

F. B. LOFLAND SENDS STORY FROM WEST PALM BEACH, FLA.

Brit Lofland, wife and son Paul, who are spending the winter at West Palm Beach, Fla., is putting out "bait" to us Northerners, who have been almost snowbound since Thanksgiving, to go "South, Anglers... Go South."

"The greatest run of sailfish ever reported in the area was frolicking in local waters today."

"Anglers estimated that 750 sailfish were hooked and caught Wednesday in the Hobe Sound area between here and Stuart, 90 percent of which were released."

"About 75 fishing craft of every description participated in the haul. The unprecedented run started Tuesday, Christmas Day. Fishing guides said the sails are feeding in the area."

"C. F. Johnson, chairman of the committee sponsoring the International Saffish Tournament opening here next month, said he caught and released 21 sailfish Tuesday and Franklin Smith, Pittsburgh reported he hooked and released 30 in the past three days."

"Stuart reported about 500 sailfish caught by 65 charter boats from Stuart and West Palm Beach. One boat flew 23 release flags and all craft reported 10 to 12 sailfish during the first release program."

"Previous record run was in 1940 when an estimated 1,000 fish were caught and released in five days."

Recreation League Meets Tonight

On December 29th a group of young men interested in Community recreation met in the auditorium of the High School. For an hour, they discussed the possibility of defining a recreation program. It was decided at that meeting that the group would reassemble the following night for the purpose of organizing a basketball league. However, because of previous commitments, some were unable to attend.

The organization date has been re-scheduled. The meeting will be held tonight, Thursday, Jan. 4 at 7 p. m. in the high school building.

If you are interested you should be there. Your interest may be in participation. It could be learning to officiate basketball games; help the program along as scorekeepers, time keepers or reporters will be needed.

It is possible that the group will be watching the games. Whatever your interest, be present and lend your support to the program.

DOG TAGS SAME PRICE IN 1951

Despite increases in animal claims and increased value of livestock and increased operating costs, the Huron County Commissioners have not increased the cost of dog tags for 1951. Rather than to increase the fee, it is intended to meet the increased costs by making an all out effort to have every dog tag in the County licensed.

Dog tags have been on sale at the County Auditor's Office since January 1, and are available in every Community in the County at the usual places, where they can be secured by mail.

January 20 will be the date set by law to secure dog tags on the part of dog-owners and after that date a penalty applies.

BOARD HIRES NEW LIGHT AND WATER SUPERINTENDENT

A new superintendent of the light and water department was hired Tuesday night when the Board of Public Affairs gave a contract to Lincoln Sprowles of Ripley, Ohio. Mr. Sprowles will take over his new job January 16. He comes to Plymouth highly recommended and with many years of experience behind him. He met with the Board Tuesday night and discussed his new position from many angles. Mr. Sprowles is presently serving as assistant superintendent of the light and water department at Ripley, a village of 1800 people. This village is serviced by the Cincinnati Gas & Electric on about the same basis as Plymouth is served by the Ohio Power Co. He was formerly connected with the R.E.A.

Mr. Sprowles succeeds E. L. "Buck" Cook who took over the superintendent of the light and water department here at the close of World War II. Rooks informed those present on Wednesday that he was severing connections with the village immediately.

While the distribution system in Plymouth is a fairly good one, there have been many installations tapped onto the lines during the past year. Many complaints of "overcharges" by customers. It is also planned to install a 24-hour "complaint" department to receive all complaints which may cause trouble in radios, television sets and other appliances. It will take a few months to get the program completed, but it is believed that all patrons will be greatly benefited.

The Board also hopes to install a lighting meter reading device whereby all electric and water meters will be read on the same date of each month. This will tend to smooth out many complaints of "overcharges" by customers. There is an emergency call and any others who may wish to assist may send their donations the latter part of the week to the church in North and South Korea at 57 Plymouth Street.

Here the clothing will be processed and shipped through the Church World Service Channel. A charge of 10c per pound is levied for shipping the goods to Korea.

Independents Win Over Air Depot

Sparked by the players of previous Plymouth High School, the Plymouth Independents sailed to another easy victory over the Farsel Air Depot of Shelby, Plymouth pumped to an early lead in the first period, and was never threatened during the remainder of the game. This being the 13th win in as many games.

