

Ramsey wants $22,000 for old theatre building

Village council was investigating informally this week ways and means of financing a fire house.

By yesterday morning, these developments had crystallized:

1. Edward O. Ramsey wants $22,000 for the former theatre building at Portner and East Main streets.

2. Some councilmen think "that price is way too high — I wouldn't be for it if we had the money!" and others say "Eddie has just offered that for dickering price — he'll come down plenty for cash!"

3. Time interval since the fatal fire of Feb. 27 tends to reduce enthusiasm for a fire house. Thus a plan must be organized soon, in order to take advantage of favorable public opinion.

4. Participation of the Board of Public Affairs in the financing of the building has been broached. The Board's president, Robert L. McInire, said at the last meeting Mar. 2 he thought it about time the Board considered building its own structure to house equipment.

Teachers' group says state aid OK on paper, but --

In 1955, when Keith Manfrass was eight and in the fourth grade at Streetsboro school (Portage county), Ohio voters approved a $150 million bond issue which was intended, among other things, to help build classrooms in districts where there was emergency need.

Now it is 1959. Keith is 12 and in the seventh grade. However, neither Keith nor any of his classmates will ever go to school in a new elementary classroom. This, despite the fact that the school district is in desperate straits and is fully qualified to receive state building aid.

Four years and three months have passed since the state bond issue met voter approval. But nowhere in the state has a shovel of dirt been turned or brick laid to build a classroom. Reason: A fantastic maze of red tape, created by the Ohio Legislature, has effectively throttled administration of the bond money allocated to schools.

State Supt. of Schools E. E. Holt reported to the State board of education in January that a school district, after being fully approved to receive building help, must trudge through 38 different steps before it gets the completed building. The steps involve applying for and receiving the state bond (11 times), state department of education (8 times), state controlling board, attorney general, state department of industrial relations, state treasurer, state department of Finance, local board of elections and the voters.

Holt reported that as of Jan. 6 only 10 of 20 districts on a priority list set up a year ago

Easter seal snafu sends some two; solution suggested

By error, Easter Seal appeal letters from both the Richland County and the Huron County Societies for Crippled Children were received by some residents of Plymouth and surrounding rural areas, according to information received by Walter B. Underwood, executive director, Ohio Society for Crippled Children.

"The confusion," Mr. Underwood explains, "derives from the fact that part of the community lies in Huron county and part in Richland county."

He suggests that residents of Huron county place their Easter Seal contributions in blue envelopes, to be sent to the Huron county society; and that residents of the Richland county sector place their contributions in the pink envelopes to go to the Richland county society.

Before the next annual Easter Seal campaign the list of residents and contributors will be carefully checked to avoid repetition of this confusion, Mr. Underwood said today.

had been able to negotiate through the red tape as far as the 28th step. Eight districts had not completed the first 20 of the 38 steps, including the No. 1 priority district (42.8 percent of pupils improperly housed).

Streetsboro school (17th on the priority list) was one of the districts which had achieved Step 28. School officials, with crossed fingers, are hopeful that there will be no slips-ups and that Step 37 (actual construction) can be reached in early summer. The optimistic view is that some Streetsboro classrooms may be completed in the Fall, almost five years after the state bond money was voted. This would enable the district to get a few of the 14 classes out of the school kitchen, gym, cafeteria and private homes.

85 insist upon school site here

Eighty-five Plymouth residents said emphatically Friday night there is nothing vague about their opinions regarding new high school location.

In an impromptu community meeting in the elementary school, they said, almost to a man:

1. They want the new high school built in Plymouth.
2. It was a "meeting arranged specially for Plymouth people and we don't feel any guilt about not inviting anybody from Shiloh, where they've had their own meetings."
3. State building aid is useful only if state control is preferable; "it's better to tell them to take state aid somewhere else and let us do it on our own than it is to take state aid and have to dance to their tune."
4. They want a committee appointed to "support the school board" in building in Plymouth.

ONLY TWO NIGHTS BEFORE, a delegation of 14 Shiloh residents descended upon what was billed as a private meeting of the site election committee.

