

Three Old Timers Observe Birthdays

Three of the village's oldest residents mark up 276 years this week. William (Uncle Billy) Hatch, retired marshall, observes his 99th birthday Saturday. Born on a farm near Shelby, he has lived in the Plymouth area all his life. In early years he was a cigar maker.

Active considering his advanced age, he lives with a niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cramer, at Sandusky and Dix streets.

Frank Leddick, who still files a saw without the aid of eyeglasses, will celebrate his 95th birthday on Sunday. His father-in-law, Lemuel Hale, who lives with Mrs. Scott Hartz in Shelby route 3, was 98 on Mar. 29. His health is poor.

Benton Chronister marked his 82nd birthday Sunday at his home, 32 Mill street. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Chronister and daughters, Marcella, Charles Backman and Harvey Bowker, Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. John Chronister and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chester, Akron; Mrs. R. E. Grise, Mansfield; Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Chronister, Toledo; Willis Chronister, Mansfield; and the Kenneth Eichelberrys, the William Chronister, Harry and Patricia Chronister, all of this place.

Contracts Awarded To Nine Teachers

Eight two-year teaching contracts and one five-year pact, with upward salary adjustments, were authorized by Plymouth Board of Education Tuesday night in a session lasting until 12:30 a.m., but the big news is that the county wants the board to do something about consolidation.

Richard County School Supt. Dale Kinney appeared before the board and after discussing at length the consolidation with Shiloh, asked the board to state by Apr. 21 whether it will take the initiative in getting the consolidation under way.

Although no formal action was taken, the board showed every sign that it would wish to have more information as to the desires of the patrons of the district before committing itself. There was some talk of submitting the proposal to initiation and referendum, although Superintendent Kinney was unable to cite any legal authority to do so.

Contracts were authorized for James Nowakowski, Kenneth Nixon, Lewis Petit, Estella Esterday, Robert Martin, Robert Whitaker, Mrs. Mildred Flagg, Mrs. Roy McGregor, all on two- and three-year terms, and Frank Gerber, five years.

Other teachers are completing longer term contracts. Their salaries were adjusted to conform with the recently adopted salary schedule. Five teachers given merit raises in addition to service increments.

Twenty-nine seniors will receive diplomas May 24 if their work does not falter between now and then. They are Joseph Alexander, Eugene Baker, Bud Berberick, Lenore Briggs, Mary M. Brinson, Peggy Burren, Bett Carter, all on twinkle, Wilma Cornett, Carol Evans, Rose Fenner;

Also John Fetters, Donald Grabach, Martin Hampton, Gerald Lillo, Thomas Marvin, Donald McKinney, Jack E. McQuate, Floyd Noble, Orena and Eleanor Ousley, Edwin Rees, Gordon Riggle, Mary Robert, Theodore Ross, Robert Stroup, Evelyn Trauger, Sandra Vogel and Floyd White.

In other action, $200 was appropriated toward the salary of a summer recreation director and the resignation of George W. Cheesman as janitor of the elementary school was accepted.

A Long (and Loud) Cry!

When Plymouth's Brownies ask for used nylon stockings, without legs (human, that is) in them, the appeal doesn't always fall on deaf ears.

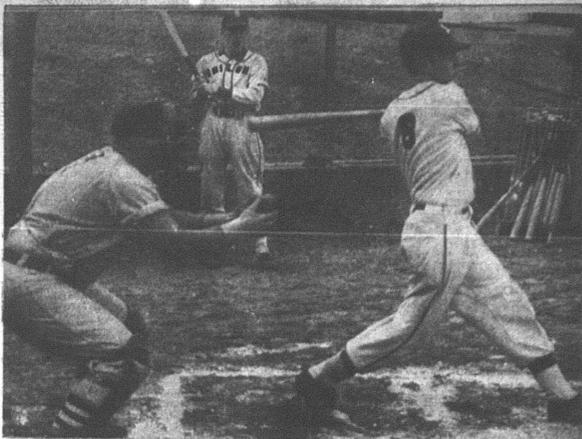

And it carries a long way, too! Witness the package received by the editor this week from Mrs. A. Loeffler, 849 Erie street, Detroit 3, Mich. It contains a substantial quantity of the useless (to all but the Brownies') leg coverings.