Among them were the New Washington Pirates, (34 wins and 4 losses) and Seaton's of Ontario who have lost only two games thus far. The team has an average of 67.3 points per game. This is gained only by fine ball handling, excellent passwork and fine marksmanship of the team. The height of this team enables them to control the majority of the rebound thus giving them an advantage over most of the surrounding teams. This team is not entered in any league as no schedule has been set up, but in the near future a schedule will be worked out and printed, thus making it possible for those who want to follow the Air Depot and give them your moral support, as this team is solely supported by the players.

VanderBilt paced the Independents, by splitting the nets with 16 field goals and one gift shot artist, Des. Donnerwhit set shot artist, Des. Donnerwhit with 22. He is a member of the finest set of twin boys you ever saw (his grandchildren). Just three more years and we will get a lot of pleasure out of presenting Mr. Nimmons with a beautiful bouquet for his fifty years of banking in Plymouth.

New Faces To Be Seen In Ice Follies Which Open At Cleveland Arena, Thursday, Jan. 18

Marking their 15th anniversary, producers Shiptad and Johnson have added a miracle touch to their current edition, ICE FOLLIES OF 1951 which will be seen at the Cleveland Arena beginning Thursday, January 18 through January 28 with matinees both Saturdays and Sundays during the limited run.

Since its founding back in 1936 as the original traveling ice show ICE FOLLIES has become larger, more spectacular, finer with each succeeding season. The soundness of the three producers' original idea that ice skating could be fine entertainment is verified by the fact that more than 28 million from coast to coast have seen the blade extravaganza since its original performance. Upholding their reputation for a master touch, Eddie and Roy Shiptad and Oscar Johnson have maintained a fine balance between comedy, spectacle and sheer skating skill in creating this season's version of the famous musical revue on ice.

New faces are to be seen among the long list of skating stars. Making her American debut in the present ICE FOLLIES is World's Champion Aja Vranova who came to this country recently from Czechoslovakia. Another new headline artist is Dick Dwyer, youthful blade artist from Burbank, California who has been hailed as a "miniature Roy Shiptad!"

Awarded $5,000

On Saturday, December 30, 1950, on the fourth day of a jury trial, the jury brought in a verdict of five thousand dollars in favor of Charles Antrim, Norwalk, O., against Dr. Paul M. Gibbons, Norwalk dentist, his wife Catherine Gibbons, and Lesta Morrison, 20584, Beaconsfield Boulevard, Rocky River, Ohio, in a case in which the plaintiff Charles Antrim charged the defendants with the alienation of the affections of his former wife, Lesta Gibbons, daughter of socially prominent Norwalk, Ohio, dentist, Dr. and Mrs. Paul M. Gibbons.

The hotly contested jury trial began on Wednesday, Dec. 27, 1950, in the Common Pleas Court of Huron County, Ohio, at Norwalk before a specially assigned judge from Morrow County, Judge

Leland Rutherford, and with Attorney Clifford Brown of Norwalk as counsel for the plaintiff Antrim, and Huron County Prosecuting Attorney Herbert Froman representing the socially prominent defendants. The defendant Lesta Morrison is the sister of Dr. Paul Gibbons.

The case developed the fact that the defendants induced Lesta Antrim, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Gibbons, to obtain a divorce from plaintiff in December, 1949, after the young couple had eloped and married in October, 1949, while the Gibbons daughter was attending Duke University at Durham, North Carolina. She was then eighteen years of age, and the plaintiff Antrim was 26.

Dr. Gibbons was a former member of the Norwalk City Council and President of the Norwalk Board of Education. He has practiced dentistry in Norwalk for many years.

Old Faithful To The Rescue

By Dorothy Boys Killan

ROGER TOOK one hand off the wheel of the convertible and started to put it around Sue's waist.

She edged away. "It takes two hands to drive on these snowy roads," she explained, laughing nervously.

Why had she drawn away, she wondered. Mightn't she have expected Roger to be pretty c-ck-y? Maybe it was because she felt guilty as she saw that they would soon be passing Grandma Mason's farm. She remembered the scene at her home several nights ago.

"Oh, Johnny, I'm sorry, but I won't be able to go with you this New Year's Eve."

