

Did Plymouth man save Ohio for the North?

Mrs. Vallandigham's flight to fugitive husband arrested by innkeeper here

It is a cool night in September, 1863.

An embattled nation, torn in a fratricidal dispute that has strewn the countryside from Gettysburg to Georgia with carnage and death, hardly knows which way to turn. The president, beset on all sides by impatience with the progress of the war, had been forced to step into the Ohio situation, a task which displeased him.

AND HIS DECISION HAD brought the war home to Plymouth as it never was before nor since, though it was years before that fact was recognized.

On this September night, before the maple-shaded carriage yard of the Daniels House, when the trees towering above what are now Plymouth and Sandusky streets were dripping with rain after a two-day down-pour, there appeared a carriage.

Its locomotion frothed at the bit, spent from a 20-mile run from Bucyrus in 75 minutes. Consider what the road was like — unpaved, sodden from two days of rain. The horse did more than well to cover 20 miles in 75 minutes.

The driver stepped down, and when he had opened the curtain, a demure, shawled

She went inside and sought lodging for the night.

THAT SHE WAS REFUSED perhaps did as much to save Ohio for the Union as any single event of the war.

The story begins in the winter of 1862-63. General Ambrose E. Burnside, a fine gentleman but a miserable failure as a general, was appointed to the command of the Department of Ohio, with headquarters in Cincinnati.

At Dayton, where he published, a small newspaper, there lived the son of a Presbyterian preacher, Clement L. Vallandigham.

He was a tall, spare man, of serious mien, fiery convictions and emphatic gesture.

His profession was that of lawyer. He had acquired the newspaper to circulate his political views.

As a Member of Congress, while that body was in session, he could not be prosecuted for what he said or did.

But back home on his native Ohio heaths, he enjoyed no such protection.

And when Clement L. Vallandigham began to oppose Mr. Lincoln's course in the war, a substantial following of Ohioans latched on to his views.

Seditious talk grew fast. So much so that General Burnside was persuaded — by whom it is uncertain — to publish a general order that forbade such talk under penalty of imprisonment.

That a military officer would deign to issue an order impugning upon the rights of civilians only infuriated Vallandigham and his supporters.

On May 3, 1863, Clement L. Vallandigham appeared in Mt. Vernon to address a crowd estimated at "upwards of nine or 10 thousand. . . . It stretched far beyond the square."

IT WAS A FRIDAY. IT was spring. That such a gathering could leave its seeding and glowing to hear the Copperhead was an earnest to the power of Vallandigham's doctrine: the war is silly, let us make our peace with the seceded states, reinstate their senators and representatives to the Congress, go on as before.

THE ENERGETIC VALLANDIGHAM inveighed for 80 minutes against Mr. Lincoln and the Republicans.

He did not note two officers of the Union Army — whether in mufti is unclear, it may have been he could not have noticed them — who stood at the foot of the platform, feverishly copying upon note paper what Vallandigham was saying.

They telegraphed their report to Burnside's headquarters. Two nights later, on Sunday, in Dayton, a party of Union soldiers, commanded by an officer, called at Vallandigham's house to arrest him.

When he refused to leave the house, they broke the door, stormed in and took him away by force.

The controversial general order of Ambrose Burnside, if it be called the fat, was now in the fire.

Vallandigham was tried for sedition by a military court martial appointed by Burn-

Here's winning art work by Noah Wallace, Shiloh pupil.

Sandra Barnes wins on Lincoln essay

Sandra Barnes, Plymouth High school senior, is the winner of the essay contest, "What Would Lincoln Do in Plymouth Today?"

The daughter of the Leo BARNES, 61 Trux street, she will receive a new dictionary. Noah Wallace and Kurt W. Swogger, Shiloh elementary school pupils, won first places in the drawing contests.

The winning efforts appear in The Advertiser today.