Vol. CIII — 103rd Year, No. 15 Plymouth, Ohio, Thursday, April 12, 1956

$9,527 Boost in Cost To Post Office Patron Seen if Bill Passes

To what extent will the proposed bill to increase postal rates, now before Congress, affect people in Plymouth, if approved?

In round figures, local residents and business concerns would have to spend an additional $9,527.30 a year.

The measure, proposed by Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield and presented to Congress by President Eisenhower seeks to cope to some extent with the continuing average deficit of the post office department by upping mail rates more than $406 million a year. About $311 million of this would be increases in first class mail charges.

First class rates would rise to four cents an ounce from the present three cents. Air mail would also go up one cent to seven cents. There would be an increase of 30 percent, divided over two years, in rates for books, magazines, newspapers and other second class mail. Third class rates would go up 29 percent. The over-all average rise would be 17 percent.

In Plymouth, in the past fiscal year, $37,000 was spent for stamps and other postal services, according to the post office department's official figures.

This would increase to $66,527, a boost of $9,527 assuming that the average conditions apply locally.

The postmaster general bases his request for the rate rise on the mounting scale of postal deficits. Although the business he heads is one of the largest in the world, it is in financial trouble.

It loses about $500,000,000 a year. The only profitable segments of its operations are the first class mail, post office box rentals and the postal savings system.

Opposition to boost in mail rates comes from those who argue that the postal service is for the benefit of the public and is therefore a legitimate charge to general revenue.

The proponents hold that it is a purely business operation and should, at such a stand on its own financial feet.

All women of the church are cordially invited to attend the Lutheran Missionary society congress to be held Sunday at St. John's church, Sulphur Springs, from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Spark From Tractor Sets Fire to Peat Firm

Plymouth volunteer firemen responded to a general alarm Thursday at 1 p.m. and raced to the Mel-Lor Peat Co. premises near Celeryville to join Willard and Altica-Venic, firemen in fighting a blaze which gutted the main building.

The factory, which was in its busy season, was completely destroyed. Damages are estimated at between $7,000 and $8,000.

Employees told firemen they were using a Fordson tractor to blow peat. Its exhaust was connected to a flexible hose that extruded near the rafters. When it became overheated, the wooden roof ignited.

By the time firemen arrived, high winds had fanned the blaze and shortage of water prevented saving of the building.

Mrs. Clyde Crooks, widow of the owner, who died about 60 days ago, is undecided as to disposition of the enterprise.

If Plymouth's Board of Public Affairs succeeds in obtaining a new water supply before snow flies again, it will have completed a 44-year struggle to assure potable water despite the opposition of hard-core citizens who don't always agree with the board.

The history of the village's water supply is stippled with court orders, writs of mandamus, injunctions, referendums, petitions and other impediments.

It all started, wrote the Cleveland Plain Dealer on Oct. 2, 1932, back in 1911. The first water works had been built 10 years earlier for fire protection only. And the water was drawn from a small stream nearby.

But so much of the water began to be used for drinking purposes that in 1911 the state department of health ordered the village to look about for a new source of supply.

Council then hired an engineer to locate a source. But a fight started over sites. Everyone, it seemed, wanted to sell his land to the town. But at his own price.

In 1913 the state department extended the time.

In 1915, an engineer was asked to determine whether a stone quarry afforded enough water.

seemed rosy when the council decided on the quarry.

"The matter didn't suit W. H. Fetters and he circulated referendum petitions against the quarry site. It was put on the ballot in November, 1926, Fetters were met by about 300 voters. And things were right back where they started.

