Petition faulty, signs indicate

Signs are the petition to decelerate the Trux street-Mills avenue alley a 20-foot thoroughfare may be turned back to the petitioners for more work. Solicitor Joseph F. Dush steadfastly refuses to reveal his legal opinion in advance of Tuesday's council session. But it appears, after consultation of the Revised Code, that observations passed at the last council meeting will obtain.

They are:
 1. Unanimity of signature is more compelling upon the council. Signature of all property owners should be obtained.
 2. Where land is held in joint tenancy, the signatures of wives or husbands should appear. None of the signatures to the petition is so affixed.

Ox roast set July 25-6

Ray Bright, assistant chief, Plymouth Volunteer Fire department, and Lyle Biddinger, Ehren-Parsel Post, American Legion, are co-chairmen for the 11th annual ox roast July 25 and 26 in Jacobs' grove in Baseline road. Three pits holding between 1,000 and 1,200 pounds of pure boned beef will be fired on the evening of July 25. They will be opened the following noon. Members of the PFD auxiliary under the chairmanship of Mrs. Howard Biller will be in charge of special booths. Wayne Strine's band will be featured during the afternoon of July 26.

Market was $3.1 million in '58

Retail market in Plymouth during 1958 amounted to $3,155,250, interpolated statistics of the U. S. Department of Commerce show. Average buying income per family unit was $6,010. Cash income per household was an estimated $5,104. Of this, family units in Plymouth spent $1,031 on food-stuffs, $195 on eating and drinking, $166 for general merchandise, $169 for apparel, $1,069 for automotive purposes, $311 for furniture and appliances, $366 for gasoline and $130 for drugs and pharmaceuticals. Family income here is largely concentrated in the $4,000-$6,999 bracket, the department's figures show. A total of 42.9 per cent of all households (226 families) report income in that category. Other incomes: Over $10,000 6.9 per cent 36 families; $7,000-$9,000 16.46 per cent 87 families; $2,500-$3,999 16.9 per cent 90 families; under $2,499 13.2 per cent 68 families. The interpolated figures compare with cash income per household in nearby cities as follows:

 Mansfield $6,137
 Ashland $5,484
 Bucyrus $4,965
 Gallon $5,382
 Norwalk $5,153
 The department figures Plymouth to have, for statistical purpose, 525 households. (The figures is based on the family - integer factor divided into estimated population of 1,575.)

WANTED: SCORER

Walter C. (Chick) Dawson, official scorer of Plymouth Midget league since its inception three seasons ago, turned in his resignation to President Duane (Bud) Young this week.

He said he has "family chores to do" that will keep him busy at home during game hours.

A search is being conducted for qualified replacement.

Two believed set to file petitions for school board

With two vacancies occurring on the Board of Education, only two avowed candidates have made known their intentions to file for election.

Deadline is Aug. 5 at 4 p.m. Haldon Cheesman, completing three terms on the board, says he definitely is not a candidate for reelection.

Donald P. Markley, president of the board, completing his first term, is a candidate for reelection.

Mrs. Mary Jane Hamman, wife of Jesse Wayne Hamman, formerly a teacher in the Shiloh schools, is understood to be circulating a petition. The possibility was "strong," some Shilohans said Monday, that Wayne Hunter will file a petition.

Platform upon which these candidates would run was obscure at press time, but it was obvious they would hardly file nominating petitions to pre-empt the liquidation of the Plymouth school district by transferring to Union.

Ralph Predieri dies of injuries received in scooter-car crash

Two freak collisions in Trux street Sunday evening and early Monday resulted in the death of a motor scooter rider and hospitalization for a sleepy motorist.

Ralph Predieri, 57, died at 8:30 a.m. Monday in Willard Municipal hospital, ostensibly of a heart attack, after he had been admitted 14 hours for treatment of a compound leg fracture, shock and a possible skull fracture.

Predieri was riding a motor scooter west in Trux street at 6:10 p.m. His step-son was riding another immediately to his rear. Apparently Predieri turned his head to signal to the boy, police said. He crossed the center line and collided with Dorothy C. Fouts, 38, 3719 West 106th street, Cleveland.

James Davidson, 19, Willard, is in Municipal hospital there with head and internal injuries received at about 2 p.m. Monday when he fell asleep and collided with the parked car of Lewis J. Pettit, football coach of Plymouth High school.

AN EMPLOYEE OF FATE-Root-Heath Co. here, Mr. Predieri is survived by his wife, Ossie; three daughters, Loretta Ann, at home; Mrs. Rosemary Baldrige, Shelby, and Mrs. Willie Barnett, Plymouth; four sons, Samuel and Eugene, Delphi, Isaiah, Willard, and Harley Frazier, at home; five James, Willard, and John and Joe, Plymouth, and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Chapman, New Haven, and Mrs. Alma Collins, Plymouth.