Johnny, her acknowledged escort ever since they had been Juniors in high school, looked incredulous. "But, Sue, we always go out to Grandma's watch party. Hasn't it been fun for years?"

"Yes, it has," Sue had agreed. "But Roger Tremaine—you know, the boy whose folks come to that big lakehouse cottage every summer—wrote to ask me to spend New Year's Eve with him. His family is coming up for a country holiday."

"We're running into a snow-storm," Roger exclaimed as they suddenly became engulfed in a swirling white cloud. We'd better put the top up."

"We're running into a snow-storm," Roger exclaimed.

He pressed the proper button, but nothing happened. Then he swerved the car over to the edge of the road, got out and tugged at the folded-back canvas. "Frozen shut!" he growled disgustedly.

Roger climbed back into the car and rascled the motor. The wheels spun helplessly. "Now what?" he growled.

"You got out of the track when you pulled over," Sue said. "Look out, or we'll sink in so deep we'll never get out."

But Roger stubbornly continued to press his foot on the accelerator, while the wheels settled farther and farther down into the snow.

"I give up," he said finally.

AFTER A FEW moments of uncomfortable silence Roger grumbled, "That's the trouble with this God-forsaken part of the country. If we were anywhere around Chicago a hundred cars would have come along by this time."

"Yes, but most of them wouldn't stop; and we'd be spattered with dirty slush instead of covered with clean, white snow," Sue snapped.

"Sue," Roger interrupted excitedly. "A car is coming. See those lights glimmering way down the road?"

"It's Johnny!" Sue screamed, her voice shrill with relief.

"For the love pete," Johnny boomed, climbing out into the road. "Are you two trying to corn mill outside or something?"

Sue laughed hysterically and practically hugged his outstretched arm. "Roger's car is stuck, the top is stuck—"

"And now I'm stuck with two extra passengers." Johnny finished "Well, climb aboard, everybody can take you only as far as Grandma's, though. I wouldn't venture any farther than that tonight, even in old faithful here." He patted a battered fender lovingly.

"That's plenty far enough for me," Sue exclaimed. She was already climbing into the front seat.

"You'll find another robe in the back seat," she said firmly, as Roger started to turn the front door handle.

Johnny looked at Sue, and a slow happy smile spread over his face. "Sure, Roger, hop in," he said heartily.

"On second thought, I guess I'll stay until you send a truck back; mightn't be able to find the car again in the drifts." Roger smiled weakly. "Could I borrow one of those robes, though?"

"Sure thing," Johnny climbed into his car and handed out a heavy one. "It'll only be a few minutes."

As the motor began to roar, Sue slid over and put her arm through Johnny's. "I hope you've made mistakes sometimes, too," she said falteringly.

"Listen, darling," Johnny answered warmly, giving her hand a squeeze. "Didn't you ever hear that all's well that ends well?"

THE THIRD NEW YEAR

By Vera Tarpley

"YOU'VE GOT to let me do it my way," Mary spoke quietly but firmly. It was she, not Reed, who was the strong one, the unemotional one, now that the dreaded time had come.

Reed looked at his wife's drawn tired face, grown old overnight, and felt the old helpless rage take possession of him. "Don't you want me there? Don't you want—" he broke off as he saw her steady herself in the doorway. "Good lord, you can't drive! Let me drive you there, and then I'll go away if you still want me to."

Mary looked terrified for a moment, but she managed a smile. "It's a little late to start living my life for me, darling." She said it gently, but Reed felt an underlying accusation, too. If he hadn't failed her when the baby had been born two years ago, she would want him there now, to the very end.

Mary's voice sounded far off and unsure. "Millie said she'd come over—when the time came—she's to fix you a cup of coffee, and you're to talk with her—and not think about me, understand? Nothing, say you'll be all right!" She had rushed over to him and was covering him with kisses, but no tears. "Happy New Year!" she shouted back to him as she went out.

It was the harsh jangle of the telephone that would ring in the New Year for Reed.

Reed stared after her, but did not answer. As he heard the car drive off, he couldn't believe it was happening. If only he could have borrowed some of her bravado.

