

Jobless set at 5%, due to rise soon

Less than five per cent of the eligible work force in Plymouth labor area is unemployed, a survey showed last week. As nearly as could be determined by records available for public inspection, 69 persons who would normally be a part of the work force are not now employed. Another 25 persons are on relief and 45 are temporarily disoccupied because of seasonal layoffs.

The total work force under full employment was computed at 1,428. A total of 1,289 are currently drawing regular pay checks. The annual labor return is thus $5.88 million.

Unemployment in the Plymouth labor area is likely to increase to six and a fraction per cent when a Greenwich firm closes its doors shortly and throws an estimated 35 employees who live within the Plymouth labor market out of work and when Wilkins Air Force station, Shelby, discharges employees ineligible for transfer or unwilling to transfer, date estimated to be Apr. 26.

Air Force headquarters announced recently the huge depot at Shelby will be completely closed June 30, 1961, a whole year in advance of the target date. Shortly thereafter, Maury Koblenz, chief of corrections at Columbus, announced the state of Ohio finds the Shelby site too small for use as a minimum security prison.

Additionally, Shelby municipal authorities told the state that city couldn't supply water for the 1,500-odd persons to be stationed at the depot if it were to be converted to a prison.

This raised the question whether any industry could look toward use of the site when the Air Force relinquishes it, in view of the water situation.

THE U. S. DEPARTMENT of Labor considers unemployment by six per cent of the work force to be "serious unemployment" and nine per cent "critical unemployment."

The figures were derived from a careful study of statistical data collected by public and private agencies in an area bounded by Route 224 at the north, the New Haven township line at the east and west, the Kuhn farm in Route 61 at the south, extending to the Plymouth township line at the west, and all of Cass township.

They showed a total population of 3,624, of whom 1,286 are in school, 492 will eventually be enrolled in school, 488 are retired or pensioners, 112 receive some form of public assistance short of social security and old age pensions, and 27 are ineligible for such as unemployment compensation.

THE FIGURES, ADMITTEDLY based upon desk surveys supplemented by head counts where they were immediately feasible (as in Plymouth and Shiloh villages and in school attendance figures), are higher than in Mansfield, the only nearby area in which the Ohio Employment service computes unemployment statistics. Mansfield area is not held to be a serious unemployment area.

Plymouth's consumer market amounts to an estimated $7.82 million annually, because many of its consumers live without the boundaries of the work force supply area.

'Self-finance' plan approved; sewer, water funds to be used

A "self-financing" plan to pay for a new firehouse won unanimous approval of village council in adjourned session Tuesday night.

By its terms the council will buy its own bonds, at four per cent interest, withdrawing from accumulated funds the money necessary to pay for the bonds—$39,000.

Although the legislation does not spell out whence these withdrawals will come, it was fairly certain a good portion of them—perhaps as much as $30,000—will come from the sewer service fund.

WHAT IT MEANS IS THAT accumulation in this and other funds, not now being used save to earn interest at one per cent a year in the official depository, will be applied to the purchase of the councilmanic bonds.

The interest—four per cent—will accrue to the balance of the fund from which the bond purchase moneys are taken.

Thus the village takes from one pocket to put in another. The decision was taken with some lack of harmony. This developed when Councilman Elmer E. Markley took exception to the arbitrary allocation of costs in the enabling legislation. The purchase price of the site is $4,750, an agreement which is firm. But the legislation states that land costs shall be pegged a $4,000, site improvements at $6,000 and construction costs at $29,000.

Markley argued this would mislead the public. "We have a bad public opinion situation in this town," he asserted.

ARCHITECT THURMAN J. Peabody hastened to assure council the bonding attorneys

Personal tax duns mailed by auditor

Personal tax forms for 1960 have been mailed to Huron county taxpayers. Auditor Bernard Kean announces, Apr. 30 is the final date for filling with the county auditor.

These forms are mailed only to those for whom there is a definite record of tangible or intangible property. Where the property has been transferred and explanation should be filed on the form. In cases where a return should be filed, it is the obligation of the taxpayer to obtain the proper blanks, Kean says.

