Mrs. Cora B. McIntire

The death of Mrs. Cora B. McIntire saddened us all. She was apparently in good health and although she had experienced some painful hours with a broken hip received after a fall in her home, no one thought her life would be taken away as result of it. The family can, at least, be thankful that she did not suffer much. To Mr. Robert McIntire, our business colleague on the Public Square, we extend our sympathies and regrets.

But her departure from this world for the next is an occasion to take note of what was apparently her wish and is being carried out. It is to be a memorial to her that she could not enjoy at her bier, funds that were to have been spent for this purpose are being collected for establishment of an appropriate memorial in the public library.

This is a fitting tribute to a lady who believed in a library and what it means to a community. Maybe she saw, as few of us have yet seen, how foolish it is to make such a fuss over folks who have left us when we have a splendid opportunity while they are alive to show us how to appreciate them, and further how much wiser it is to put our efforts and our funds into a living memorial to the dead than in something the dead cannot appreciate, nor can the living.

We hope the memorial to Mrs. McIntire will not be a dead establishment, but a living one, as we hope her friends and admirers who know in their hearts that she was right. We feel sure the citizens of Plymouth will be duly appreciative of it.

Facts the Voter Must Consider

The time is soon coming when citizens and taxpayers in Plymouth will be called upon to express their important opinion at the polls. There are some facts about that opinion that this newspaper feels are essential to everyone's understanding.

The first is that Plymouth needs a sewage disposal plant and needs also a suitable network of sewer mains under its streets to accommodate the wastes and spoils of our life in this community. To continue to pollute the water of the Black Fork creek is unspeakable.

The corollary to this fact is that it will cost us money. There are none to deny this self-evident fact. The principal question is, how much money will it cost us, and why?

It is to the credit of the village council and the mayor that attention is being steadily given to this issue. We urge all citizens and taxpayers to give consideration to the needs of the hour. Those who speak up are doing a public service, for the councilmen have no way of reading minds. Unless this citizen speaks, his representatives do not know what he wishes. As we see it, Plymouth needs only a bit more potable water and a good sewage system to establish itself for a reasonable expansion in population in the next ten years. With the St. Lawrence waterway a reality, there is nothing to keep Plymouth - in the midst of a good transportation network by road and by rail - non-competitive in nature with what it now has, perhaps engaging in semidurable goods or what is known as light commodities and exports. When and if industry comes. Industry will come when and if a sewage disposal system and adequate water supply are assured. Prosperity to this community will come as population increases, more households are established, and more people have a reason to live, to buy and sell, and to invest in it. As this happens we can afford to expand our schools, to improve them, to do more for the coming generation, and to live more comfortably for ourselves.

One does not need a crystal ball and the habits of a seer to predict a community at least half again as large as Plymouth now is, if we get more potable water and a sewage disposal system. The former is assured, the third is being worked out, and we are at least another 100,000 gallons of water a day.

We must not be niggardly with our expenditures for a sewage disposal system. Neither must we pay more than what is necessary to have it. We feel certain that the councilmen followed by the village council is a sound one, that it will pay for itself, and that Plymouth will prosper with thanks to those seven gentlemen who are now showing foresight and wisdom and good sense.

It is always hard to spend money, particularly when the money belongs to other folks. But it must be done. We are sure it will be done well.

The Boy, Education, and Athletics

Although the first day of summers only three days past, and we have already had a goodly share of football already, there are those who are talking about football already.

The city of Mansfield has succeeded in obtaining the 1955 All-star high school football game, and will stage it Aug. 12, 1955, in the Mansfield stadium.

Now this is all well and good if a town does not go overboard in overdoing it. We are for athletics; it is all right as a more or less hobby, and we are willing to buy him a steak dinner anywhere he says.

But athletics can be carried too far, especially if it is at the expense of other things, notably physics and chemistry and English composition and grammar and arithmetic. We somehow think these things are more important, infinitely so, than getting the hang of a 6-2-3 defense or how to buck off tackle on a K-79 play. We know what is happening, and we are in Mansfield but throughout the state.

Just the other day, a teacher and coach of football at one high school gave up a good job and a fine future to go to another town because, as he put it, "they pick college football from that league." We would not want to have our children taught by such a man. He has his own personal interest at heart more than the all-important job of teaching the children to cope with the problems of tomorrow.