There are 11 grandchildren. Lasts rites were conducted yesterday at 10 a.m. from St. Francis Xavier Roman Cath. in Greenlawn cemetery here.

The Rosary was recited at the McQuate funeral home Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

ELEMENTARY PRINCIPAL SIGNS PACT

Coon given new 5-year pact

Executive head Maynard J. Coon of Plymouth schools is set for five more years.

Offered an opportunity to become supervisor of high schools in the Richland county system, Coon told the Board of Education he preferred to stay here, given the same job security. So, in a special meeting July 1, the board tore up his existing pact and extended a five-year contract at the same salary, $7,850 annually, effective Oct. 1.

John Fazzini, 33-year-old former executive head of Rosewood school near Urbana, has agreed to a $6,240 two-year contract to be principal of Plymouth Elementary school.

Miss Nancy Gary, a 1959 graduate of Ohio State university, was hired to teach home economics in Plymouth high school. A resident of North Robinson, she replaces Mrs. Quya Flora, who resigned for reasons of health.

Mrs. Sonia Hill of Ashland was hired to teach commercial subjects. She is a graduate of the University of Florida at Gainesville, Fla.

Loyola B. Hook was hired as a regular bus driver. Mrs. Russell Barbour and Mary Forsythe were re-employed as cafeteria supervisors at $225 monthly.

TO RELIEVE CROWDED conditions at Shiloh, sixth grade pupils of bus routes 4 and 9 were assigned to the Plymouth school.

The board moved to implement its standing policy to relieve housing pressure by placing a special building levy on the November ballot. The program calls for: 1. A new nine-to-12 classroom elementary school at Shiloh.

2. Additions to Plymouth High school to include five academic classrooms, a music shop, expanded industrial arts room, vocational agriculture

Wheat crop said 'best in years' rolls in Best wheat crop in history of the local mill is about two-thirds in, reports John Ganzhorn, manager of Plymouth Elevator.

"The wheat this year, in spite of hail and rain all around us, is a very fine crop," Ganzhorn said Tuesday. "It tests right around 13.9 per cent moisture content and yields runs right around 27 bushels to the acre, on the average." Meanwhile, local farmers were taking steps to compensate for severe damages resulting from last week's hailstorm.

Frank Fenner, for example, wrote off his corn crop, which was thoroughly slashed by hailstones, and sowed buckwheat.

By his neighbor to the west, Robert Karl, said he wasn't so badly hurt that he needs to write off the damaged area. Besides, he said, he doesn't want to destroy the unity of his fields.

Celeryville and other muck growers considered the celery crop almost an entire loss, together with some beans, potatoes and tomatoes, and almost all of the onions.

But they were re-seeding other truck crops, such as lettuce, radishes and onions, and hoped to recoup losses before frost.

"An early frost would really kill us," one of them said. Areas northwest of Willard notably in the Havana region, were struck Saturday by a hailstorm of similar fury and sustained losses counted well into six figures.

VETERAN New Haven township farmer Le Roy Lofland reaped wheat of his neighbor, William Link, Monday afternoon '59 crop is best in many moons, despite poor weather.

Where personal interests of the editor as businessman and citizen are involved, he is always careful that his observations are measured by these rules:

1. Are they fair?
2. Are they accurate?

3. Are they free from abuse? Having been assured by a large majority of others directly involved that these observations meet the rules, he presents them as written.

Some justification

Those who deal with forces which may be affected by "acts of God" have a tendency to invoke this disclaimer for a multitude of sins.

The events of July 1 certainly fall within the "act of God" category, up to a certain point.

The nature of public service is, unfortunately, such that where servants of the public do what's expected of them, they are entitled to, and receive, no praise for doing so.

It's where they fail to do what's expected of them that they run the risk of condemnation.

Thus nobody connected with the light and power department should have been disturbed two weeks ago when everybody and his brother wanted to know why power wasn't restored more promptly.

Or why priorities weren't established for the restoration of power so the principle of "most likely damage receives the first assistance" should be observed.

Personal interests aside, we argue strongly that a business which subscribes to electric service and uses a good deal of it is entitled to first consideration when power fails. This is even more true when, because of failure to restore service, damage to stock in trade seems likely.

Why reason that qualified medical or surgical personnel wouldn't be denied an ailing patient simply because their fee is apt to be high, therefore why should competent personnel to repair the damage be denied the electric system when it, too, is ailing, merely because the fee is apt to be high. And let nobody deny this was discussed; we heard it.

