POTATOES ARE HIGHER

The Maine potato deal which came out in the papers the past week should prove to the taxpayer and the housewife that government controls are favoring a few and working a hardship on many. There must be something "fishy" about our government controls on agriculture. Let's take for an example the 30-acre farm which was purchased in 1939 for $3,000, and in 1948 netted its owner $13,160. This is a small operation in Maine as far as potatoes grew. It has been reported that potato growers have sold to the government potatoes valued from $100,000 to almost a half million dollars.

We are not prone to complain about high agricultural prices, but as the Maine farmers say: "Santa Claus can't live forever." And this kind of farm control cannot continue. We believe that the average farmer would not want controls on his products if there were any doubt about the fairness of the deal. If Maine potato growers can reap a harvest of gold within a year, they will not then grow corn and wheat producers, or even the celery growers at Celeryville.

American citizens have been told, and they should know by now, that when our government goes to the extreme, such as it has in taxation and the reckless spending of billions of dollars, that somewhere, somehow, and some time, we are going to pay the piper. If we want to fold our hands, close our eyes, and let a handful of politicians hand out a controlled destiny to one hundred and forty million Americans, then we should not be surprised when we open our eyes too late to find that we have been misled.

Why farm controls and price supports? Evidently, the labor leaders in Washington have gained a foothold. Our government has "babied" labor and in order to get votes, they will continue to do so. Labor has greatly helped prices to remain high, so high in fact that if it were not for farm price supports farm machinery sales would taper off more so than they have. So, in order to enable the farmer to purchase equipment, the government hands him out a little cash, that is, except the potato growers, who have had a grand time raking in extra dollars.

What has been applied to Maine potato growers through farm controls, will also be used in the forthcoming elections in the corn-hog regions of the west. The politicians are looking forward to getting the farm votes in this area, and no doubt a similar lush agricultural program will be set up in this area to gain favor of the farmer.

In other words the politicians are playing labor against agriculture and agriculture against labor. Labor has some ten million votes, and the farmer still has a good margin. These voters, who are neither farmer or support a union, are a controlling factor at election time, and sooner or later they are going to get fed up on farm supports and labor bill.

It is needless to say that the government will abandon farm controls until it is forced to. As long as the taxpayers pour in billions of dollars for government agencies to hand out to various sections of the country . . . to those who support their demands, (the government) will continue to devise ways and means to get the cash. What has been applied to the Maine potato grower, has also been used in the cotton and tobacco areas of the nation. And don't overlook the fact that last year the annual tax taken by the government from tobacco sources totaled more than four billion dollars.

Farmers can take a great stride in setting the country on a solid financial and democratic basis. They can regain their freedom if they wish and bring about a greater understanding of agriculture and what it means to America. They can gain recognition for their labor and products and enjoy a healthy progressive period for many years. It will mean re-adjustments, not only for them, but every American.

Our government has been too long interested in controlling the individual life and habits of its citizens . . . and still trying to call itself a democracy. If American farmers like farm controls, then they should not overlook the fact that the small business man and manufacturer, and the housewife should be given government consideration, too. That would even things up. It seems to us that most Americans would still enjoy being individualists, despite the reforms and red tape handed out by the bureaucrats.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

The Nation is shocked at the boldness of the five percenters. Not only should it be shocked, but it should realize what Members of Congress have to contend with. These five percenters do not always just work at the executive end of Pennsylvania Avenue. On many occasions they operate in the Capitol, and even in the committee rooms and on the floor of both the House and Senate.

Some of the industrialists have employed former Members of Congress. A number of Congressmen have even resigned to accept jobs with large salaries. Of course, these Members are expected to lobby on the floor, and to use their former friendship and close association with Members in order to get favorable legislation for their particular industry or monopoly, or to prevent adverse legislation.

Other lobbyists testify before committees in opposition to public power and transmission lines. They represent the power trust. This monopoly would have the public spend billions of dollars in constructing large dams and projects, and then sell the electric energy to them at the bus bar—meaning thereby at the dam. They are opposed to having the Government build the transmission lines so that hydro-electric power may be furnished to farms, villages and towns.

There is one such lobbyist that frequently attends the Public Lands Committee. He is a $44,000 a year beauty with an expense account of $2800. This was for the year 1948. I do not know what it is for 1949, but he is still on the job—undoubtedly with increased compensation and expense.