We repeat, it is much more important to be able to read and write our mother tongue effectively and satisfactorily than it is to throw a pass or make a tackle. The job of our schools and of our teachers is to produce the citizen of tomorrow. He knows little enough of what goes on. He never can know to much. Perhaps if we try to give him a little more physics and chemistry and French and English composition and a little less razzle-dazzle football, the world of tomorrow will be a better place to live in, and then all our young fellows will need to concern themselves with will be the fall of footballs on turf on our grids, none but the third of bombs on the rain-soaked grass of Indo-China.

But until that time comes, we are opposed to paying football coaches $6,100 a year while French and algebra teachers get half that.

What's Going On In Government: On the Scene:

from Mansfield

from Mansfield

by Rich Land

Next to the insufferable heat, the principal item of conversation in this Richland county seat city this week is the allegation that bribery and shakedown characterize enforcement of state liquor regulations in Mansfield.

Although there were still some obscurities surrounding the facts as the press had it, we have evidence that the week ended, it appeared that the following conclusions are valid:

1. Although the prosecutor of Hamilton county says to the press that he has evidence of corruption in Mansfield, so far no positive evidence has been produced.

2. Until such evidence is available, Richland county authorities will regard the statements as so much air-hot air, that the county has too much of already, with the mercury around 90 degrees.

3. Doubtless there are some irregularities every system has them, no matter how hard the enforcers try to eliminate them but it is difficult to establish any system of catching them. In any case, it seems unlikely that the irregularities border upon felony.

All started June 16 when C. Watson Hover, prosecutor of Hamilton county (near Cincinnati) told the newspapers that he had received from Norwalk

by Henry Filmer, 2nd

Drive through the streets of quiet little Greenwich and you don't get the impression that less than seven months ago it was a seething center of internecine fighting pitting brother against brother. The issue was liquor, and the wets won.

The wets won decisively, so far as the public expression of opinion goes, and they expect to win again in a couple of weeks when the state alcoholic beverage commission holds another hearing on the question of whether hard liquor may be sold over the counter in Greenwich.

The repercussions in this county seat town were not at first apparent, but it appears now that at least one county official stuck his neck out and almost had it lopped off. He is not a candidate for election this year, and it may be that the feeling will wear off in time, but he isn't going to get votes for Greenwich township or the village right now, he'd get far fewer than he's accustomed to getting.

From hindsight it appears also that the wets won in Greenwich because of a carefully conducted campaign and an above-the-beat-the-drum fight in response to a last-ditch, anything-goes battle waged by the dries. Likewise, it was a fight of middle-aged men against the community, the former endeavoring to force their mores, judgements and standards upon a community that showed by its ballot fight in response to a last-ditch, anything-goes battle waged by the dries.

It all started because one outfit for 3.2 beer applied for license to sell beer and wines, to put it into fair competition with a neighbor across the street. The hearing here was attended by a Greenwich minister, and on the grounds that the new establishment was within 300 feet of a public building such as a school church or library, the application was turned down. An appeal was taken to Columbus, and it was successful. But it was decided to settle the issue - at least locally - by placing it on the November ballot.

The questions on the ballot were phrased to excite the best like that by the clever defense attorney, "Are you ever going to stop beating your wife?" The first question dealt with the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors. A "no" answer to the approval of the sale of intoxicating liquors would operate to outlaw all beer, wine and liquors in Greenwich, despite the fact the electorate might have voted "yes" on the subsequent questions.

The dries played down these facts, and the wets took to the press to call it to the attention of the town. Behind this, in part, was a sensible and level-headed fellow who came to Greenwich nearly four years ago as editor and publisher of the village newspaper, the Enterprise-Review. His name is Thomas A. Rioridan.

For reasons of fair play, Rioridan accepted advertising from the dries, who apparently had plenty of money and seemed to be fired up primarily by a woman of the church, and assisted the wets in getting the vote across. He himself had no strong feelings one way or the other, but for a newspaperman might not be regarded as a teetotalist.

Advertising paid for by the wets emphasized the right of Americans to make their own choice in full freedom. Some, one ad read, like football games, while others prefer the motion pictures. But each has a right to his own choice.

Apparently it paid off. Despite the last-minute action of the Heron County sheriff, who shut down the tavern during the polls because they were serving intoxicating beverages, the voting was carried out in a high school, and the spirit of intense eagerness to win, and when the votes were counted, the wets had won, 2 to 1.

So the sheriff's action was later nullified by the decision of the County Prosecutor, who ruled that 3.2 beer could be sold. There is a man who regarded this decision as a proper one, and the action of the sheriff as contentious and abusive of his authority. Some say they will remember it when the sheriff pleads guilty to it.

from Washington

by Jack K. Russell

Ohio Senator John W. Bricker, himself not a candidate for election in November, will nevertheless take the stump throughout the state on behalf of Republican congressional candidates.