Tax receipts from the tangible property are distributed to the township, municipality, school district and county of origin, and a small portion of voted bonded indebtedness to the state, in the same way as real estate tax receipts are distributed. The intangible tax receipts for the most part are diverted to the support of public libraries. About 22 per cent of the direct taxation for the benefit of the varied levels of local government comes from these sources.

Questions as to personal taxes may be addressed to the county auditors' office. If the question is entirely new or unusual it will be forwarded to the state department of taxation for an answer. If no tax is due according to the law, there will be no assessment.

agreed to the arbitrary allocation of costs because "it's customary in the profession—we do this so that we can comply with the law and not get ourselves caught. What we've allocated for building and site improvement can be spent for land, but what we've allocated for land can't be spent on building. That's why the larger figure is deliberately made so—we can always come down but we can't go up."

This seemed to mollify Markley somewhat and his colleagues moved the measure, which won prompt approval, although some councilmen openly showed they fear the public will not understand.

"So long as the voters know we're paying the Ramsey's $4,750 for the land and we're issuing bonds for only $39,000," one of them said, "the rest is really unimportant—only a paper shuffling that changes certain internal figures but doesn't alter the whole total."

By emergency ordinance, council voted to participate with the state in improving a portion of Route 98. The work, to be done during the early summer, will cost the village about $678.

$400 goal missed by March of Dimes

A fraction over 81 per cent of its goal of $400 was achieved by Plymouth's March of Dimes campaign just concluded. John Fazzini, elementary school principal, announces.

Individual gifts amounted to $233.00, club and organization donations to $39.02, coin collectors to $16.65 and the proceeds of the American Legion dance to $35.20.

"I am grateful to those whose contributions of time and money were so freely given in this useful campaign," Fazzini said Monday. "Those who wish to contribute, now may send their gifts to me at my home, 96 Mulberry street."

Next two weeks critical period for mink crop --- breeding starts

Whether you got your mink by psylla or honestly, there's a good reason why it cost so much.

Take it from John A. Turson, for whom the next 15 days begin a critical period of planning, care and hope.

The female mink comes in to season and Turson will breed for the season's crop. For good pelts meeting market standards, he can expect $32 to $36 each.

But the time between breeding and selling is fraught with heartbreak.

PAPA MINK, IF HE'S healthy, will service four females. Sometimes the breeder must fasten the breeding pair together. But when the male lays his teeth into the scruff of the neck of his mate, it's proof he's attracted to her.

The breeder then waits 49 or 50 days while the kits gestate. From three to four kits are born alive, eyes closed, to the mother in her nest. Each is about the size of your little finger. In six weeks, they're weaned.

Then Breeder Turson can size up what he's got. Choosing the right sire and the suitable dam is only part of the problem, but it's a big one. The average mink breeder knows more about Mendel and his beans and the theories of genetics than any livestock expert. Dominants and recessives crop up in their conversations.

Because in addition to the tricky business of breeding true to a genetic strain, and avoiding sports, mistakes and accidents, the mink breeder has to cope with the whimsies of fashion.

Milady's tastes as to colors of mink skins change with the winds. Breeder Turson has about 80 of the restless little carnivores in cages at his home at 143 Franklin street. The mink is the nearest animal equivalent to perpetual motion. It will dash to and fro in its cage by the hour, flitting from side to side, and end, with no seeming purpose save to keep moving.

Once a day, he feeds them raw raeat—chicken legs, tripe, occasionally liver, supplemented with wheat germ and other vitamin-laden foods intended to give them in captivity what God meant for them to have when wild.

What he feeds them can have as much effect upon the kind of pelt they produce as he who breeds them. During the breeding season, mink are exceedingly nervous. Breeder Turson is careful not to allow them to be frightened, disturbed or upset in their routine.

The female is receptive to the male about once in eight days during the breeding season. She's carried—and the breeder wears tough gloves and grasps her firmly to prevent biting—to the male's cage. If the breeder is lucky, a marriage takes place promptly.