It is no reflection upon the functionalities of the electric department that they may not be qualified to correct the damage. We go to a specialist in a larger city to have a goiter or a delicate heart operation performed, don't we?

The size of our operation is such that we cannot properly afford a highly skilled emergency employee. And when we need skills, we should not be reluctant to get them.

We are informed they are available, at the other end of the telephone.

Finally, we ask why it must be that whenever the wind blows strongly, or we have more than a few drops of rain, the sector of the Square which includes an important market, a very large hardware, a barber shop, an appliance dealership, a men's clothing store, a shoe repair and retail store, a dry cleaner, a service station and a weekly newspaper should immediately be without power.

The ONLY justification for public ownership is better service at comparable rates. We could stand a little justification right now.

Lakota district patrons speak up on curriculum

Lakota school district was organized last spring, a confection of three districts in as many counties, now transferred for administrative control to Sandusky county system.

The survey whose results are reproduced above (courtesy of Benjamin W. Strange, editor of the Rising Sun Unique-Derrick) is obviously a detailed analysis of group thinking on school needs. The results, some may argue, don't necessarily apply here, nor is it necessarily reasonable to conclude the people — whether in Lakota district or elsewhere — know best what kind of education should be given to young citizens. But if the people are going to foot the bills, they should show some interest in curriculum and not be deflected from this principal reason for a school's existence toward less important — and rewarding — thoughts.

Suzie sez

The governor of Louisiana is suing Time magazine for $2 million. Pop told me about libel. He says the writer, the editor, and the publisher can all go to jail for saying something bad that's not true.

Then he asked me about what I said he said that I printed here a couple of weeks ago. I told him they could put us in jail if they wanted to, but it's hard to get blood from a stone.

Besides, if he gets $2 million from Time, what would he want from us?

There was hanging on my nail this week a clipping from a newspaper that said, "Aerodynamic Engineer Found in Horse Stable." It's about a man named Albert Park Reed, who was a big high mucky-muck in space ship work. He left his family and ran away and they found him after seven years. He was cleaning up after race horses.

I can't imagine why the editor stuck this piece on the nail for me unless he wanted me to remark that some of the horses he bets on could use somebody who knows something about aerodynamics.

WHEN I WROTE ABOUT Mr. Cavin's book last week, I didn't think there would be a letter in the mail saying a friend of ours knew the giant.

Mrs. Luella Entler says, "I remember the giant very well. I used to sit on his knee. Captain Bates, his name was, and somewhere there is a picture of me sitting on his lap and Tom Thumb, the only midget of those days, also. That was a long, long time ago; it sure was good to read about it, though."

TWO VERY CUTE KITTENS, one a boy, (the other is a girl, match), have been offered to good homes. I can tell you they are handsome kittens. Call me if you would like to have one or both and I will let the owner know about it.

Farm ponds can be expensive if spillways don't fit watershed

Thinking of building a farm pond? Need water for your livestock? A place where you can catch your fill of fish without worrying about game warden?

Why not talk it over with someone who knows the score when it comes to ponds, says Bill Addison, U. S. Soil Conservation service, Norwalk.

"It's easy enough to throw away several hundred dollars on a pond that's built on the wrong kind of land," he explains.

Farm ponds fail for a number of reasons. One: they are built in the wrong place. Another: they are on the wrong kind of land, or they are not properly planned.

Type and size of spillway, for example, are important. A poor spillway could easily lead to a complete pond failure.

Addison says the watershed above the pond should be large enough to supply water. However, it should not be so large that it creates a flood hazard. "We figure a watershed should be about eight or 10 times the size of the pond," he says.

Harold Heyman, near Monroeville, a cooper and supervisor of the Huron Soil Conservation district, needed water for his livestock. He called on the Soil Conservation service for help. Addison pointed out the best soil for ponds is a heavy, slowly-drained subsoil that contains lots of clay.

Heyman picked a site that agreed with Addison's recommendations. The water is pumped to Heyman's barn and also into the basement of his home for use in the bathroom. "The money I've saved hot having to haul water paid the cost of my pond the first year," Heyman said.

W. F. Swabley of near Norwalk, another district operator, also wanted a pond. "I needed water to irrigate my small fruits and vegetables, and to provide spray water for my orchard," Swabley said.

"With the Soil Conservation service technician's help, I selected a site that was convenient to my orchard and truck crop area, and still didn't take away any good cropland from my small farm," he added.

The pond furnishes over 1.5 million gallons of water. Swabley points out this water supply has saved his sweet corn and tomato crops the past two dry summers, as well as providing some good bass and bluegill fishing throughout the warm months. During the winter the pond is the headquarters for all the ice skaters in the community, he added. "The $500 I spent on my pond is the best investment I ever made in the farm," Swabley concluded.