Bricker told a closed-door Republican strategy session here that he will lend a hand during the campaign, "wherever, and whenever he's needed and wanted."

Richard J. McGreggor, veteran congressman from the state, says Bricker will undoubtedly appear in the county several times during the fall campaign.

McGreggor said Bricker, still very popular in the 17th congressional district, would undoubtedly aid in the campaign.

McGreggor plans an entirely new technique of campaigning in Richland county - with the emphasis on personal, non-political contact.

"I'm beginning to doubt the need of big county meetings," McGreggor said, "not because there's anything wrong with them but because they are so common. I'm beginning to doubt their effectiveness."

"The only people who came to them are Republicans and many of them would probably rather be at home with radio or television than at a county meeting," he said.

"I don't kid myself that I could get elected if a lot of Democrats didn't vote for me. And Democrats don't want to be seen attending Republican political rallies," McGreggor said.

"I look for an entirely different campaign technique this time. We are all going to have to wear out a lot of shoe leathes and meet a lot of people," McGreggor declared.

"I plan to talk with as many people as possible during the daytime and leave them alone at night, when they'd rather be doing other things," McGreggor concluded.

Shelby city fathers have enlisted the aid of McGreggor in their negotiations with the Air Force concerning a new sewage disposal plant.

The Depot, which has had several contracts with Shelby to supply its water and take care of sewage disposal, has forwarded the proposed plan to the Air Force for approval, and it is expected to reach Washington some time this week.

McGreggor said it is doubtful, however, if the Air Force will accept the contract terms. He said he wrote to officers at Wright-Patterson asking them to carefully consider the proposed contract drawn up by the city fathers before rejecting it.

Their answer, he said, was not encouraging. McGreggor explained, "whether the Air Force can accept a new contract many times higher than the previous one and more costly according to the Air Force, than providing their own water and sewage disposal facilities."

The decision rate with Wright-Patterson, which has jurisdiction over the Shelby Depot, and is expected shortly. It then would have to win approval here, it is understood.

McGreggor said he is still carrying on negotiations but that there is little room for optimism.

Demand deposit accounts in Mansfield banks fell off 11.2 percent since last May, while the national total in 345 banking centers jumped nearly 58,000,000.

National bank debits to demand deposit accounts, except interbank and government accounts, in May were reported at $39,466,000 compared with $67,049,000 in May of 1953.

THE MONSOONS were never like this. That's what

Phin thought last Wednesday night when the water poured in like Old Lady on the rampage. In no time we were ankle deep.

The press had broken down anyway. Last week shined up as the best ever. For the first since Phin came to Plymouth the paper was ready to hit the post office at 4 p.m. Wednesday. Then the press started to set up. A press run that should have taken only two hours actually took seven, and then we didn't finish it. Matter of new cloth applied to the press for picking that wicked Old Lady. Also, the strain on the PR-H repair kindly turned to and followed Tommy's instructions to fix the damned thing. A welding job was necessary also. Finally, after tinkering here and there, we were back in business Thursday at noon.

Funny thing, the telephone rang only twice Thursday. Usually, if we don't get on the newstands Wednesday at five, the phone rings steadily. Perhaps folks thought the water was what did it. Sure, we had some water, but it wouldn't have stopped us if we didn't have a breakdown.

Thanks to Jack and Doug McQuate (Doug took his reward for the loss of an ice cream cart -?) and if the boys will come in before tomorrow at noon, there's a reward for 'em both.

Phin has been impressed since his first visit to Plymouth what a friendly town it is. That was back in April. The friends he met were one of two reasons why he decided to settle here. But Wednesday night was exceptional.

There was Roger Miller, his own place swamped, offering his help for the night. And neighbor J. H. Cashman for the same. Folks up and down the Square coming around to see if there was anything they could do. Not a moment, just friendly offers of help. Don Willett stopped by to assist a neighbor when he had a day or two left. The friends he met were one of two reasons why he decided to settle here. But Wednesday night was exceptional.

Phin finally wound up at Weldon Cornell's establishment with pockets empty. His credit was good there, though, and he got fed.

Thanks, folks. We'll do as much for you some time.