"However, some councilmen were still in favor of the quarry. So Samuel Bachrach filed an injunction petition to see how far these members could go in favoring their location after the fact. The court ruled against them.

"Citizens then hired H. L. Beam, Mansfield attorney, to act for them and made a three-way battle out of it.

Mayor Derr refused to answer Bachrach's petition. Bachrach had to appear, and Beam was the only one in court that day. He asked for and was given a permanent injunction against Bachrach.

"That settled things for a while. But in 1930 the air became blue again. An outbreak of typhoid pointed suspiciously to the creek water and for the third time the State Board of Health ordered Plymouth to get different water.

"Council then appropriated money to die wells. But this time the Board of Health ordered a monkey wrench into the works. It refused to act.

"So the mayor and council then hired an engineer to sound for water. It was found a half mile north and two wells were dug. Then, in December, 1930, bonds were issued for the project. "Next, the town brought mandamus to the district suit W. H. Fetters and he circulated referendum petitions against the quarry site. It was put on the ballot in November, 1926, Fetters were met by about 300 voters. And things were right back where they started.

"However, some councilmen were still in favor of the quarry. So Samuel Bachrach filed an injunction petition to see how far these members could go in favoring their location after the fact. The court ruled against them.

Council Sits Tight On Meters Issue

With 217 valid signatures affixed to a petition calling for the controversial parking meter ordinance to be submitted to voters, the village council subjected its sponsors to a searching inquiry Thursday night and left the ordinance unchanged.

Robert L. McIntire and Donald Willett were present as the council met in a special session to consider what action it would take on the petitions. Councilman John T. Dick asked them to state formally their objections to parking meters.

McIntire responded in a low, calm voice that his group feels retail business in Plymouth will be unfavorably affected by installation of parking meters. These businesses, he said, have enjoyed favorable comparative positions because of good parking conditions and rural shoppers will resist any change.

Farmers don't like parking meters, in principle, he said, and by implication claimed farmers are the chief source of sales to retail businesses.

None of the councilmen who spoke up seemed to agree with this argument. Clarence Ervin said farmers cause as much damage to roads as any trucker, and Minnie Bachrach asked, "Why should farmers tell us what to do? — we don't tell them what to do?"

Mayor Alfred Parkinson said for his part he was prepared to fight for the ordinance. He said that opposition to his plans and the council's intentions so early in the term should be fought briskly.

The clerk was instructed to hold petitions until today and certify them at any time before Aug. 6 to the boards of elections in two counties.

Sponsors of the petitions appeared pleased with this development. They said they have been advised that a successful referendum will constitute a permanent injunction against this or any future council to prohibit consideration of parking meters.

The Advertiser was informed Monday by Secretary of State Ted W. Brown this is not correct.

It's Baseball Season Again

Once again the umpires cry "Play ball!" and we start upon another baseball season.

For better or worse, and we suspect the latter, folks in this area have a local team to support — the Cleveland Indians, now under new ownership. The management hasn't changed, and we risk our neck among Indian fans when we say we think that management has been quite satisfactory.

Nevertheless, like all second-guessers, we suggest that fans who have faithfully supported the Indians have some rights in the matter, among which are:

1. To see Bob Feller given an opportunity to cap his illustrious career with more victories.
2. To see some of the youngsters given a chance to prove themselves, even at the expense of one or two places in the standings. If the team is giving young players experience under fire.
3. To have equal access with fair-weather fans to good seats when the first-division (read Yankee) teams are in town. It is still true that desirable to finish first, let it rebuild by able seats for Yankee games, especially at night, are given to brokers or other opportunists when New York is the opposition, but who stand on the street corner and gripe when the Orioles and the Senators are in town.

When he came back to the bedroom, he saw his nice, clean white shirt on the dresser, the pills he had asked for sitting atop the shirt. He popped them one by one into his mouth, swigged some water from a glass, gulped the pills down, and thought he might feel better.