Two years ago she had wished him Happy New Year and he hadn't answered her then either. She was lying there in her hospital bed, not yet knowing the baby had died, something in Reed himself had died with it. But the next New Year she knew it—she knew that they were living in two separate worlds, and that she had lost her husband as well. And then came the doctor's words and it was too late. Reed was jolted out of his selfish grief, only to suffer a new plague—remorse. And it was too late.

When the bells rang out at midnight, Reed jumped up from his chair. He couldn't let it end the way she wanted it. He would go to her—she would have chances before midnight at the last, and would be glad to see him. He was putting on his coat when the doorbell rang and Millie, their next door neighbor, came in with a pot of coffee.

"Happy New Year," she said flatly, as if the words had already grown stale. Reed looked at her without smiling and said nothing.

"She wanted it this way," he told me so," Millie went on dryly, pouring out the steaming coffee. "I left my party to come over here. Drink some coffee while it's hot."

Reed set down his cup.

"MY JUST LISTEN to them bells," Millie went on, "ring out the old and ring in the new. I always say—"

(But it was the telephone that would ring in the New Year for Reed—a harsh jangle that had nothing in it of church bells and kisses and laughter.) Mary had wondered if she would celebrate the New Year with him, and they had talked of a new life, new happiness, but neither of them believed in it.

And then the telephone rang. Reed broke out in a cold sweat. Millie was the last person he wanted with him at this moment.

"Hello, Reed my boy," came Dr. Foster's calm voice. "It's all over."

The receiver kept slipping in Reed's sweaty hand. "Is she—is she—" his throat tightened up painfully.

"She's doing fine, Reed."

"And—and—" Reed's head was swimming.

"It's a boy—a fine healthy boy." The doctor checked his throat and lowered his voice. "I'm not sorry I was mistaken when I said she'd never live through another—I guess she knew better than I. It's the happiest mistake of my career."

"Mine too," said Reed.

"She wants to see you now, Reed—she says you forgot to wish her a Happy New Year."

The Next Step in Government Financing

(By Thomas L. Parkinson, President The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U. S.)

It is generally agreed that whatever other causes there may be for our current inflationary trend, our increasing money supply has a lot to do with it. The latest Federal Reserve Bulletin shows that the people of this country held money and bank deposits at the end of September in excess of $174 billions. This is the highest figure in our history.

If we continue to increase our supply of money, we must expect it to cause increased prices; and that is exactly what is doing. Now, the greater part of our money supply is in the form of bank deposits on which somebody has the right to draw. It is these bank deposits which are constantly increasing and producing new peaks in our money supply.

Surely everyone knows now that bank deposits go up every time a commercial bank buys Government bonds: If our monetary officials really want to stop the increase in volume of money, they should devise some means of decreasing the Government bonds held by our commercial banks. They are not doing anything of the kind; in fact, they are encouraging our commercial banks to increase their holdings of Government bonds.

The commercial banks prefer to hold short-term paper, and it is significant that every maturity of Government bonds since the war has been refinanced with new issues of short-term obligations. As a result, there are at the present moment $50 billions of Government obligations which will mature within the year 1951. In addition to refinancing this huge sum of maturing paper, the Treasury may be called upon to issue additional obligations to finance any deficit it may incur during the year. If the Treasury follows its practice in the past few years, it will issue a new stream of short-term paper to provide both for these maturities and such a deficit. It is well known that the commercial banks will be the principal purchasers of such short-term paper, and up will go the bank deposits and the money supply.

In times as explosive and dangerous as these, it would seem imperative that the Government meet its borrowing needs by offering to the investing public bonds which would have an investment appeal. When Government bonds are bought by non-banking investors there is no increase in bank deposits, because such buyers have to use pre-existing money, their own or other people's savings. They do not pay for their purchases with newly-created bank deposits as do the commercial banks.

Of all the non-commercial bank investors, the life insurance companies are in many ways the most important. They are not interested in short-term Government bonds or notes, and their interest needs—indeed, their very solvency—call for a minimum return of 3%. Therefore, what the Treasury should do and do promptly is bring out a long-term, say 35 year, bonds at a 3% rate. Such a bond would be sought by the life insurance companies, savings banks, pension funds and other trust funds. The proceeds of such an issue could be used either to finance current deficits or refinance some of those 1951 maturities.