"But sometimes he's not so lucky," Turson admits. "You have to be there together sometimes. Or wait until the male makes up his mind. Sometimes it never happens. That's what happened to me last season."

THE VOICE OF THE ADVERTISER

Credit where credit is due

To give credit where it's due, note that Plymouth Board of Education has approved a good, diversified curriculum of instruction for the high school next year.

It is considerably broader, larger, we trust more effective than it was five years ago. This is what proponents of a consolidation contended all along, and since we were among them from the first, it's a pleasure to give the board credit for doing a good job.

But no curriculum is perfect, and we find some fault with this one.

It is that English is required for three years only. Ohio law requires only three years and the curriculum meets the standard in that respect.

But we've never felt the state standard is adequate. A boy or girl gets along in this world on two important legs: the ability to communicate, and the ability to get along with others.

Having but recently judged an essay contest, in which pupils of the city and county systems were entered, we're not enthusiastic about the ability to communicate that's being learned. Note the word is learned. We don't know if the teaching is bad, good or indifferent. But since what's learned is often an index to what is taught, it's apparent that the teaching may be, in some ways, suspect.

For what they're worth, we have these recommendations to make to improve instruction in English:

1. Make it a required course for all.
2. Emphasize grammar more than what's done now. This should begin in the lower grades.
3. Give more drill in composition. There is no reason why some high school pupils shouldn't be required to produce 500 words of original composition each week. Each should produce half that much.
4. Lay heavier emphasis upon literature. The classics of the tongue deserve more attention than they're getting; a plumber gets just as much from a knowledge of Shakespeare as a space scientist.
5. Require more outside reading. We are fortunate that our library is a good one. Small, but nevertheless good. Yet the number of high school upper classmen who use it, by comparison with the number of junior high and elementary users, is depressingly low.

We hope the citizen's committee on curriculum will give some study to the desirability of improving the required course in English. It is a statewide, if not a nation-wide, problem. And it's no sin to exceed the obviously low state standards in any field of instruction. Especially in English.

Being a periodic, but irregular, presentation of human interest stories that come to the staff's attention yet seem for one reason or another not suitable for treatment elsewhere in the paper.

Wholly Italianate in his origins, Mayor William Fazio apparently is a dedicated Prussian in his attitude toward women in politics. He follows the rule of "kinder, kirche und kuche" for women. Eight months ago, just prior to filing his petition, he said he was running for mayor to prevent a woman being elected, he having heard a rumor that a woman would run. Now, with a municipal planning commission on the boards, and having available an experienced woman who served well and capably in the difficult task of drafting a zoning ordinance, he's passing her up in favor of a man.

Which proves that, so far as Plymouth goes, it's a man's world. IN EVERYTHING, THAT IS, save arranging for a governor's visit. The legwork (and no snide remarks about her underpinning intended) was done by the Chamber's first—and only—secretary, Miss Madeleine H. Smith. INVITATION BY THE CITY of Willard to Ohio Power Co. to study the electric system in Huron county's third city apparently is the beginning of consideration of sale of the municipal utility. Ohio Power volunteered to make the survey, which it certainly wouldn't have done had it any notion the results wouldn't be favorable to sale. Ohio Power rates are substantially lower than municipal rates in either Plymouth or Willard. THERE'S NO SUGGESTION by village council that it amounts to welfare state-ism. But anybody can get his locked door opened by calling the police department, which was authorized to obtain a special gun for the purpose. A small fee will be charged, since it's a service above and beyond the call of duty. BIRDWATCHERS CAN take notes on the technique of Mrs. R. Earl McQuate, who has sworn witnesses to prove a robin visited her back yard on Feb. 19.

Miss Shelly Jean Reed has promised to marry Alvin Leroy Mertz of Elyria, her mother, Mrs. Hiram Reed, announces. Miss Reed, a graduate of Plymouth High school, is also a graduate of Elyria Academy Beauty Culture. She is employed by Halle Bros. at Westgate Shopping center. Mr. Mertz, the son of the Albert Mertes, 400 Kenyon avenue, Elyria, is employed by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. A June wedding is planned.