Annual Good Friday observance planned for Mar. 27; seven clergymen to preach

Annual Good Friday services sponsored by the Inter-church council will be conducted Mar. 27 in First Evangelical Lutheran church, whose pastor, the Rev. Robert F. Hall, will be liturgist.

Two Mansfielders, a Shiloh and two Willardites will be among the seven clergymen who will participate.

THEME OF THE SERVICE this year will again be "The Words from the Cross."

First sermon, at noon, will be delivered by the Rev. Warren Powell, pastor of Oakland and Clay Memorial Lutheran churches, Mansfield, who will preach on "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Thereafter, at 15 minute intervals, the following sermons are scheduled:

"Verily I say unto thee, today thou shalt be with me in paradise," by the Rev. Arthur Willard;

"Woman, behold thy son! Son, behold thy mother!" by the Rev. Charles Geisler, First Presbyterian church, Mansfield;

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me," by the Rev.

Darling estimates that the first of the state aid classrooms might be finished by September. However, most of the new facilities cannot be completed before September, 1960, or later.

Prior to voting of the state bond issue, state-aid for new building construction in distressed districts, even though partly (1951-55; $8 million vs. California $376 million; South Carolina $150 million; Georgia $109 million; Florida $38 million), was administered with dispatch.

Even later, the state board demonstrated that building aid can be administered carefully but with speed. In lieu of giving schools an immediate allocation from the state bond issue, the Legislature in January, 1956, had appropriated $7 million from the treasury surplus for classroom construction.

So did Richland County Supt. Dale B. Kinney and a reporter for an out-of-town newspaper.

They heard the results of the balloting by the six-man committee, which — so far as half of the delegates is concerned — ended up in a tie, 3 to 3.

The three Shiloh members voted to a man for the Marvin Kessler site, which attracted one Plymouth vote as fourth choice and two as fifth.

They refused to vote on the present high school site, which drew three first-place votes from the Plymouth members.

This stand-off when to have been laid before the school board last night, in a meeting that promised more fireworks than a Fourth of July celebration.

FRIDAY'S MEETING started to develop after some opinion leaders learned early Thursday morning about the meeting the night before.

They said they regarded the attendance of patrons of the district at a committee meeting was not a public gathering as a breach of honesty. (The patrons of the district who attended were NOT privy to the discussions, The Advertiser learned. — Ed. Note.)

Friday's meeting took a familiar pattern. Franklin W. McCormick, chairman pro tempore, emphasized the Chamber of Commerce, of which he is president, did not organize the meeting.

Members of the Board of Education were then invited to speak, first President Donald P. Markley, then David E. Cook, then Gerald Stanley.

It was Stanley who said, "I think you've cost yourselves some votes by not inviting the Shiloh people — I didn't learn about this meeting until supper time today."

IT WAS HERE HE WAS sharply reminded it was not a meeting of patrons of the school district, but entirely to give Plymouth residents a "chance to speak their opinions."

Miss Madeleine H. Smith, secretary of the Chamber, speaking as a private citizen, said "They've held their meetings and we're holding ours."

It was pointed out that Shiloh delegates to the meeting of two nights before had not notified Plymouth residents of their intent to attend.

John F. Swartz, veteran Shiloh district potato grower, observed publicly that he is "beginning to see that it doesn't make sense to build out in the country and spend a lot of money for duplicate water and sewer systems."

THE COMMITTEE appointed to "support the school board" wasn't named with specific orders to back a bond issue calling for construction in Plymouth.

But its chairman, William B. Ross, in response to a question by Fred L. Buzard, said "I'll resign if the bond issue calls for building outside Plymouth." "It is he who was supported by the other four."

His colleagues on the committee are Robert Echeberry, Kenneth McDougal, Richard Fackler and Wayne Ross.

The then-new state board administered allocations from the $7 million as well as completing distributions from a $3 million appropriation made in 1955. By September allocations had been virtually completed.

One year later a report to the state board showed that the two appropriations (plus local funds) had resulted in construction of 47 buildings and additions (621 classrooms). All the facilities have been completed and are in use.