JUDGES WERE MAYOR Nelson R. Olds of Attica, editor of the Attica Hub, Mrs. Harold Shaffer, Plymouth librarian, and Supt. Maynard J. Coon.

Second place in the essay contest went to Kenneth Turner, who won half gallon of Willard Dairy ice cream. Third prize was won by Larry Keinath, who wins a pair of theatre passes.

E. Jane Fenner and James Broderick won second and third prizes in the advanced drawing, but the judges were unable to distinguish second and third place winners in the lower class group. Accordingly, The Advertiser will award a treat to the class of Mrs. Ruth Lynch, whose pupils monopolized the contest.

WHAT WOULD LINCOLN

DO IN PLYMOUTH TODAY
By Sandra Barnes

If Abraham Lincoln were in Plymouth today, it would be as a young man, because his intense ambition would soon lead him to Washington D.C. Plymouth would be the most progressive community in the nation when he left.

"Mr. Lincoln would have a small law office. His object was to influence people. Abraham, known as the town's greatest story teller, was always in demand as a public speaker.

"The young man would be a member of the schoolboard.

6-man site committee named

A six-member committee will choose a site for a new Plymouth High school within three weeks, the Board of Education said Monday night, in preparation for a special election in mid-April.

The Board voted to accept the certificate of conditional approval of $220,228 in state building funds approved by the state department of education Feb. 4.

WHAT IT MEANS: THE Board has a 120-day commitment of funds from the state. By law, an election must be held not earlier than 40 nor later than 60 days of the date of approval of a resolution of necessity, which is set for Wednesday at 5 p.m.

It is here the plot thickens.

Some elements are plumping for an operational levy to be placed on the ballot with the building levy. They argue, not without the support of the clerk of the school district, Evan P. LaFollette, that "we can't afford to run what we've got, so how can we expect to pay for running a new building too?" They say, "let's get the whole picture out on the table."

To this Richland County Supt. Dale B. Kinney and the finance committee of the local board, David Cook and Gerald Stanley, demur. They obviously feel an operational levy submitted at the same time as a building issue will kill the golden goose.

This may be thrashed out Wednesday. One board member advised the press to "bring a sandwich along" Wednesday night, implying the 5 p. m. meeting would go long before the dinner hour.

SEVEN ELECTORS OF THE district — the same three watchdog Shilohans and four from the Plymouth area — attended Monday's special meeting and heard President Donald P. Markley nominate the site committee. "We tried to have both Shiloh and Plymouth districts equally represented, and we have done that. About a third of the pupils come from Plymouth corporation, and a sixth from Shiloh corporation, so Plymouth has two representatives on the board.

On Palm Sunday, Mar. 22, the Rev. Mr. Rutan will preach on "The Misguided".

The tags this year will be red on white, the colors of Miami university at Oxford, observing this year the 150th anniversary of its founding. Ash Wednesday opens Lent season

Christians here heralded another season of self-denial as Lent opened yesterday.

Presbyterians began mid-week Lenten services last night with a sermon on "The Mighty Romans" by the Rev. Moss Rutan.

Mid-week service is set for Wednesdays at 7:15 p.m. until Mar. 25.

announcement and the award at the annual Osman C. Hooper Newspaper show in Columbus Friday.

HE WAS JOINED IN HIS decision by the directors of Ohio's five schools of journalism, an East Canton publisher, a Columbus sports editor, an Akron photography editor, and a Barnesville society editor, all judges in the show.

AMONG NEWSPAPERS published in communities of less than 2,500, The Advertiser received third honors in general excellence.

First award went to the Archbold Buckeye, published in Fulton county by Orrin and Vincent Taylor. Archbold has a population of 2,350.

Second prize was awarded the Georgetown News-Democrat, publisher in the county seat of Brown county.

Thieves break safe

Burglars ripped open the safe of New Haven Supply Co. Friday night and made off with $150 to $200.

Deputy Sheriff John Borgia investigated. He said the thieves used crow bars, hammers and chisels to force the strong box installed in the office.

