

Who pays taxes?

Some of the discussion about the proposed five-mill school levy has turned into vicious untruth.

Otherwise intelligent (or seemingly so) people say, "You rent your house, so you don't pay any taxes!" How ridiculous they are!

Of course the renter pays taxes. Certainly, he doesn't receive a tax bill from the county auditor and he pays no real estate tax to the county treasurer. But he pays rent, and the owner of the house he occupies pays the taxes. Part of that rent is real estate tax, make no mistake about it.

For if the landlord doesn't make enough to pay the real estate tax, the upkeep on the premises and the interest on his investment, he raises the rent.

As well say that a person is a second-class citizen because he attends his church or that, or he digs in a ditch or does manual labor, as say that he rents his house and therefore pays no taxes.

It may well be that some building funds were spent unwisely. We do not recall that any of the proponents of the half million dollar bond issue for construction purposes ever claimed there was waste or needless spending. They were too busy fighting construction of a new building out of town.

But to argue that operational funds should be denied because there was waste with building moneys, if indeed there was waste, is simple foolishness. Moneys raised by sale of bonds cannot by law be spent for operational purposes. It makes no sense to erect a building and then not provide funds to keep it clean, to heat it, to equip it and to staff it.

It's funny, but we've been pretty hard put to find anybody who'll admit he voted against the five-mill levy and allow us to use his name. And we're equally hard put to find anybody who'll say now that he's changed his mind.

Opponents of the five-mill levy, we think, have this duty: to come forward openly and say why it's wrong. This space is available to them, as it always has been, for arguments free of dog-in-the-manger tactics. We invite them. They must be rational and they must be signed.

The whole world knows by now we'll protect their anonymity. Even at the price of a poke in the nose.

JOHN STANSBERRY

Teacher accused of assault

A Plymouth High school Spanish instructor is free on bond of $200 until he is heard tomorrow at 7 p. m. on a charge of assault and battery against a 15-year-old pupil.

John Stansberry, 26, was arrested Sunday on a warrant executed Friday before Mayor William Fazio by John Selick, Shiloh, who alleges that Stansberry wrongfully beat his son, John, in a study hall incident in the school Thursday.

It is further alleged that Stansberry broke young Selick's nose and blackened his eye.

Several pupils of the school said Friday they would not attend classes so long as Stansberry is a member of the faculty but they were promptly persuaded to change their attitude.

Young Selick was in a study hall, according to reports, when Stansberry ordered him to cease misbehaving. Selick's response or lack thereof and Stansberry's reaction thereto are what caused the ruckus.

Rep. Mosher given GOP endorsement, to seek reelection

Assured of the continuing support of the GOP central committee of the 13th district, Rep. Charles A. Mosher of Oberlin will be a candidate for election to a second term in the congress.

Formerly a state senator, Mosher succeeded A. D. Baumhart, Jr., Vermilion, as 13th district Congressman after defeating J. William McCray, Elyria attorney, in a hot fight.

Identity of Mosher's opponent in the general election next year is not yet known. Mosher is wary of any public assumption that he will be the GOP standard bearer. "It's not a closed thing," he says, "the fact that I have the endorsement of the central committee doesn't mean I can't be opposed in the primary by one or more candidates."

J. Grant Keys, Elyria, former state safety director, has been suggested as a probable Democratic opponent for Mosher.

School board issues back-levy statement

Plymouth Board of Education issued this signed statement Monday:

"Because we believe that you want the best for your children, the Board of Education asks your support for the five-mill levy. Don't vote on rumors, learn the facts!"

It is signed by David Cook, president; Donald P. Markley, vice-president; Mrs. Millie Christian, Judson A. Morrison and C. David Rish.

Sir:

In reference to the school levy, which will be voted on again Dec. 12, being a taxpayer myself, I realize the tax obligation is now a little heavy. I have never seen taxes go down but I have seen villages gain industry to help alleviate or spread the tax burden. I have noticed with my past efforts in trying to locate an industry for Plymouth that the first thing a company wants to know is the calibre of the school which their children will have to attend.

As is often the case when an industry expands or moves, some members of the company must re-locate. They are very hesitant to move to a locality with a poor or mediocre school system.

It is a known fact, also, that unless a child has a well-rounded education, it is impossible for that person to obtain a job in any industry.

If the past election was a vote of lack of confidence, then I think the individuals should approach the proper authorities. But let us not move back 10 years to save five mills.

Yours truly, Hugh Washburn

Hostler thinks defensive play 'good'; season opens Tuesday

Coach Ron Hostler makes his maiden outing with a Plymouth cage squad at Margaretta Saturday night in a unique six-school basketball preview.

The Big Red will play 16 minutes against Margaretta in the windup of a three-match preview which will also see Lakeside play Sandusky St. Mary's and Fremont St. Joseph meet Vermilion.

Hostler has made his final cut from the 40-man squad and has settled on 12 players to wear the varsity livery. One of them is a senior and one a freshman. There are three sophomores and seven juniors.

THE SQUAD INCLUDES Dave Myers, whose eligibility was to be ruled upon Tuesday by W. H. McConnell of the Ohio State High School Athletic association. If the ruling is unfavorable, Myers will be out for the first nine games.

Others are Melvin Hughes, senior; Jim Hamman, Roger

The starting berths seem to be in the hands of Jimmy Hamman, Van Loo, Fletcher, Hughes and Barnard right now, unless Myers becomes eligible.

"We've got good spirit and lots of determination," the rookies coach said Monday, "and our defense has done very well so far. We held Norwalk to only 46 points in four quarters, although they about doubled our score. If our offense goes well, we'll win quite a few ball games. But if we make a lot of mistakes, we're going to have a tough winter."

