

Satisfaction

Whether it was the beastly weather, which made driving risky if not unsafe, or the fear of another horrendous fire, it is nevertheless true that many shoppers did their buying at home this year.

Merchants report that Christmas shopping took a sharp upward turn about the middle of December and some say the past Christmas season was their best in many years.

Apparently shoppers were satisfied. We do not see long lines of customers filing into business houses demanding refunds or exchanges.

It comes as no surprise to us that satisfaction can be obtained by dealing with the home town merchant, satisfaction as to quality, quantity, suitability of purpose and price. Advertisers in these and other pages have laid that satisfaction on the line throughout the year.

Why it should not have been recognized and acted upon before the final two weeks of the year is a mystery to us, one we shall be trying to solve for a long time.

We have said often, and we shall continue to say, that home town merchants are more often than not able to meet the competition of the big city market as to quality, quantity and price if the consumer will assess against his cost of doing business in the big city the reasonable cost of his time and transportation.

Pressures

We have said before that the village council showed poor judgment in changing hoses in midstream.

To choose a new system of sewage treatment was well within the council's powers. To have done so without a thorough investigation of its feasibility beforehand was bad judgment. To urge the electorate to support the bond issue on such flimsy data was most unwise. We said so then and we say so now.

Whether the change to the oxidation lagoon system was justified is something we will never know. So much time and expense have elapsed that a Philadelphia lawyer and a government economist could figure out whether the substitute system is in fact cheaper. It may still be installed, although enthusiasm for it is waning.

What concerns us now is the position in which the council finds itself. Good judgment or bad judgment, it is a fact that the council was acting in good faith when it plumped for the oxidation lagoon system. Much of that good faith derived from representations by pressure groups which, for several reasons, many of them sound, believed the oxidation lagoon system would be better in the long run.

How unfortunate it is that now the village council must stand alone to be buffeted about for its judgment! The pressure groups that were so sure the council ought to act as they insisted don't come forward to support the council in its darkening hour.

This is the sorry situation when any legislative body knuckles under to a pressure group. When the seeds thus sown produce joyous fruit, those who applied the pressure are quick to say, "I told you so!" They take the credit and leave none for the legislators.

But when those same seeds grow into unhappy produce, none of those who applied the pressure comes forward to say, "I share some of the responsibility."

The milk has been spilled. There is no sense in crying about it. Nevertheless, the council must seek sound advice and proceed with reasonable speed to install a sewage collection and treatment system that will satisfy the state and the citizens of the village.

Shiloh council gives approval to assessments

Appeals against assessments by 10 householders were turned down by Shiloh's village council Thursday.

Six property owners received amended assessments, based on their appeals.

Appeals filed by Bonnie and Everett Fry, Harold E. Daup, Nathan D. Bailey, Ina and Cecilia Brumbach, Robert Bushey, Alvin H. Garrett, Mrs. Charles O. Butner, Mrs. Maud B. Ferrell, Mrs. Eileen Grace Miller and Voisard, Inc., were turned down.

They and other property owners in the village will pay $2.25 per front foot in assessment for the sanitary sewer.

APPEALS BY GLENN Swanger, Mrs. Gardy Dickerson, George J. Harrington, Harvey J. Yost and Joel Spencer were allowed. Swanger claimed his assessment on 50 feet of frontage was erroneous because he owns only 37 feet. Mrs. Zona Miller's assessment was raised from 35 to 50 feet. The Dickerson property assessment was reduced from 264 to 198 feet, the Harrington parcel from 164 to 54, the Yost property from 153.49 to none, because there is none abutting the street, and the Spencer parcel from 1,044.5 to 944.5 feet.

Bonds will be issued to fund the amounts of assessments not paid in cash in 30 days. Their face value cannot now be determined. Property owners may pay the whole assessment in cash within a month or may elect to have it placed on the tax duplicate.

OPTIMUM VALUE OF the special assessment bonds is $67,968. The amount to be sold will be that value less what is paid in cash on these assessments. The village will also sell $14,000 in general obligation bonds to complete the financing.

Total cost of the project: $265,622.18, of which $28,633.33 was in federal grant, $155,000 in mortgage revenue bonds to be retired from sewer service charges and the balance to be financed from the forthcoming sale of bonds.

OFGasCo agrees to threeyear pact for 234 Shilohans

A compromise three-year contract, calling for an average increase of 8.5 per cent, was negotiated Dec. 26 by Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and Shiloh's village council.

The agreement brought an end to a controversy which reached the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, in the form of a request by the village to verify the average net return of the supplier. The gas company offered to settle at the rate level proposed by the council if a two-year contract were approved. The council held out for four years.

The 234 users of natural gas in Shiloh will now pay 30 cents per 100 cu. ft. for the first 1,000 consumed, 6.7 cents per 100 cu. ft. for the next 74,000 cu. ft. consumed and 7.25 cents per 100 cu. ft. for consumption over 75,000 cu. ft.

The minimum is $3 a month. A fuel cost clause is inserted in the agreement. Its gist is that when the base price of bulk gas diminishes, rates in the village will diminish. Four dates annually are set for this adjustment, whether up or down.