Entry to the building was made through the rear door, also forced.

Fingerprint experts from London were summoned.

The Advertiser's juvenile columnist was rated fourth among all columnists in the weekly press of Ohio. Prof. Verne R. Edwards, Jr., head of the department of journalism of Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, judge of this class, chose three veteran writers, led by State Senator Charles A. Mosher of the Oberlin News-Tribune, for awards in original columns.

"The column 'Suzie Sez' was officially given honorable mention with three other columns," Professor Edwards said Friday, "but had there been three instead of two samples of the column, which I understand was necessary because only two columns were published by the newspaper prior to the contest deadline, I feel sure it would have won a certificate."

IN ITS SIZE-OF-COMMUNITY class, The Advertiser won third prize, behind the Holmes County Farmer-Hub, published in the county seat, Millersburg, and the Bluffton News.

Kaye Kessler, sports editor of the Columbus Citizen, who judged the class, said "The Advertiser's pleasant make-up and strong sports column make it a winner."

Prof. L. J. Hortin, head of the department of journalism of Ohio university, Athens, gave The Advertiser first honorable mention for make-up and typography in its class.

Bank to start charge for check account

Last commercial bank in this area to capitulate, Peoples National bank will begin to charge for servicing checking accounts on Mar. 1.

Earl C. Cashman, new president of the institution, announces in a letter to depositors that the new charge will be nominal.

BASE CHARGE FOR ANY account: 25 cents a month minimum. With this go five free checks.

For each $50 of minimum balance, the depositor will earn three free checks a month. Example: John Doe and Mary Doe, in joint account, maintain minimum average balance of $251.65 during March, 1959. They will pay a 25-cent minimum charge for service. They can draw 20 checks at no additional charge.

OVER THAT TOTAL, THEY will be charged at the rate of three cents a check.

The bank intends to use the proceeds from the new system, Cashman is announcing, to investigate and eventually install electronic accounting and bookkeeping systems which will increase the bank's service to its customers.

J. C. Davis named to lead Cub pack

James C. Davis, cashier of Peoples National bank and the father of a Cub Scout, became Cubmaster of Pack 1 Jan. 29. He succeeds A. L. Paddock, Jr.

Milton E. (Tug) Mellott, agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad here, was named assistant Cubmaster.

Pack committee consists of Vance C. Hoffman, chairman; J. Benjamin Smith, assistant chairman; Byron Reim, James Broderick, Kenneth McDougall, Virgil R. Cameron and William Van Wagner.

John T. Dick will still serve as secretary. Dr. Pierre E. Haver is treasurer.

Den mothers and Webelo leader are Mrs. Mellott, den 3; Mrs. Monroe Van Wagner, den 2; Mrs. John Kleer and Mrs. H. James Root, den 1; James Broderick, Webelos.

Vance C. Hoffman and J. Benjamin Smith are co-chairman for the annual Cub Scout Blue and Gold banquet Feb. 26 at 6 p.m. in Plymouth Elementary school.

This year's banquet will carry out the month's theme of Mardi Gras and carnival of colors. The three local dens will make table decorations.

Each family is asked to bring its own table service. Mothers of Den 1 Cubs will furnish main dishes, those of Den 2 deserts. Den 3 mothers will prepare salads. Meat loaf will be provided by a special group of mothers.

side. He was convicted, despite his argument he was not subject to the court's jurisdiction since he was not a military person.

Burnside upheld the conviction. And then the fat burned Governor Horace Seymour of New York, a powerful Democrat, was apprised of Vallandigham's predicament. Remember that draft riots in New York had embarrassed the government beyond repair. Men preferred to pay money than to submit to the uniform. Over $15 million was raised in five days by this technique. But the levy in men, intended to be 30,000, fell short of 2,700.

And Seymour applied the pressure at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, N. W. Lincoln detested the duty, but he faced it manfully.