A 3% rate on a 35-year bond would not only meet the needs of life insurance and other investors, but it would be a fair yield in the present securities market.

So long as there is the current demand for non-government borrowers for essential expansion, the Treasury cannot expect investors to be enthusiastic about a long-term Government bond at a lower rate. The only alternative is for the Treasury to continue to issue its short-term paper to the commercial banks which make their investments with entries of new deposits. Moreover, the additional cost to the Treasury of a long-term 3% bond would not be any more and, indeed might be less, than the cost of recent increases in the interest rate on short-term Government paper at the insistence of the commercial banks. That increase, in the short-term rate increases the earning of the banks and, indeed, encourages them to buy more and more Government paper; but it doesn't make any dent on the inflated money supply.

It must be admitted that there is a limit to the amount of long-term bonds which the Treasury could sell in the immediate future, but the sale of a limited amount would put brakes on the persistent trend toward larger supplies of money and would gradually reduce the number of dollars to an amount more nearly consistent with current business needs. The life insurance companies alone will have something like $10 billions of new money and the proceeds of their maturities for reinvestment during 1951, and at least one-third of this could and would be put into a long-term bond if the Government paid the 3% rate. Such an investment would be held indefinitely, and it would not be necessary for any Federal agency to support the market prices. It ought to be marketable, but it ought not to be artificially supported, and it ought not to be eligible for the commercial banks. Moreover, such a bond would not seriously interfere with the market prices of outstanding Federal bonds, any more than recent issues of the A. T. & T. at higher returns have interfered with continued holdings of previous issues at a lower coupon rate.

Nothing that the Treasury or the monetary authorities could do would have a more stabilizing effect on our economy and a long-term bond issue purchased by the life insurance and savings funds of the country. We are fast approaching the point where it will be a must for the Treasury and for the Federal Reserve Board; for they cannot, as Mr. McCabe said recently at Chicago, continue to increase our money supply without further, perhaps disastrous, inflation.

The kind of Treasury financing which is here proposed should have been undertaken during the past few years; it is now absolutely essential in the financing which is just ahead of us to meet our defense or war needs.

Teaching Profession Gaining In Ohio

The old theory that teaching is a block to marriage for women is no longer true, according to Dr. Clyde Hisson, state director of education, who said that although 714 teachers resigned to be married in 1950 there are several thousand married women teaching in the schools of Ohio.

Dr. Hisson also pointed out that the teaching profession in Ohio, as in other states, is not a stable one. Each year a sizable number leave the profession for various reasons. This year for example, 429 quit teaching to go into industry, 71 went into some branch of the armed forces, 415 retired and 346 left to teach in some other state. For other or unknown reasons the state lost 1,705 teachers.

The State Director of Education said that there are 1108 more men teaching in Ohio this year than last. Also significant is the fact that there are 447 more men employed in our elementary schools than last year.

Approximately one-half of the new teachers who studied in Ohio colleges were prepared in the six state-supported institutions. Graduates were granted to 1718 applicants who were prepared for teaching in other states. Every state in the union except Vermont was represented. Naturally those states adjoining Ohio furnished the greater number of applicants.

MAY EXPAND SERVICE

Cleveland—(INS)—East Ohio Gas Company is preparing to start work in August on a 65-mile pipeline which will bring an additional 385 million cubic feet of gas per day to East Ohio customers. Plans for the project which is to cost $6,300,000, were disclosed recently by J. French Robinson, East Ohio president.

Better Check Again

Columbus, O. — Ohio motorists are again warned to check on their driver's license. R. E. Foley, Registrar, Bureau of Motor Vehicles, pointed out that Ohio drivers who have had a birthday since September 30, 1949 and have not secured a 1951 Ohio Driver's License on or within 30 days before their birthday may not legally operate a motor vehicle on the highway. The new license will be good for three years.

Bureau records indicate that many drivers whose birthday has already occurred in October and November have failed to obtain a renewal and are driving illegally with an invalid license. Foley said:

A survey from October 1 to November 15 showed that many are making application for renewal of their driver's license after their birthday which indicates that these drivers have been driving illegally. Your present 1950 license tells you when to renew, just look in the upper left hand corner and avoid inconvenience at a later date.