Farmer badly hurt in fall off combine

A misstep on a combine shortly after 5:30 p.m. Monday put Emmett Baidridge, 57, Route 98, in Shelby Memorial hospital with a broken left leg and possible internal injuries.

Hospital authorities said he was "resting well" Tuesday.

His family said there was uncertainty as to how the accident occurred. A son was operating the combine. The father stepped up onto the machine while it was moving. His foot slipped and he tumbled beneath it.

The machine is said to have passed over his body from foot to head, lacerating the latter.

The trained critic defends his craft:

Player not necessarily an expert

By THE OLD TIMER
There was brought to our doorstep last week, certainly not for the first time, the age-old argument that turns on the qualifications of the critic.
The inference — hell, there, was no inference to it, the man simply said, "Where'd you ever play ball?" — is that a sports writer can't write about the game correctly unless he is or has been a player.
By the same reasoning, a man can't tell good cooking unless he cooks himself.
The argument is so specious as to be beneath consideration, except that thousands of otherwise honest souls advance it vigorously every day.

IT'S NEXT TO IMPOSSIBLE to argue that playing the game doesn't make a man an expert. It isn't fashionable to cite the hundreds of top-notch football players who can't tell you sound strategy, but everybody knows there aren't more than a handful of sound quarterbacks in any single season.
Nor does it seem worth the effort to point out, for example, that the best manager baseball ever knew, Joe McCarthy, of the Cubs and Yankees, neyplayed a big league game in his life.
Only last season, the top basketball coach in these parts was a man who never played the game in competition of any sort. What he knew about the game he learned by reading a book.

What it is about amateur baseball and basketball and especially football, where the squads seldom numbered more than 18, and they played a second-rate schedule, that develops self-styled experts is beyond us.
Until the advent of television, thousands upon thousands of them had never seen a big league baseball game, or watched professional or Big Ten basketball or football. Yet for years they've argued they know more about it than the sports writers, on the phony argument they've played for the Kinky-Dinks at some time or other.

SPORTS WRITERS ARE assigned to cover contests of all sorts within their fields of specialization, and they know whereof they speak, whether they ever drew on glove or

And until the bushwhackers realize that fact, you'll pardon us if we let their protestations go in one ear and out the other.
The real damage, however, is when one of these Little leaguers hears his manager, who played for Podunk High school the grand total of 32 games in four seasons, berate some sideline expert with "Where'd you ever play ball?"
Experts are developed by thoughtful, informed study of the game, by watching hundreds of contests analytically, and by seeing the very best under the very best of circumstances.

STIFF TREATMENT
Celluloid collars and cuffs were worn as a preventive against all sorts of diseases. Of course, we know better nowadays. In recent years, medical research has exploded a whole series of such fallacies. We are now living in the healthiest era the world has ever known. Every day medical science makes advances toward preventing disease... alleviating suffering... prolonging human life. When you are ill, take advantage of these new effective treatments by seeing your physician. Then, should he recommend medication, we'll be glad to fill his prescription promptly and carefully.

REDS, BRAVES WHIP GIANTS, F-R-H CUBS

Reds and Braves sailed along undefeated after a week of play in the second half of Plymouth Midget league.
The two were to meet Monday night, in a contest that could well settle the hash for this half.
Hapless Cubs winners of only one game all season, continued their hard luck.
They dropped one to the Braves, 17 to 10, after the Braves scored 11 times in the third frame, breaking a scoreless tie.
Mike Fox limited the Cubs to only three hits.
With only one hit, by Bob Tackett, the Cubs bowed to the Reds, 16 to 1.
And the Braves downed the Giants, despite four hits by Chip Paddock, Giant catcher, 23 to 9.
There was no contest in any of these games, which may explain the serious defection in parental support.
Delaying a game for want of an umpire was unheard of two seasons ago, some veteran fans said this week, but it happened twice last week.

11th front finished in refurbishing job

Completion Monday of The Advertiser's external redecorating job brought to 11 the number of businesses which have refurbished exteriors since the turn of the year.

Later this month, The Advertiser will close for the two day weekend period to permit the front office to be redecorated.

Businesses which have refurbished: Millers' Hardware & Appliances (including new awning), Bob's Barber shop, Webber's Rexall store, Cornell's restaurant, Hatch Dress shop (now repainted in what experts describe as "fleshy pink"), Lash Barber shop, Mack's Clover Farm market, Peoples National bank, Curpen's Jewelry & Gift shop and Lillo Beauty salon.

Donald J. Willet, trading as Dot's Saddle Shop & Shoe Repair, are completing a new $8,000 building, the first new business building downtown since 1886.