HE WAS COMPELLED TO announce the position of the chief executive on a matter that should never have arisen in the first place. And he was required to support a decision that had been appraised of it, would not have been taken, in the second place.

What was at stake was the doctrine of right of habeus corpus — "you may have the body," construed to mean, constitutionally, that no citizen may be held in jail without due cause.

It will suffice here to say that Lincoln admitted the right of habeus corpus had been suspended in Vallandigham's case. He said it was envisaged by the Constitution, which, unfortunately, did not say which branch of the government — executive or legislative — could so proclaim. But it had been done by his department, he said, and he was standing behind that position.

Vallandigham's seditious observations had drawn considerable support throughout the state, especially from south of the Youngstown - Mansfield - Kenton line.

Now that his arrest and conviction had been represented as a gross violation of his constitutional rights, opinion leaders and respected professional men rallied to his defense.

Sentenced by the court martial to incarceration at Ft. Warren, in Boston harbor, Vallandigham was excused from that onerous assignment and handed over to the Rebels.

He was sent to Murfreesboro, Tenn., where General Rosecrans saw to it he passed through the lines.

The Ohio Copperhead met with a mixed reception in the South. But it was not long before he had a sloop that slipped through the blockade and deposited him in Canada.

He went to Windsor and there sat impatiently while the gubernatorial campaign of 1863 was waging hot.

FOR VALLANDIGHAM had paramount interest in the campaign. He was the Democratic nominee for governor, opposed by a Cincinnati railroad financier and newspaper owner who had said he didn't want the job and wouldn't take it if elected. This was the sturdy John Brough.

Border control was less than now. Letters were exchanged between Vallandigham and his wife.

She determined to meet him in Windsor, to secrete him to the United States, whence, he it remembered, he had been formally exiled, and to bring him to Columbus and the larger southern Ohio cities before voting day, to turn the election.

Ohioans went to the polls that year on Oct. 13. So, in September, Mrs. Vallandigham started north. She reached Bucyrus, a hotbed of Copperhead sentiment. The Unionist newspaper was sacked and burned by Copperhead supporters.

And she figured on sympathetic treatment elsewhere. Her route lay to Plymouth, thence to Norwalk, Sandusky, Toledo and Detroit.

BUT ON THAT WET September night, in Plymouth, the manager of the Daniels House turned her away. There was no room in the inn, he said, for the likes of her.

Did she naively say who she was? Or did he suspect? History does not record. But there is ample proof that her driver could not replace his horse satisfactorily — he left the beast at a livery stable and took a spavined cob in exchange — and they went on in the forbidding night.

Mrs. Vallandigham eventually reached Windsor, six days later than she planned. She never called at Norwalk, so far as records show. This suggests the Daniels House experience may have been overwhelming in its influence on her trip.

Vallandigham got across the border and made his way to Ohio. But it was too late. Late on Oct. 13, when the votes had been counted, it was clear Brough had won by a narrow margin.

But wait! The soldier vote had not been accounted for. Sympathy with the Democrats was suspected, indeed, would have been natural, among the troops, who were long tired of arduous, often disease-ridden, weeks in the field.

But a telegram early on Oct.

14 proved that Vallandigham lost even the soldier vote.

HISTORY DOES NOT RECORD how well would Vallandigham have done had been on the scene in the last two weeks of the election, a touch-and-go campaign that hung in doubt until all but the last minute, when it was unlikely his exile would have been enforced by a government ever now frightened of its ability to wield power.

But for the unsung hero of the Daniels House, Vallandigham might have won, Ohio might have passed into the Copperhead camp, the Union might have sued for peace.

"How about one of those wonder drugs?"