By Phineas Whittleseed

A neighbor of ours, who insists on remaining nameless, wears eyeglasses and white shirts. The two combined to cause him an embarrassing moment the other a.m. Seems he awakened with a headache, having eaten too much the night before. Wiley laid out a couple of pills while he was shaving in the bathroom. Natch, the eyeglasses were left on the dresser; a man doesn't shave with his glasses on.

At this point, enter Wiley: "Dear, here are your pills. And don't put on that shirt until I sew on these buttons. Now where—" End of drama, beginning of cussing.

A feller gets a little tired sometimes of the fudger surrounding a wedding. Books have been written about it, and they have been best sellers not entirely because their authors have a facile way with a pen, but also because the subject matter is pertinent and requires comment.

So it is with this thing coming up next week in Monaco. It has all the earmarks of a publicity stunt cum public breeding match. The bridegroom-elect comes from a family that hasn't had a marriage stick in five generations. In the bargain he is a sovereign without any real power in a country that hasn't any real size but wishes to have an heir to its sovereignty not because there is any desire to perpetuate sensible and practical rule by decent and upstanding rulers. It wants an heir only because it desperately wants to avoid paying taxes to the French republic, which protects it and affords it being.

The whole business has a certain odor about it. Here is an ordinary American girl with more than a modicum of talents, a success in her own right, being subjected to the same sort of public breeding exhibition that our ancestors rebelled against in the days of ancient Rome.

It may be that column after column of this stuff in the public prints sells papers, and that's the object of publishers of daily newspapers. But we feel a little ashamed of our profession that so many of our colleagues have been taken in by what is obviously and patently not the kind of thing that rings of honesty, sincerity and decency.

Ed. District has a story about a man shaving with the help of his little boy that's a real dilly.

Baseball is a business. It has to show a profit for the men who paid such a fabulous price to buy the team. But it is also a sport, a public trust. It has an obligation to its fans, those who pay to see the games and those who watch the newspapers and television and buy the products whose manufacturers pay so dearly for the rights to broadcast and telecast.

We hope the Indians finish as high as second place. We hope they attract big crowds. If they don't, Hank can't say we didn't warn him. If they do so much the better.

Looks like we're sitting pretty. Pass the peanuts. Who's got a score card? C'mon, you bum, quit stallin' and pitch.

Life has been hell around our house this week.

We've had a prima donna to contend with. First contest she ever entered, and one which called for the display of talents which we've belittled ever since she picked us up in a railroad station 10 years ago. So she won the danged thing, after being nice as pie, for several days so we'd let her off on press day, when she has other duties, to compete.

Now, as this is written, she's preparing for the district thing at Mansfield. Requirements are such that all we've had to eat for a week is ground beef and frozen green beans, which the sponsors of the contest insist must be prepared by each contestant. We like ground beef and frozen green beans, but not three times a day seven days a week.

Also, she has to exhibit a freshly ironed white shirt. Last time we looked, we had only two shirts that really qualify as white (all the others have ink smeared on them somewhere) and they've not been unplanned from the original wrapper in which they came at Christmas time.

But, as Henry McLemore, who's a more experienced and capable columnist than this one, and whose efforts are stimulated by one Kentucky bourbon in quantity, says, "You gotta give 'em a little bit now 'n' again."

This may never get anywhere, and frankly, this business will flourish a danged sight more if she flunks out at Mansfield. We need her around here.

The kids were all excited when she came home last Wednesday night, and when she shyly admitted that she won, they blew the house down. Our neighbors have every right to be indignant that two shouting kids rapped on their back doors about supper time Wednesday and disturbed the preparation of supper with news that was hardly worth the effort to open the door. Our only excuse is that around our house we're proud of her, every one of us, and even though it makes work for us all, we hope she goes on to the finals.

Here she is with her prize at Shelby.