If a special tax on the company should be legislated by the village, the township, county, state or federal government, its value will be passed on to the consumer, the contract says.

The Robert McKown home, which shared the first prize with the H. Paul Bakers, was outlined in colored lights and a Christmas star was placed high up on the television antenna.

Judges were the Harold Slessmans and the Robert Baxters, Gay Gardeners Garden club, New Haven.

Nineteen sixty-two was the year of orbit.

Which is a good way to describe what happened to the cost of government and education in Plymouth during the past 12 months.

After two defeats of a five-million operating levy, the board of education trimmed its sails and asked for 3.2 mills on the general election ballot.

It won approval, a tribute to the earnest salesmanship of the new executive head of the schools, C. Todd Strohmenger, who came here from Hillsdale district near Steubenville to succeed Maynard J. Coon on Aug. 1. Coon resigned after 11 years to become assistant executive head of Madison schools.

Strohmenger warned the public, nevertheless, that approval of the additional operating levy is by no means the last the public will hear about costs of education.

After the fresh levy was approved, he began a vigorous effort to improve the level of education in the schools by urging the school board to approve policy directives so that administrators can do their jobs.

Complications at a ten-dent on upon compliance with a 16-year-old directive to cease polluting the Huron river resulted in the whole plan exploding high enough, by year's end, to have entered orbit.

Efforts to obtain a waiver of the rule have so far been unsuccessful.

Assuming a sanitary sewage system gets under way here in 1963, each household can expect a one-time charge of $250, on the average, to connect to the sewer lateral (an operation he will be compelled to contract for, and pay for, himself, without any village assistance) and an increase of water rates of probably 125 per cent to pay for the sewer system, now estimated at about $650,000.

THIS WORD, TOGETHER with announcement by the Richland and Huron county auditors of tax rates in their counties for 1963, just about put householders into orbit.

Plymouthites living in Richland county pay the highest real estate tax collected in any political subdivision thereof and Plymouthites living in Huron county are within 11 cents per $1,000 valuation of paying the highest tax collected in any subdivision of Huron county.

Employment within the village remained stable. Business turnover lagged during the summer months and spurred with the advent of winter so that some businesses completed their best years in a long time. Only two business places stand vacant. Each was vacated by a going business that moved to newer, more modern quarters, but not in 1962.

The Fate-Root-Health Co., the only industry here, paid its annual bonus of 2.5 per cent to hourly employees and announced a company-paid pension plan takes effect early in 1963.

Its largest single contract, $1 million from the Army for heavy locomotives for a secret project, necessitated an expansion of the assembly room and this work is, in course, at an estimated cost of $100,000.

PHS graduate says curriculum is weak

Sir:

I am a graduate of Plymouth High school and am enrolled in a university. I would like to inform the people of Plymouth and Shiloh about the inadequacy of our high school.

In my opinion, the sciences taught here are fairly sufficient as a foundation needed for higher education. However, the school is greatly inadequate in its mathematics and English programs.

The mathematics now taught by Plymouth High school in four years is taught in other schools in a year less, so that college level mathematics follows in the final year.

English taught at Plymouth High school is in a deplorable state. In the first place, it should be mandatory for four years rather than three. Even if a student is destined to work in a factory, he needs a good command of his native language to be a success.

In high school English, more emphasis should be placed upon explication and philosophical writing and reading rather than simply upon creative writing.

During the senior year, a good program in grammar is required. When a student enrolls in a university, he is expected to know English thoroughly, and if he doesn't, he is indeed in trouble.

All the tests taken and all papers written in every subject in college depend largely upon ability to manipulate the English language reasonably well. Therefore, a good high school foundation in the subject is essential for success in later life. This brings us once again to the need for an advanced English and mathematics program in Plymouth High school.

Big Red edges Buckeye Central in return bout, 58-57

Plymouth's Big Red avenged its only defeat of the season with a one-point come-from-behind victory over Buckeye Central here Friday night.

The 58 to 57 win was a slight but welcome reversal of the first contest on the Bucks' floor, which they won, 58 to 56.

It was a rough contest, cleverly managed by the referee and umpire. Plymouth shot only 22 of 38 tries from the penalty stripe and showed the need for more drill. Its other shooting was no great shakes, either. The Bucks outshot Plymouth from the floor, 21 to 18.

ALLEN ARNOLD CANned two free throws with less than 40 seconds left to win this one. The visitors farged from behind with four minutes on the clock as Bob Crall converted a stolen ball.

This made it 51 to 50, a lead which the Bucks enhanced a few moments later with four free throws.

At 55 to 50, Bob Young dropped a free throw and cut the lead to four. Myers bagged two more penalty shots and Chuck Kaylor got one. The lead was now 55 to 54. Earl Hess swished a set shot from quarter court and the Big Red was back in the van.

Terry Laughbaum bagged a push shot from the corner to set the stage for Arnold's two free throws. He was, up to this point, singularly unsuccessful with penalty shots. But this pair went true.

Buckeye Central called time with three seconds on the clock after 15 seconds of shooting - rendering in-and-out of court by the visitors. The inbounds play failed by an inch or two and Plymouth had it.