This is the week for our Yanks. If we didn't wall-top the Indians in this series, it'll look back for 'em. Old Case has the boys geared up, though, and now that Whitey Fore is back on the beam, watch 'em go. Glad to know we've got reinforcements across the Square in Don Akers, a real dyed-in-the-wool Yankee fan.

For a Good Job Well Done

It is seldom that those who labor for the municipal services of our community can be cited for a good job well done. We are too prone to think that we deserve the unselfish and loyal and overtime service we get from our municipal staff, to whom we pay so little.

The reinstatement of Wednesday night affords us a good opportunity to give praise where praise is due, and The Advertiser takes pleasure in handing its extended thanks to the men who are doing a good job. Lincoln Sprowles, superintendent of light and power, his assistant, the redheaded Mr. Reeder, Bill Moore, the street superintendent, and Fire Chief McDougal for their unselfish efforts in behalf of those business and dwelling places which were so hard hit by the floods.

Mr. Sprowles got out of bed and gave his time and his knowledge without charge. So did Mr. Reeder. Neither would accept money for their services.

The least we can do is say, "Thank you gentlemen we appreciate it."

What's happening to the younger generation? Back when Phin was a lad, he picked up his pocket money mowing lawns. Had half a dozen of them besides a big one of his own, which Dad insisted be done twice a week. Last week Phin approached no less than five young men in good Ohio-Sandwich street and asked ($1 an hour) to get his lawn mowed. He said, "I hope so Phin himself could keep it up weekly on Thursday afternoons. Nary a bite! What's the matter, fellows? No need for do-re-mi?"

Memo to the mothers of the small fry who paid the Phin was a last, he picked up his pocket money mowing lawns. Is our face red! Having learned the French language some years ago, and having found it to be a pleasant means of expression, and not wanting to lose it, Phin listened - he thought - carefully to the Madam's patter about a French-speaking lady living down the street. So on the way home with our Cookie the other party, we strode manfully into the back yard of the house she thought was the right one, and burst forth in our best Parisian.

The lady stared and then she opened her mouth, but nothing came out. Ah, thought we, didn't know the lady could speak French. We plunged on. Finally she said in good Ohio-Sandwich street and asked ($1 an hour) to get his lawn mowed. He said, "I hope so Phin himself could keep it up weekly on Thursday afternoons. Nary a bite! What's the matter, fellows? No need for do-re-mi?"

James Root chased the Cub scouts on a trip to Mansfield. A coon chase for the Fourth of July was being sponsored by D. F. Fidler and C. S. Moore. Mrs. Frank Pitzer had found a hiding place for nesting in her stove pipe. Poor thing was practically dead of exhaustion.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kucinic had been in Cleveland for a few days, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sams had called on Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Fairchild of near Shelly.

a church organization in an effort to cover up a patent effort to put a liquor dispensing out let in the hands of unsavory persons. This Rutkowski denied. At the same time, in what is obviously an attempt to embarrass Gov. Frank Lausche, who is strong in his support of Rutkowski, there have been GOP charges of additional high links of an unsavory odor in liquor enforcement.

It remains to be seen whether Hovey's charges will hold water, or even see the light of day, much less stand up to light. He promised to send his information under seal to Prosecutor Theodore Lutz. When and if he does, Mr. Lutz will study it carefully. There is nothing in the law that requires him to reveal the information, and he is a shrewd enforcement officer and will probably not do so until he has the culprits snared.

Meanwhile, Lutz stands by his guns; he has seen no evidence of bribery by any official charged with law enforcement, and when he does, he will move against him with the full force of law.

Dr. Searle

doctor didn't sleep for days on end, she recalls somewhat wistfully "My, I was glad when that was over."

In later years, when the doctor was all but retired from medicine, the Searles travelled, and set upon Bradenton, Fla., as a suitable place to spend the winter. They have returned to that city each winter. Doc puffs on the cigar that his own medical consultant allows him but sparingly, and his eyes light up as he remembers some of the experiences of the more than 70 years he has been a physician in America. But it is Mrs. Searle's, a 50th wedding anniversary week, and he is letting her have her fun.

From Norwalk

Greenwich still doesn't have the right to dispense hard liquor over the bar. By the time cold weather comes, it is likely the authority will have been granted. If it is, you can thank clear heads and a sensible approach, and blame the drys for their own defeat because they fought dirty.

The surest way to win an unpopular campaign in Huron county, a veteran courthouse hanger-on said last week, is to keep shut about it and be a gentleman. The people will stay home and few of your followers at the ballot box will get you in. Hit below the belt, however, and everybody turns out.

It apparently was that way in Greenwich.
