P. Sira, M. S. C., performed the double ring ceremony at 9 a. m. in a nuptial high mass.

Miss Tress Fogal, organist, gave a short program of nuptial music with her choir of the church furnishing the musical selections. The altar was decorated with two beauty baskets of white and yellow chrysanthemums and small bouquets of mixed mums in vases and ferns. The setting was illuminated with many candles and two seven branched candelabra.

Miss Fenner given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful wedding gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long pointed sleeves. The bodice buttoned down the back, was attached to a full skirt which extended into a long train.

The finger tip veil of tulle was attached to a tiara of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and greenery, tied with white satin ribbon.

The attendants were Miss Mary Salvaggio of Cleveland, a friend of the bride, who was maid of honor and wore a yellow velvet gown, Miss Josephine Cirvalo of Mansfield, niece of the groom, was the bridesmaid and wore a rust velvet gown. They both wore matching head bands and carried chrysanthemums.

Mr. Glorioso was attended by Thomas Letizia as best man. James Profferi was an usher.

A reception followed the ceremony with a breakfast served at the home of the bride's parents. A dinner was served at 2 o'clock at the Eagles Hall at Mansfield where sixty relatives were served.

The bride's table was centered with a four-tiered wedding cake decorated in yellow and topped with a miniature bride and groom, and fall flowers completed the refreshment table, from which refreshments were served at 6 o'clock. The couple then left on a wedding trip to Detroit.

The new Mrs. Glorioso came to

Football Team Has New Equipment

Two weeks ago the Rogers Sporting Goods Store of Bucyrus delivered 15 side line jackets to the High School football team. A couple days later, Burr Knaus came to the school building and gave two, one hundred dollar checks to Mr. Dennis. One was a personal check, the other was from the Hoffman Farms.

The checks were used to pay for the jackets and the balance was to be applied on the new football pants. These pants are made of combat nylon with an elastic back. The color is white, trimmed with red and blue. The pants were bought by old brand.

You are invited to come to the Cardington game on Friday, November 11 at 2:00 p. m.

THE PLYMOUTH STORY

Locke Starts Paper; Other Historical Notes

Third Installment

"Next (going east) was the little building I have before mentioned, as the temporary shelter of my father's drug stock after the fire."

"Next came the residence of Mr. Day, some such a house as John Culp's; but its front door opened right on the street. (This would be either the location of McFalls or Dr. LaBarre's.) Mr. Day was a blacksmith and his shop was next east of the house. The oldest son worked with his father; the second—Frank, went into the Navy; the third—Calvin, was about in 1887, a ticket agent in St. Louis or Kansas City. If there were daughters, I remember only one—'Het' who became, as I have said, Mrs. Rogers."

"Next was a lane running north, that after a number of rods became a street. (This would be Porter Street) and this was a shop—blacksmith, I think, run by the Ways, or Weights. Anyhow a family of that name lived in the next house. If I remember rightly, it was the last on the east side of the east end of the Square."

"In my introductory of the plan of Plymouth I said two roads came in from the east or north of north of east, the other from south of east—into the Square. They therefore formed a pointed lot. On this lot stood a large two storied frame building known as Savier's Store."

"There was no occupant however when my recollection of the place begins. (This would be about 1843.) There was a Savier there somewhere, though I recall but one name, that of a boy Henry Savier, (or was it John?) The store room was large; at one time there was a school exhibition there of Recitations, Declamations and Dialogues; this must have been before the Public School was built. I and another girl had a dialogue 'Have You Seen My Tiam?'"

"Somewhere about 1853 or 1854 the building was taken by two young men—Robinson and Locke—and equipped for printing. I think they issued a weekly paper but I do not know what it was."