"I've got a cold," the man said, and he went on to ask for a "wonder drug." The pharmacist said him some aspirin and advised him to see his physician. As it happened the aspirin fixed him up fine, but the point is this: Pharmacists are not physicians. We work with doctors, providing the drugs and medicines they prescribe. We have a professional knowledge of the powerful new "wonder drugs," so we know how important it is to use them correctly. Please do not feel offended when your pharmacist refuses to sell you a certain drug. It is for your protection and in the best interest of your good health. Miss Barnes' essay continues below —

By his great reasoning power, "Honest Abe" could persuade the voters to give us the school we need. I imagine he would challenge his opponents to debates, conferences would be held, and Lincoln would stand by his principles and never give up until he had won his point.

"The gentleman being such a lover of books, Plymouth's library would be the best in the state. Many of the books were of his own contribution.

"It was said that Abraham defended only cases that seemed right and just. With these principals, he had to be a God-fearing man, so Abe would be an active church member, perhaps teach a Sunday school class."

"With the gentleman as mayor, Plymouth would be able to have the sewage system that we have been striving toward. Instead of a jail the community would have a small hospital, because our citizens couldn't help but be law abiding.

"If Mr. Lincoln had been born a hundred years later, I believe that by this dynamic personality, he would unite the people of Plymouth into a strong, solid group, as he held to his policy to unite the North and the South.

Always shop at home first

KURT SWOGER'S artistic effort received the acclamation of the judges. It's a departure from the usual — he drew things he could draw well, even as Lincoln would have done. Winners will be awarded prizes in a public ceremony to be announced.

committee, Shiloh one, and each township in the consolidation one."

Members are Woodrow Huston, Alvin Garrett and Paul Kranz, of the Shiloh area; Miles Christian, Donald Levering and Paul Stoodt, Plymouth area.

Clerk LaFollette told the board he has studied operations of the two cafeterias for the last five-month period, and "I can't see how at the present rate of income they will break even by the end of the year."

He cited increased wages and higher food costs against static lunch charges. LaFollette recommended a two-cent rise in price of pupil lunches and a five-cent boost in price of adult lunches.

The board will deal with these suggestions in the special session Wednesday.

LaFollette said the cafeteria is in the red $1,076.69 as of now. He said 860 adult lunches, 11,400 children's lunches and 420 free lunches are served during an average 20-day school month.

School schedule adopted by Richland county system for 1959-60 was approved. Classes will begin Sept. 8, recess for a day on Oct. 30 for the teachers' convention, for two days on Thanksgiving and the Friday thereafter, and on Dec. 22 for the Christmas holiday. In 1960 classes will resume on Jan. 3, recess on Good Friday, and dismiss in May after 176 days of school have been completed.

Suzie sez

Lent started yesterday. Some of my friends are giving up things for Lent. Like my friend Eric. He's giving up driving his father's car.

Right here you're supposed to laugh. Eric is only 11 and too young to have a license.

I think I will give up fighting with my brother. Now if he will give up fighting with me. It will be peachy. Because Pop says it takes two to make a fight.

SATURDAY WAS MOM'S birthday. It was THAT one, and she and Jack Benny are the same age. Now she can't have any more.

I laughed to see her Saturday. To look at her you would think she was 80. Her hand is all bandaged up and her back taped so tight she can hardly move.

She didn't like my laughing. She said I will laugh on the other side of my face when I am Jack Benny's age.

Anyway, in a weak moment, Mom promised Pop she would cut down on the gaspers for Lent. Pop is all full of himself because he thinks he has won a big victory. I think he's crazy — she wouldn't stop smoking any more than water will stop running down hill.

Boy, if I just had the money she spends on gaspers!

I WOULD LIKE TO SAY thank you to Professor Edwards of Ohio Wesleyan university, and to the other people at Columbus, who said nice things about my column. Next year I promise to try to do better.