Akers, Bachrach to debate question

Debate on the question "Resolved: That Plymouth Should Install a Sanitary Sewer System Immediately" will feature the March meeting of the Community club in Cornell's restaurant Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. Councilman Donald E. Akers will uphold the affirmative, Maurice Bachrach, a former councilman who resigned because he couldn't stomach what he said was "detachment from Columbus", the negative. Boy Scout Troop 1 will be guests of the club, which is sponsor to the unit, in celebration of the 50th anniversary of Scouting.

Suzie sez

A big company has sent me a nice booklet about getting a garden ready for spring. It is a nice book. I read it carefully. Chapter 10 gives me a big laugh. It is called "Controlling Nuisance Animals" and it is printed in two colors. Down the left hand side, in green and pink, are the pictures and names of the nuisance animals. They are rats, mice, ground squirrels and chipmunks, woodchucks and groundhogs, tree squirrels, rabbits, bats snakes, crawfish and sparrows and pigeons. For all of them except the last two, they have some suggestions about what poisons to use and how to use them. But under "material" and "preparation" for sparrows and pigeons, there isn't anything at all, just a big blank space. And under "remarks" it says, in small print, "Consult U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service, Columbus 15, Ohio." Well, I did that. We don't have any sparrow or pigeon problem but I just wanted to see what they'd say. And it's a big joke. The U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service doesn't any more know how to get rid of pigeons without shooting them. And the dirty birds have so many friends that when you try to shoot them, they shoot you. The friends do, that is. Pop says the way to make yourself a millionaire is a hurry to learn to get rid of pigeons without shooting them. Then you can name your own price to hundreds of cities and state capitals.

Here's more about mink---

When a pelt is ready for market, John Turson electrocutes its wearer. "Some breeders use a shot to kill the mink — it goes right into the heart — but I use electrocution," he says. "Then I remove the pelt carefully, cure it by simple methods, and bury the meat. We don't feed the meat to the other mink because it might develop cannibalism."

HE SELLS HIS PELTS DIRECT to the Hudson Bay Co., New York, which grades them and jobs them to furriers.

"Some of the problems? "Well, besides the chance you take breeding them, and the difficulty of feeding them, there's the cost of good food. Horse meat is so expensive it's all but impossible to get. That's why we use entrails and poultry feet, which are cheaper and fairly easy to get. And they tie you down — you've got to feed them every day, see they have water in cold weather and hot, watch them for sickness, give them food supplements such as wheat germ, keep disturbances away from them."

"What disturbances? "Well, boys' with bee-bee or small bore rifles who'll shoot crows in the neighborhood. That'll excite the mink and they'll worry themselves to death. Sometimes an airplane flying low will do it."

How much to get going in mink raising? "You can buy a good breeding pair, of the most desirable type, for about $125 or $150 apiece. But that's only the beginning."

SO, MADAME, NEXT TIME the furrier quotes the high three or low four figures for that mink stole or cape or jacket, don't whistle. Consider the breeder's costs! Even his aspirin bill is astronomical!

Lutz tells why he dropped from race

Resentment by backers of the "right-to-work" amendment and by officers of a hospital whose suit for payment he opposed was payment by Prosecutor Theodore Lutz last week to be the reason why he dropped out of the race for judge of the court of common pleas.

Lutz advanced these arguments in an unique letter to Republicans in Richland county.

He said he agreed to run for judge on condition he would not be opposed. When Robert Mabee apparently reversed his position, according to Lutz, and decided to run, Lutz concluded he could afford neither time nor money for a door-bell-ringing campaign.

He said he agreed on Jan. 14 to run for judge after GOP leaders approached him. Two days later, he learned Mabee, the only other GOP lawyer who had expressed interest in the post, had told GOP workers he was dropping out, because his wife and father-in-law felt him too inexperienced and too young for the job.