Behind the snail-paced handling of the bond money for classrooms is an almost incredible story of chain-reaction shifting away from well-intentioned objectives into a morass of legislated red tape.

Early in 1955, the General Assembly's Ohio school survey report was submitted to legislators. It declared that school districts would be unable to finance needed new construction with local funds between 1955-60 by a margin of $153 million. A "substantial increase" in state aid was recommended as well as a long range plan to annually distribute state aid building funds to districts.

Unwilling to make extensive appropriations from the surplus, the Legislature decided to have the people vote in the fall on a constitutional amendment "package" bond issue of $150 million to be financed by a one-cent cigaret tax. The bond issue proposal earmarked $75 million to be used for state mental health and welfare institutions; the remainder would go for construction of state universities, state buildings and public school classrooms.

Business houses will close at noon and remain closed until 3 p.m. in observance of the sacred holiday of Christians everywhere.

"Worshippers may enter and leave during the period between each 'word' or sermon," the Rev. Mr. Hall said Monday. "No offering as such will be taken, he continued, "but a plate will be left in the rear of the church. Contributions to it will be applied to the expense of the annual Community vacation Bible school."

PALM SUNDAY SERVICE in Plymouth's four churches will be detailed in The Advertiser next week. Pastors are requested to furnish data prior to Monday at noon.

Proprietors of a bowling alley in North Baltimore, Wood county, have circulated a petition seeking repeal of the village's two-hour parking ordinance, reports the News in that town.

Operations in the old G. S. Stewart woodworking plant at Norwalk have ceased, reports the Reflector-Herald. Thirty workers joined the unemployment list. For the past three years a group of investors from Chicago, Ill., had operated the plant, manufacturing quality wood office furniture.

Efforts in Oberlin to upset the council's plan to re-model the water system have struck a snag. Referendum petitions filed with the city auditor were found, says the News-Tribune, to lack sufficient valid signatures.

Vacancies of fireman and councilman in Crestline haven't been filled yet, reports the Advocate, despite recommendations by the mayor for both posts.

No list of delinquent personal taxes will be published in Delaware county, reports the Mt. Gilead Union-Register. First notices of delinquent personal property taxes to be sent out for many years, in some cases since 1932, were posted last week.

for additional training in the last five years, Supt. M. J. Coon said last week.

Twenty of these teachers are either enrolled in classes now or will take work before September.

Only eleven teachers have not returned to school since 1954. Of these, six are elementary teachers in grades one through six and five are assigned to the upper six grades.

Elementary teachers not returning to school represent 25 per cent of all elementary teachers. Only 18 per cent of the high school teachers have not added credits during the same period of time, Coon said.

"While most teachers add credit hours to their records for increased salary increments, many teachers return to college to receive a higher certificate or because they feel the need of further training to keep abreast of the times," he said. "Teachers not returning to school usually have family or other work responsibilities and have not been able to find sufficient time to be away from their domestic duties. Some of these teachers are planning to obtain additional credits soon."

Plymouth Board of Education is granting raises for such training and refusing raises to teachers not returning to school in a five-year period.

Shiloh Methodist church will be host Sunday for the fourth quarterly conference of the Plymouth-Shiloh Methodist churches.

A covered dish supper will be served at 8:30 p.m. The Rev. Dr. George C. Beebe will be chairman of the meeting which will follow. Church reports will be heard and officers for the coming church year chosen.

Leadership called for

It is right and proper that the public should express its opinions at the polls on matters of importance, from time to time, and we would not alter that.

But whether it is right and proper to repose confidence in the public's ability to choose what is good from what isn't so good is a question that has been debated for centuries.

An able young man who was born here said publicly last week that he hasn't much confidence in the record of his neighbors in choosing what is right. He spoke from painful, first-hand experience. There was none to say him wrong.

But a couple of older colleagues took issue with the implication that opinion of the voters should not be sought when the suspicion's strong the voters will strike a blow against progress. We should have been disappointed had they failed to dispute the implication.