THE BIG RED HAD WON three scrimmages as of Monday — with Hayesville, Rugles-Troy and Savannah — and lost only one, to powerful Norwalk. Plymouth met Berlin Heights in a scrimmage Tuesday.

The opener at Buckeye Central in New Washington Tuesday figures to be a toss-up. Buckeye was beaten by Union by a handful and, in Hostler's view, shouldn't have lost.

Without Myers, the Big Red is apt to be weak on rebounding, although Fletcher comforted himself well against Norwalk, which has "tremendous height", says Hostler.

Cheerleaders for the season are Barbara Barnhouse, Natalie Faust, Nancy MacMichael and Marianne Akers, varsity; Patricia Hughes, Diane Ruckman, Marsha Russell and Judith Lewis, reserve; Diane Kruger and Susan Shaver, alternates.

Old Timer fearful of hex, favors 'Jints'

They lay in on the line at Cleveland Sunday.

The Browns meet the Giants in what could mean the championship for the Forest City club if it wins. A victory by Plum, Brown, Mitchell & Co. will doubtless give Paul Brown's outfit the required push to capture the eastern division title even with another loss at New York Dec. 17.

Because the Giants must meet Green Bay, Philadelphia and Cleveland in their remaining contests. Chances are that another defeat is in store. They can't afford to be beaten at Cleveland Sunday.

Despite the loss of two key defensive backs and the wheelhorse of the offensive line, Jack Stroud, New York walked to down Pittsburgh last week. This came about after Don Chandler, the stellar Giant punter, fumbled the snap from center and lost possession on the New York 15. The Steelers moved quickly to score.

But now the Giant offense is on the move. Y. A. Tittle, the balding ex-San Francisco maestro, is running the club. In three games, the Mastodons of Yankee Stadium have rolled up 133 points, a fantastic performance in any league.

The guess here is that Sunday's struggle will be close. On form, a man ought to pick New York. But you never can tell.

OHIOANS OUGHT TO have an interest in a game to be played in Los Angeles today. Bowling Green will meet Fresno State in a benefit contest for the families of California Polytechnic players who died at Toledo airport after last season's defeat at Bowling Green.

The Falcons are big-time now. They're considered among the major colleges of the country by the NCAA. To rise to the top in that competition is to make a mark that few succeed in achieving.

Ohio State has such a hold upon football in the Buckeye State that Bowling Green and Ohio university and Miami, which are also major schools now — will be hard put to get a share of the publicity. Now that the Falcons will get a new stadium, count on the pressure to be applied where it'll do the most good so that Ohio State agrees to play Bowling Green on a home-and-home basis. At first, the Bucks may be compelled to schedule the Falcons in the season's opener. But give the BeeGee alumni time — they'll force the issue sooner or later.

This wonderland of miracle products all made with Natural Gas!

A suitcase made from natural gas? A dress? A man's suit? Fantastic—but true. Thousands of familiar items we use today are made using invisible natural gas as a chemical raw material. Just as the baker uses sugar and flour as basic ingredients of a cake, chemists use the ingredient chemicals of natural gas to help create modern wonder products. Natural gas is a "building block" in the chemical composition of nearly the entire list of things we know as "synthetic"—versatile plastics, like vinyl and polyethylene, long-lasting materials like Orion, Nylon, and Dynel, "miracle" drugs and vitamin pills, modern cleaning detergents and solvents. This is the field of petrochemistry—one of America's fastest growing industries—where natural gas is taken apart so that manufacturers can put together a wonderland of modern miracle products for you.

Janet Chapman weds Gordon McKenzie

Miss Janet I. Chapman became the bride of Gordon W. McKenzie before the altar of the new Haven Methodist church Nov. 12 at 2:30 p. m.

The Rev. Eldor Kollar read the vows in a setting of bronze and gold chrysantheums.

Given in marriage by her brother, William, the bride was attired in a gown designed by Alfred Angelo of hand-clipped rose point lace over satin. It featured a fitted lace bodice fashioned with Sabrina neckline. Aurora borealis sequins and pearls featured the neckline. The long, tapered sleeves ended in points at the wrists. The bouffant skirt of floor length was fashioned of nylon tiers edged with wide scalloped rose point lace. On her head she wore a wedding cake crown of baby pearls and aurora borealis sequins, each point of the crown highlighted by a small pearl tear drop. From it fell an elbow-length veil of Illusion.

She carried a white orchid with streamers of lilies-of-the-valley atop a white Bible. She wore a double strand of pearls and button pearl earrings.

rings and carried a white handkerchief that belonged to her maternal grandmother.

MRS. RUSSELL FICHEL—man, the bride's cousin, was matron of honor, in emerald green cut in street length with fitted bodice and full skirt. An emerald green sash of satin, tied with a green velvet bow from which fell green velvet streamers to the skirt line, marked the back. She carried bronze and gold chrysantheums and wore a white gold cross, gift of the bride.

Richard McKenzie attended his brother as best man. Robert Gorham and Duane Slesman ushered.

Mrs. Smith watched from the front pew in beige lace set off with brown accessories. Mrs. McKenzie wore blue crepe with black accessories. Both wore identical chrysantheums and gold chrysantheums.

Daughter of Mrs. Frank V. Smith and the late Henry Chapman, Plymouth route 1, the bride is a graduate of New Haven High school. Mr. McKenzie is the son of Mrs. W. A. McKenzie and the late Mr. McKenzie, New Haven.

A reception in the church rooms followed the ceremony. The McKenzies are now living in New Haven.