BY FEB. 1, MABEE HAD told Lutz otherwise, Lutz says. Opposition in the primary was demanded, Lutz said he was told, by two forces:

1. Promoters of the "right-to-work" amendment, whom he advised to desist, because "espousal of the amendment by the Republican Party would result in the defeat of the governor and all other Republican candidates."

2. A Mansfield hospital, its agents and attorneys, who resented his service as prosecuting attorney in defending Richland county against the hospital demands for payment of over $30,000 in claims which had been denied as unlawful by relief directors and the commissioners. In the 1958 probate judge campaign advertisements "by this force vigorously urged my defeat and earlier the hospital administrator had publicly declared his intention to go after me politically if I did not order the commissioners to pay."

Lutz made no reference to bitterness among some proponents of school consolidation that his erroneous advice in the Huron Valley - Iroquois case resulted in the Supreme Court decision that upset what apparently was a happy arrangement for all parties.

A son, Robert Noel, weighing six pounds and six ounces was born Feb. 14 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitaker in Upper Montclair, N.J. They are also parents of a daughter. Mr. Whitaker is a former member of the Plymouth High school faculty. Mr. and Mrs. Garth Shepherd, Mobile, Ala., became the parents of a son, Mark Jeffery, Feb. 11. Mrs. Shepherd is the former Bonnie Boyle, daughter of the LeRoy Liskas. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Shepherd of Shelby are the paternal grandparents. The O. J. Nicklers are his maternal great-grandparents.

Judge tells troublemaker to leave Richland county

Scratch one troublemaker from Shiloh's population.

Shelby Municipal Court Judge William R. Morris ordered David Click to leave Richland county and never return if he wishes to escape a $30 fine and costs.

The sentence derived from a charge of public intoxication and disturbing the peace filed by Shiloh's village marshal Friday night.

Click, who has been living in the Russell Dick home, where he is said to have "made trouble", went across the street to the home of the Keesys, where he threatened to kill Mr. Keezy.

Click was arrested and taken into custody of the county sheriff until he could plead to the charge Monday morning.

His plea guilty as charged, fine $30 and costs, fine suspended on condition Click make a loud clacketyclack on highways leading from Richland county.

He came here from Kentucky.

Two Shilohans make this week's agricultural news --- vicariously

Two long-time Shilohans with interests in agriculture made news this week.

Clyde Bevier Caldwell, now city editor of the Lodi Advertiser, is the author of an informative piece in "Ohio Farmer", a publication to which he's contributed professionally before. This one is about tiling your farm and making a sketch of tile lines.

Joseph R. Page, veteran hatcheryman and feed dealer, returned from Arkansas with data of a breeding experiment with beef cattle that've electrified that under-developed state.

G. G. Parkin, Dallas, Tex., ranching at Springdale, Ark., has crossed upward of 200 purebred Aberdeen Angus cows with a Charolais bull.

The Charolais is a French breed. Only a few of its best specimens have been imported to the United States.

RESULTS: THE CALF which is pictured in Mr. Page's photograph is weighed every Saturday morning. Last week it gained 29 1/2 pounds. At six months and one week, it weighed exactly 600 pounds. This one is an FFA project.

It's growing so fast it's already outstripped the competition by other breeds. FFA supervisors are establishing a special class for this animal.

Controls on exporting the breed and restrictions as to importing have brought international movement of the Charolais to a virtual standstill. There are only three small herds in Arkansas. This affects price. Last summer a breeder priced two heifer calves at $850 each and a bull of the same age at $900. He had a four-week-old bull calf with a price tag of $3,000. A Wooster stockman who's looking for such a bull was quoted prices of $2,000 to $2,500 by a Missouri breeder of the Charolais strain.

Weber's takes Shiloh, 101-89, faculty wins in cage carnival

Weber's Cafe whipped Shiloh Shell, 101 to 89, with Bill Semenoff bagging 29 points, to cap the Cage carnival Friday night.

In other games, PHS Faculty downed All-Stars, 52 to 49, as Lew Pettit stuffed in 13. Shelby eighth graders whipped Shiloh, 25 to 20. Shiloh sixth graders downed Plymouth, 19 to 6, and Plymouth fifth graders returned the favor on Shiloh, 17 to 6.