But anybody with any experience at all knows it to be true that the small-community public doesn't respond to needs so quickly as its neighbors in larger places. And so the legislator in the smaller community has to remember this; one who proposes must also dispose. A councilman who votes for a new measure must not only be ready to defend it but he has a moral obligation to promote it actively, forcefully and resourcefully.

Too many times in the past 20 years has a council placed matters on the ballot merely to give the public a chance to decide them, or in response to real or imagined pressure from without, instead of with the honest conviction the matters were for the common good.

All who believe that the people are entitled to have their say must realize they have a continuing duty to lead and guide the people.

There are, it has been waggishly said, three great surpluses in America — wheat, corn and Girl Scout cookies.

Not so. There never is any surplus of the delicious green-and-yellow-boxed items in our house. And there can't be too many young-women-of-tomorrow calling to sell them, although their leaders see to it that a sticker is placed on our window when we have agreed to buy.

This is Girl Scout week. It celebrates the 47th anniversary of the founding of the order by Juliette Low. There may have been a Girl Scout who went wrong, but we never heard of one.

And we are happy to join with the thousands of Girl Scout friends throughout America in wishing them well.

Girl Scouting succeeds because of leadership. If you believe in Girl Scouting, it's not enough to buy cookies. Why not telephone your neighborhood leader to say you're willing to help?

We have.

Suzie sez

A lady came in to see the editor last week with a gift for him and a nice word for me. I thank her very much. She also left me an item which I am happy to use here.

She began by saying she didn't want to disturb the boss on his busy day, and he said it wasn't important, he would get his work done all the same. Besides, he likes to visit with this lady.

Pop always says, "If you want a thing well done, give it to a man who's busy — that's a sign he does things well."

But the lady's item says this isn't so.

DURING THE CIVIL WAR, Col. L. H. Waters was in a regiment stationed beside the brigade of Gen. Benjamin Harrison. The two officers became great friends.

After the war, General Harrison went back to Indiana. Later he became president. Colonel Waters went west and became a famous lawyer.

When Harrison was in the White House, Waters turned up in Washington one day on a business trip.

He decided it would be discourteous if he didn't go up Pennsylvania avenue to see his old friend.

When he introduced himself to the president's secretary, he was told to walk right into the president's office, that Harrison was alone.

This he did. President Harrison had his nose down to his desk and didn't look up. The colonel made a noise with his feet to attract attention. The president didn't hear him. Then he coughed. The president looked up and said, gruffly, "Well, what do you want here?"

Waters looked at him and said, "Not a damn thing," and walked out.

Fifteen persons from the Methodist church here were in Mansfield Sunday to attend a concert given by the capella choir of Otterbein college.

Larry Humbert, Shiloh, is a member of the organization.

Sixteen members were present at a meeting of the White Hall club Mar. 4 at the home of Mrs. Hugh Boyce. After a short business session the group knotted a comforter. 23 turning out for baseball

Twenty-three candidates, including 11 lettermen, have reported to West Virginia Bill Flaherty, coach of Plymouth High school's baseball squad.

The Big Red opens a six-game schedule Apr. 1 against Lucas here.

Flaherty sizes up his squad at this frosty date as "strong almost everywhere but in the box."

HE COUNTS UPON STEVE PATTERSON, Dayton Reed and Jesse Hamman, righthanders, and Phil Stone, a southpaw, as the main hurling strength, unless Billy Strine decides to report.

Behind the plate, Gene Palmer and Earl Lynch, both lettermen, will divide catching duties.

In the infield, Patterson and Reed are experienced keystone sackers. Dick Bookwalter played first base last season. Jim Russell and Dick Akers are seasoned shortstops. Milford Williams has two seasons of third baseman's work behind him.

In the outfield, Flaherty can call on Jay Baker, Jim Vogel, and Craig Harnly, all of whom have a year's experience.

The schedule:

- Apr. 1 Lucas, here
- 3 Ontario, there
- 7 Greenwich, here*
- 10 Greenwich, here*
- 17 Ontario, there
- 21 Lucas, there
- 24-30 Richland county tournament

On the Sidelines

By THE OLD TIMER

Although the close local interest has gone, many will be peering for C. V. Whitney's unbeaten Silver Spoon to capture the Kentucky derby May 2 at Louisville.