"Mr. Robinson married Sarah Benschoter and D. R. Locke married one of the Bodine girls whose father's farm was, as I have said, out on the road running to the northeast. (The present County Line Road.) After a while they sold the equipment to my father. He published no paper I am sure, but I do think he printed his own advertising for a medicine he had concocted called 'Dr. Christie's Agree Balsam' and the wrappings were for the bottles. Agree—sometimes called 'chills and fever' was very prevalent then, not only with us but in Indiana and Illinois; and our fathers will find reference to this illness in Harlan Hatcher's 'Story of the Western Reserve.'"

"Robinson and Locke went to Toledo and started a paper. I think it was The Toledo Blade. Here D. R. Locke published the 'Petroleum V. Nasby Papers' which gave him national fame."

"By 1855 father had sold the entire printing equipment; I do not know to whom; it may have been Balsley."

"Across the street or road running to the southeast, was the Wolfersberger tavern. Part of it faced the Square, part of it faced the street; it turned the corner so to speak. A family of the name of Wolfersberger lived there; there was a Jane Wolfersberger and a little girl about my age. She had a lovely play house in an unused smoke-house; on which account I wanted to go there to play. But my Mother would not allow it, probably because it was a tavern and the patrons were often rough men."

"Extending west from the tavern on the south side of the Square, were several shops or stores. I remember nothing about them until we come to McDonough's Store. It was in a two story building, with gable-end to the road. It must have been one of the first constructions in the town, and it may have been the first store and at one time the only one. It was the kind that catered to the pioneers, carrying everything an early family would want."

"There were modern stores carrying simply Dry Goods or Tin ware or shoes, as the case might be; but Robert McDonough carried everything; calicos, silk and alpacas, cotton cloth, crockery and cooking utensils, tubs, ox yokes, hanks, mops, cone-shaped sugar knives, the paper hanging from overhead beams and so on and so on."

"Next was my father's Drug store. He also sold sugar, molasses, various oils and spices. I think he must have dealt in toilet articles such as Cologne which he compounded, and 'Bear's Grease' which he bought in New York; men used this to make their hair stay slick; but if they leaned against walls they left grease spots."

"We have now gone round the Square back to the starting point, from one end of the Square to the street running south my memory comes first to the Post Office. (This would be the first building at that time on Plymouth St., just south of the tavern on the corner.) This was in a little 9 x 15 wooden building. The postmaster was a Mr. Kirtland. He and his wife came from one of the Carolinas."

"They lived beyond Wolfersberger's tavern, either on the Snarlytown road or just off it to the south. (Maybe on Mulberry, which was a large family of children, Eleck (or Aleck) Kent, George, Alvin, Fred, David, Collie, Mack, Emma and Margery. Margery married a Mr. Strass of Carey, O.")

"Mrs. Kirtland was a most lovable woman, a veritable 'Mother in Israel.' I think the town called her 'Grandma Kirtland.' She had several old hooties. Following the Southern gentle woman."

"Next south of the Post Office was the residence of Robert McDonough. This was one of the best built of the older houses. There was some front yard and a large side yard in which was a considerable garden including a large strawberry bed; this had sawdust spread around the plants to keep the berries clean."

"Mr. McDonough was, at last as I thought, the rich man of the town. He was grave and dignified; wore side whiskers; and for neckties he had them made of subdued Scotch gingham, or black silk, three corners, as large as half of a very large handkerchief; his collar was like the fashions of our gentleman of that day, a standing one with points pointing at each other just under the chin and the points at the back of the neck, these however weren't really points because they were rounded off."

"He was a pillar in the Presby. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and his pew was in the southwest Amen Corner. His family when I knew them, consisted of his second wife and two daughters by his first wife; they were Carrie and Addie. Addie died in her teens. Carrie married a brother of Elias Strong. Mrs. McDonough was very delicate, and dying I think from what folks then called 'Long Consumption.' (There was occasionally a death from 'Quick Consumption.' Today we know this disease as TB.)