Weber's Cafe lagged after the first period Saturday night but rallied to defeat Ohio State Reformatory, 100 to 95. It was the 21st win in 30 games for the tavern five.
 Net gate of $115.50, with advance sale of $98, was recorded by the Booster club for Friday's Cage carnival. The club voted its thanks to supporters who turned out in such number.

It has purchased for use by the physical educational department a set of weight lifting bars and bells, costing about $65.

A goal of $1,500 has been set for the current year, part of which will be used to finance the junior high school football program.

Amusement rides and games furnished by Powelson Amusement Co. will come here June 20 for five days. They'll be rigged at the north end of the baseball field on the high school grounds.

Next meeting of the Boosters will be Mar 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Stop Jere Crosby and Phil Beechey, keep an eye on Glenn Miller, and you can stop Bellevue's Redmen.

That's the word from the up-county city where Coach Burnell (Curly) Hoffman has fashioned a well-balanced outfit that's won 10 and lost five. Crosby, 5-11 and a senior, is the chief of the Redmen in his fourth season on the varsity. In the first 14 games, he scored 244 points, an average of 17.4 a game.

Beachey, a 6-4 senior, is the top rebounder of the squad. Captain of the Redmen, he's their second best scorer with 205 in 13 games, an average of 15.7 a game.

Miller, 5-11 junior guard, is the playmaker. An excellent passer, he's a splendid left-handed shooter. A trick football knee has held him back all season.

Dave Hutchins, another senior, measures nearly 6-5. He's the pivot man. And Coach Hoffman has found another of those freshman wonders in Virgil Bailey, 6-1, an unusual boy who knows where to go and what to do when he gets there.

THE REDMEN LOST Badly to Ashland and to Norwalk (the first time) and to Galion by four before fashioning a six-game winning streak, including a revenge win over Norwalk, before dropping a single-point contest to Sandusky.

The Bellevue outfit scored an average of 56.5 points a game in its first 14 outings and allowed its opponents an average of 52.4 a game.

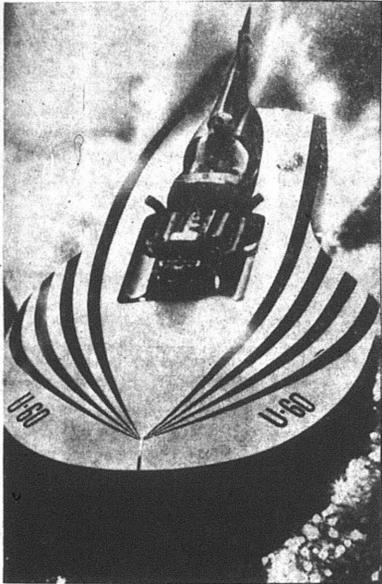

The Litenhouse ratings give the Redmen a 3.2 point advantage over Plymouth. The wonder is that it's more, but the Toledo expert uses game scores and class ratings to fashion his remarkably accurate rating system. Were it otherwise, Bellevue's height would give the Redmen at least an eight-point spot.

The big question Saturday night will be whether Plymouth can come off a two-week layoff to score enough early in the game to scare Bellevue sufficiently to force enough errors to win.

CONTROVERSIAL boat tax law disturbing Lake Erie yachting enthusiasts has no effect on Miss Thriftway, which with Bill Muncey at the helm last week shattered world's unlimited hydroplane mark, hitting speed of 192.001 miles an hour. Old record, by Hawaii Kai in '57, was 187.

LAVENDER FLU

Your grandfather probably knew this cure. Flowers of lavender quilted in a hat were supposed to ward off "stuffed-up" noses and head colds. Pleasant treatment—but certainly not a sure cure. Today, thanks to medical science, we have numerous effective vaccines... against flu, whooping cough and other respiratory diseases... to immunize and protect us from the discomforts of infections. So, why suffer needlessly. Ask your physician about them. Let him prescribe the medication that is most effective for your needs. Then come to us for prescription service.