IN ONLY ONE PERIOD, the second, was Plymouth superior to the Bucks, who showed PPA's of 1.06, .93, .73 and 1.00. Plymouth's figures were .93, .94, .52 and 1.00. The Big Red was clearly the superior team in the third quarter and with better shooting would have broken the game wide open. Jimmy Hamman fouled out two seconds before the end of the third quarter and the Plymouth lead began to drain away.

Had not the three biggest guns of the Bucks fouled out midway in the final period, there is no telling by what margin the Bucks would have won.

Faculty slips past Union in carnival

Bill Flaherty fed a short pass to Ron Hostler for a last-minute basket as Plymouth Faculty defeated Union Faculty, 59 to 57, in the climax of the annual Boosters club Christmas Cage Carnival Dec. 26. Flaherty had tied the match with two free throws a moment earlier.

Plymouth teachers won at the foul line, being outshot from the floor, 26 to 24. The winners bagged 11 free throws, the losers only five.

Teams wearing Plymouth uniforms (among junior high schoolers, the divisions were arbitrary) won three of the five preliminary games before a house of about 250.

Pirates scuttled, Butler merged, three games 'lost'

Black River High school has dropped football.

Butler High school will be merged with Bellville High in 1963 and the two schools will play the Bellville schedule as one team.

Jeromesville High school has to cancel its contract to play Plymouth's Big Red.

This leaves three vacancies on the Big Red slate for 1963.

Athletic Director William Flaherty will seek to find replacements. The Black River game was to have been the season's opener. Butler was to have hosted the Big Red on Oct. 6.

Jack Purtell, Black River coach and history teacher, has resigned and taken industrial employment. The Black River board of education voted to drop football and driver's training and make other cuts after it became clear a deficit of nearly $10,000 would result from operations in 1962-63.

The older a man gets, the more he lives on memories.

Something there is about the modern breed that, when considered through the eye of one dropped a generation earlier, probably on his head, seems inferior to what prevailed in a bygone day.

Mature reflection must convince him otherwise, but who among us will allow the substitution of mature reflection for the pure, undammed stream of nostalgia that makes us all think we are young again?

The word that Stanley Dancer is the harness horseman of the year, largely because he won a fabulous bundle with a trotter named Su Mac Lad, releases just such a flood.

The track on which he got his start, with $28, a new bride and a borrowed gelding, has been the nearest comparison to a uranium deposit that you could imagine. The tremendous population boom that occurred in rural New Jersey during and after World War II made a bustling county seat and thriving residential and light industrial center of Freehold, what had been up to then a sleepy little country town with a fairgrounds track.

THAT TRACK WAS FOR the most part the child of a contractor named Joe Carr, who "played around" with standard breeds. He had a few in his string, and some of them were good ones.

By far from the best, but our favorite, was a roan gelding named Sam J. Napoleon, a pacer who simply would not turn to the right.

In the days of which we speak, Ohio's resourceful Steve Phillips, the Xenian who invented the starting gate, earned his keep by directing the start of a harness race - from microphone or megaphone. The drivers steered the wrong way of the track to the head of the stretch, wheeled their mounts and stepped down in front of the judges' stand, more or less in line. If they weren't in line, Steve would ring the old dinner bell. If they were in line, he'd yell "Go" and go they would.

Old-timers will tell you that many a race was won at the score, or start. When you "scored" your horse, you brought him down on stride in front of the judges' stand. Drivers used to prepare their entries to act up or not act up at the start to obtain advantage over others.

The invention of the starting gate put a stop to this, and to such showmanship as the late, but phony, Tom Berry, who delighted in having such as Captain Hanover climb the fence at the head of the stretch, scaring hell out of the customers and something less than that out of his competitors so he could sneak down inside and get off to a length lead.

BUT SAM J. NAPOLEON made his oats in the days of scoring. And he simply would not turn to the right. So his driver either had to score him from the inside rail or he did not get scored.

On an afternoon of which memory is strong, clear and a little proud, Sam J. was going for mucho bananas in a classified pace. He came out for the final heat with a chance to get almost all of them. But he wouldn't turn to the right.

So when he came back up the stretch for another score, and Mr. Phillips intoned, "Mr. Bull, bring that gelding down here on stride and in place or it will cost you $50," old Joe Carr looked about him and spied the leg of a kitchen table.

It was painted green, as we remember, and he thrust it into our hot young hand and said, "Son, belt the b-----d right side the ear - he'll turn or die!"

Sam J. Napoleon pranced to the opening in the rail and resisted the rein of old Billy Bull. That's when the O. T. smacked him beside the left eye. He turned and like a shot please see page 8 strode down the stretch, exactly on stride, exactly in place, and fought off a spirited drive to the wire for first money.

Old Timer and the table leg

The newspapers the next day recounted how "a roan gelding won the feature event at Freshhold yesterday with five legs and a small boy." The five legs, of course, added up to four equine and one from an old table. The small boy was this correspondent.

But this is a far cry from

Stanley Dancer, who shows a remarkable ability to get everything from a standard bred animal and to show a profit by doing so. He got his start where Sam J. Napoleon won on five legs.