WORSHIP ALMIGHTY GOD ACCORDING to the church of your choice, this and every Sunday

THE SCHOLAR AND HIS CHURCH

Some people remain scholars throughout their entire existence. To quote a famous writer, they "stay alive all of their lives." They keep abreast of what is going on in the world today and are constantly in search of the truth. They accept nothing as fact until they have proven to their own satisfaction that it is fact. The influence of the simple witness of such scholars is profound because it is based upon intelligence rather than emotion. If scholars, some of them intellectual giants, are not ashamed to speak of God, are not too grown-up or "busy" to go to church, why should anyone be? True scholars are benefactors of mankind. If attending church can help us replace fear with power and love, then we too can, in a sense, become scholars — servants of men. Certainly it is worth a sincere and honest trial.

Big Red more red than big in downing Ontario

Support from a heretofore unaccounted-upon quarter led Plymouth's Big Red to a victory over Ontario in a Richland county league contest here Friday night.

The final score was 77 to 63, with Jiggs Hughes contributing 21 points.

The Big Red's big guns were strangely silent in this one. Steve Patterson had only nine and Milford Williams 11. Dick Bookwalter got 11, also.

Jerry Lelle led the Warriors with 22.

THE BIG RED LOOKED like anything but champions in winning this one. Plymouth earned only 30 of 81 tries from the floor, less than 37 per cent.

Nor was it effective from the penalty stripe, with a 65 per cent. record, not a good one for home floor play.

Tourney drawing set for tomorrow

If Plymouth wins the Richland county championship, it won't play again until Thursday night, tourney managers announced this week. Drawing will be tomorrow at 11 p.m.

League champion, in the fifth spot in the draw, will receive a bye. First four teams will be seeded.

Madison High school gymnasium at Mansfield will be the scene of the tourney, slated to open Saturday at 7:30 p.m. A second game will be played at 9 p.m.

Play resumes Monday at 8, Wednesday at 8 and again Thursday.

Finals are set for Feb. 21 at 8 p.m.

Tickets locally will be distributed by M. J. Coon, Wayne H. Strine and Harold Daup.

On the Sidelines

By THE OLD TIMER

The boys who know more about it than the coach — the old grads, wether or not they ever played the game — are beginning to appraise the Big Red's chances of winning the county tournament, which begins next week.

Matter of truth, it has been an object of conversation in the watering places for lo, a whole month.

There are those whose blind loyalty overcomes sound judgment. And there are those who've studied the styles of play and the personnel of the leading competitors and come up with what they think is a sound conclusion: Plymouth will fight it out, with Union the dark horse.

Hell, the O. T. told 'em that in this pillar 'way back at Thanksgiving.

HOW ANYBODY CAN hope it out without knowing the draw, and whether Lexington meets Plymouth in its bracket or will play in the other, is beyond the O. T.'s poor power to comprehend.

The students of the game claim that a full press defense and a fast-break offense will whip the socks off the Big Red. They cite examples: North-western, Madison, Union.

There's some truth to this observation, we think, but don't discount Harold Daup's desire to win.

The dreadful scandal three years ago nearly broke his heart. And well it might. He didn't deserve that kind of treatment.

Neither has he deserved the kind of treatment accorded him by some members of his teams past and present. Here is a clean-living, hard-working, sincere coach with a sound knowledge of the game. The boys who stretch the training rules — and there are some on the present team — are not only cheating themselves but their coach as well. What did he ever do to deserve it? And kindly dispense with that malarkly about "they're only kids — weren't you only a kid once?"

To this we will simply respond, "Sure we were, but we didn't behave that way. And what's more, we weren't six months away from laying down our life for our country, the way at least three of the present players are." (Note: one of them soon will be 19, others graduating might go in to military service, and the Russians threaten a showdown in Berlin this summer.)

We think Daup's ball club will stand up and be counted when they blow the whistle in the county finals. If the draw breaks that way and Union is in the other bracket, we look for Union to be there, too.

Wanna bet?
BOB OTTO, COLUMBUS, will operate the one-third mile Attica speedway on the fairgrounds this summer.
 Idled since Dorsey J. Ender was killed in an auto accident in 1957, the track did not operate last year.