This filly won the $147,000 Santa Anita derby in California Saturday with a rousing charge to the wire, beating off a strong challenge from Royal Orbit and Fighting Indian.

Should the little girl run the trick, it will be the second time in history that a filly has won the Run for the Roses. Back in 1915, 44 years ago, a filly named Regret, owned and raced by Sonny Whitney's father, Harry Payne Whitney, took the Derby.

For the superstitious and the hunch players, among whom count the O.T., the double four will have considerable attraction.

With Ray York in the saddle, the Spoon may do it. It couldn't happen to a better horse.

CLOSING OF THE 1958-59 season at Ohio State means the end of the intercollegiate career of Larry Huston and the proving of the future of Larry Siegfried. For the O. T.'s part, he must be frank to say he's never been enthused over the latter's performance. Siegfried has always "stank it up" when the O. T. was watching.

As for Huston, it's a case of a boy who thought basketball was secondary to education. He has stuck it out in tough curriculum — pharmacy — and doubtless in another quarter of a century will be a howling success in his chosen field with no reference whatever to his prowess as a rebounder for the Buckeyes.

In this notion, he takes after his father, who played at Ashland college with Plymouth's Ray Hatch back in the dear dead days almost beyond recall.

As the twig is bent, we were once told, so grows the tree. Hats off to the Hustons — Leo and Larry, both!

ON A TENTATIVE BASIS, the O. T. is putting his 15 cents on the Yankees to repeat in the AL, with Don Larsen winning 17, and San Francisco to wrest it away from the Braves in the NL. Willie Mays ought to hit .345 and Orlando Cepeda .325.

If Bill Rigney can find one more double-figure pitcher, he's in like Flynn.

Second money? Why, Detroit and — hold your hats — Pittsburgh, of course!

IN ANY CASE ANYBODY is interested, the O. T. figures it'll be a dull state tournament this year. Cleveland East Tech should go all the way with only a mild sweat. As for Class A, look for Northwestern to be in there in the finals.

OUR GEORGE WOULD BE disappointed if we didn't mention that Bridgeport — his home town — won the state high school wrestling title. George has a well-earned reputation as something of a rasser himself!

Oops, beg pardon!

Name of Cindy Snodgres, mezzo soprano, was inadvertently omitted from the group of Plymouth High school pupils who were awarded "excellent" ratings at the district solo and ensemble contest at Mt. Vernon Feb. 28.

'SLEM' COMING HOME

Samuel C. Robertson, now assigned to the Air Force depot in New Cumberland, Pa., will spend the weekend with his family.

Trackmen rush preparations for Apr. 2

An eight-meet track schedule was announced Monday by Coach Lewis J. Pettit as Plymouth High school thinsies redoubled efforts to produce a winner this season.

Pettit has seven experienced hands and "a bunch of green boys who are likely to show something later on."

Steve Patterson, who placed in the Richland county meet last spring, and Dick Akers, another county placker, head the turnout. Patterson is a hurdler and high jumper, Akers a dash man and pole vaulter.

Other experienced candidates are Bill Archer, a quarter-miler; Dick Bookwalter, miler; Jim Russell, hurdler and vaulter, Earl Lynch, middle distance runner, and Duane Utias, quarter-runner.

Schedule:
Apr. 2 Ferrysville, there
9 Ontario, there
17-18 Mansfield Relays
30 Ontario, there
May 2 North Robinson Invitational
9 Richland county meet

16 district meet
23 state meet
"By arrangement with the athletic board of control, we have a new schedule of track events this year," Pettit says. "Trackmen will compete on Mondays and Thursdays and baseball men on Tuesdays and Fridays. This will allow boys to participate in both sports."

Voters paid little attention to the fine print in the wording of the amendment. It provided that money for classrooms would not be a simple grant-in-aid, as had been previous state policy. The state would "sell or lease" the classrooms to school districts.

Legislative leaders had written in this provision after expressing concern about giving state aid to a poor school district which might later become tax-rich by reason of a new industrial plant locating in the district.