"She embroidered beautifully and the Sunday pantalette of her step daughters gave evidence of her skill. In those days the little girls of the 'well-to-do' wore pantalletes buttoned on to their drawers above the knees and coming to the shoe tops; the dresses came a little below the knees. Everyday pantalletes had plain wide hems; Sunday ones were embroidered or 'double hemstitched' called in those days 'drawn work.' They were always stiffly starched, beautifully ironed and brushed against each other at every step, making a noise like 'frisky, frisky.'"

"Mother did fine hemstitching and she did some for the pantalletes of the McDonough girls, and Mrs. McDonough embroidered some for my sister and myself, so we were well off with two kinds of best pantalletes."

"Mrs. McDonough died about the time we left Plymouth. The third wife was one of the Drennen girls; of which family more later. 'During the years we lived in Plymouth we lived in four different houses. The first (1847), we lived in a little house next south of McDonoughs. (This would be where the Presbyterian church is located now, or perhaps where Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Root live.)"

"The second, 1848, belonged to the widow Bodley and was the next house south of our first little one. The third (1849), about two blocks south of the Bodley place, rented from Lyman Strong; the fourth—1851—was bought by my father from a Mr. Graham who moved to his farm on the road running northeast from the Square. This new home of ours was the first residence on the east side of the New Haven road (north from the Square.) If the streets had names I never heard them; I only know them as I have designated them."

"The first home was a house of one room with two little bed rooms on one side of the living room and a lean-to wood shed at the back. There was a large fireplace in the living room; Mother did her cooking there; I think there was a brick oven, but I know there was a hood-shaped tin thing set with its open face to the fire in which she baked biscuits."

"The Mother also had her spinning wheel in this little house on which she spun the white yarn for our stockings. I saw her make our candles here too, some by running melted tallow into tin moulds; and others by dipping candle wicking of candle length tied to a wooden rod, into melted tallow."

"Here, too, I saw my father get his money ready for his New York trip to buy goods. He had a wide chamoin skin belt with compartments in it large enough to take in certain sizes of gold money; I saw him handle $20 gold pieces. There were no banks in those days but State banks, and the bills of a bank were not certainly good very far from that bank. Merchants, if they took only bills to New York were not sure they would have any money by the time they got to the big city."

"Father went on the Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark Railroad to Sandusky; from there by boat to Buffalo and from there on by stage or canal and Hudson river boat. Father evidently prospered for every move was into a house with more rooms. The Bodley house (1848) had two main rooms besides the necessary bedrooms. The two main rooms were front ones each with a door opening on the street."

"The Strong house, 1849, had three large rooms on first floor—living room, kitchen and Mother's room; and two or three rooms upstairs. 'Twas here that Mother first had a hired girl, a colored Topsy creature, drifted down, probably from Oberlin."

"We were proud and happy when we moved into the Graham house. There was a hall and a front stairs, a parlor, dining room, a bright kitchen, three little bedrooms downstairs and two upstairs. Besides there was Mother's room off the dining room and sometimes called the 'nursery'; was used very much for a sitting room. Here we had our first 'Ingram Carpet' in the parlor; the other rooms had rag carpets; here we had a present from father's parents—mahogany haircloth covered furniture."

"And here we had better class hired girls. The wages were from $1 to $2 a week. We considered the house convenient; there was a back stairway; a closet off the parlor for our best clothes and bonnets; there was a big woodhouse, a little house for our vinegar and soap barrels; and a spring house for the keeping of butter and milk. And what was mentioned as particularly convenient was an open brick lined drain, several rods in length with its head near the back door; all the water from the dishpans and tubs could be emptied here and carried clear away from the house."

"If there were kitchen sinks with pipes to a drain in this county I never saw them. But the best thing about the Graham place was the large lot full of fruit trees running from the New Haven road to a narrow street or lane of which more later. (This home was located about where Mr. and Mrs. C. Archer now reside, and the lot extended back to the present Fortner street.) Most of the fruit was peach, in this orchard."