I believe in private industry, but I do not believe that private industry should be allowed to block the full utilization of Federal projects, such as the Central Valley in California, the Missouri River Basin and others of equal importance. These lobbyists are a public nuisance.

In addition to these high priced, useless and questionable lobbyists, there are the various pressure groups. These have a sure cure for all evils, but unfortunately their remedy generally is just the individual idea of some so-called leader, who may on occasions be right, but generally is wrong. He may also have a very hidden personal interest in the outcome of legislation, and then again he may be a crusader. Many times his remedy is worse than the evil it is aimed at.

Behind The Scenes

In American Business

By Reynolds Knight

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 — Outcome of the current dispute between sixty-four steel companies and the CIO United Steel Workers could have major repercussions on the country's economy. For in recent years the industry has tended to set a pattern for many others. "As goes the steel wage, so goes the nation," has taken its place with the old election slogan about Maine and the nation.

The union is seeking a 30-cents-an-hour increase, in a "package" which includes a fourth-wage increase and pension and insurance benefits. Steel companies say any increase would have to be reflected immediately in higher prices, and at a time when sales are slipping.

Involved are two schools of thought, poles apart, which President Truman's fact-finding board must somehow reconcile in its report due August 30. Union economists assert that the raise would help boost consumer purchasing power, halt declining production and increasing unemployment, and stimulate business investment in plant and equipment.

Other economists label this a "fantastic concept of what makes jobs and mass volume business." They point out, too, that an increase of just 13 1/2 cents an hour would amount, in the case of U. S. Steel, to more than this leading company paid its dividend to its hundreds of thousands of stockholders for all of 1948 and in interest to the many bondholders and institutions which have loaned the company money for investment in plant and equipment.

LESS MOO, MORE MILK — The well known ingenuity of the American farmer in finding ways of growing two blades of alfalfa where one grew before is again demonstrated in a comparison of dairy practices distilled by American Can Company. The figures show that while the number of cows in the country has been decreasing since 1945 at the rate of more than a million head a year, the supply of milk is at least as plentiful as ever.

The bovine population now figures out to one milch cow for every six persons. In 1920 it was one for five, and back in 1870, one for four. A comforting note for those who would shed a tear over the seeming disappearance of Old Boss is the report that there still are 24,450,000 cows and heifers in the country today, and they are producing just as much milk as 27,770,000 did in 1945. Thanks to more scientific and efficient dairy methods, the average cow's yield is now about two and a half tons of milk a year, up 10 per cent from 1945.

Less wastage and spottage of milk can be attributed also, in part at least, to the canning industry which last year put up more than 2,400,000,000 cans of unsweetened milk and about 132 million cans of the sweetened variety. The average citizen, the can company points out, now consumes about 388 pounds of fluid milk and cream each year along with some 19 pounds of evaporated milk and about 10 pounds of butter.

Paper In Memory Of Flora Swanger Read At Meeting

There was a good attendance at the W. S. C. S. meeting at the Methodist church last Thursday. The dinner was especially well patronized, and a fine program, under the supervision of Mrs. Lucy Dowd, was given in the afternoon.

A paper in memory of the late Mrs. Flora Swanger was well received and is of much interest to most of our readers. It was read by Mrs. Chas. Seaman, and excerpts are as follows:

"In memory of the late Mrs. Flora Marriott Swanger, this church has lost its oldest member, and in behalf of our church and society we extend our sincere sympathy and a vote of thanks for her generous gift. Mrs. Swanger was the daughter of William and Mary Hunter Long, who helped organize the second Methodist church in Richland county.

"A Methodist missionary, Dr. Wm. James, who settled in Mansfield about 1810, organized a Methodist Sunday school and preached several years before the erection of the church in 1816.

"The second Methodist class in the county was organized in Castletown in the vicinity of Old Salem cemetery, about the year of 1824. Records have been lost but it is known that meetings were held in barns, open air and homes, and met at stated times in the cabin of John Long, the great grandfather of the late Mrs. Flora Swanger. The Longs were ardent church workers and Wm. Long, Mrs. Swanger's father, served as class leader for many years.

"Mrs. Swanger served as church organist a number of years, as well as in other church activities and taught a class in Sunday school. At the time of her first marriage the church members gave her a handsome clock in appreciation of her faithful service.

"On leaving this vicinity to make their home in Shelby, the congregation gave her and her family a very nice farewell party, feeling the loss of their help and interest in the church and community."
