Clyde, an' there it
hangs - in Shiloh'

Clarence Bly was "judge" of the Kangaroo court in Shiloh Saturday.

Keystone Cops were Dale Reynolds, Albert Ferrrell, Glenn Strong and Dale Owens. Fern Pittenger was secretary.

Judge Bly remarked there would be a committal service before the regular festivities began.

Immediately several members of the Brothers of the Brush tearfully bore a black casket up Main street and solemnly placed it on the platform. The casket contained poor Mr. Ray-Zor, who died from neglect. The eulogy was given by W. W. Pittenger, appropriate dressed for the occasion. The casket containing Mr. Ray-Zor, handle and all, was placed in its last resting place near the platform.

After the committal four desperados — Harmon Sloan, Richard Pennell, Alvin Garrett and Howard Cuppy, all bearded — were promptly placed in jail. Suddenly a shot was fired and all broke jail and scattered, one of them wearing only red flannels.

Crimes alleged against accused were no shaving permit, no necktie, no beard, shoes not shined, too ugly, stomach too large, refusing to accept subpoena, drinking red-eye and no name. Penalties were purchasing neckties, placed in stockade, wailed to headquarters and back 10 times, run out of town, go to jail, buying garter, dunked in water tank.

Those arrested from Rome were Orville Blankenship, Kelly Blankenship, and Troy Blankenship; from Fostoria, Mr. and Mrs. William Noble, from Shelby, Freeman Whatman, Steward Fackler, John Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Rollen Chapman, from Ganges, Harold Bogner; from Lodi, Clyde Caldwell; in or near Shiloh, Hallie Kaylor, Harry Seaman, Mike Garrett, A. W. Firestone, David Dick, Harley Brinson and Jean Huston.

Harold Bogner was charged with being too slim and overweight and was sentenced to be dunked in the water tank and then scrubbed with a brush by Jean Huston.

GILL FUNGUS GOT AT FISH —

Anglers unlucky? there's a reason!

Dying fish collected during the recent fish kill in Lake Erie were found to have varying degrees of gill disintegration, Ohio Division of Wildlife says.

While the cause of the fish die-off which occurred early in July may never be known for certain, the apparent cause is a parasite or infection which primarily attacked the gills.

Paul Womer, biologist, said, the lake-wide fish mortality seemed to occur during a period of calm weather that lasted several days. Dead fish were noted here and there in the lake, but no one became alarmed. Then three days of northerly winds swept the fish onto the Ohio shore. This pile-up of dead fish made the kill seem larger than it was.

An investigation revealed yellow perch made up 90 to 95 per cent of the fish kill. All age groups of perch were involved, but 60 to 70 per cent

Tom Young wins state cycle award

Fifteen-year-old Thomas E. Young, a high school junior-to-be isn't old enough to drive yet.

When he is, come Dec. 19, odds are he'll be a good one.

At least, that's what Plymouth Junior Chamber of Commerce thinks.

Winner of its local bicycle rodeo, emphasizing driving skills, July 28, Thomas went to Fremont July 31 and licked the field in his age group to become top cyclist in Ohio in that category.

"The competition in Fremont was a lot tougher than it was here," he says, "and I had to work to make it. I didn't win the first trophy but I think I was lucky to get what I did."

What he got was a handsome trophy measuring 12 inches in height, a mounted bicyclist on top, with gold bicycle.

It goes on the shelf of honor at the Duane Young household, 93 Mulberry street, where the littlest Young boy of them all — has two brothers, one older and one younger, are taller and heavier — shines for all to see — it isn't the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog!

Wild hogs

Many years ago a drove of wild hogs lived in a big bend of the Ocmulgee river in Georgia. They had survived food shortages, fires, freezes, hunters and droughts. Hunters bragged when their dogs fought these wild porkers and returned alive. Finally a one-gallused (galluses are suspenders) character came by the country store in the river road and asked how he could find the wild hogs. All he had was a one-horse wagon, an axe, lantern, some corn, and a single-barrel shotgun.

Several weeks later the hog-hunting stranger came back and asked for help to bring out the critters — said he had 'em all in a pen in the swamp.

People came from miles around to see the wild hogs which the natives knew couldn't be captured. "It wasn't hard," drawled the one gallused stranger. "First I put out some corn but for three weeks they wouldn't eat it. Then some of the younger 'uns grabbed an ear here and there and run to the underbrush. Soon they were all eatin' it because if one didn't, he knew the others would."

"Right then I started buildin' a pen around the corn — a little more fence each day. 'Fore long I noticed they was all waitin' for me to bring the corn and had stopped grubbin' for acorns and roots. Right away I set in the trap door."

"Well, they sure raised Cain when they seen I had 'em, but I can pen any animal on the face of the earth if I can get him to depend on me for a free handout!"

The next time some tinhorn comes forward with an idea that government, whether federal, state, county or local, ought to get bigger and do more for us, we're going to recite this little story about the one-gallused stranger and the wild hogs of the Ocmulgee.

Unemployment

The label "unemployment" is applied to so many different situations that the statistics create misleading pictures of the extent of joblessness and of the human hardship involved. This impression is borne out by students of the employment.

The bulk of current unemployment is not in the mainstream of the nation's economic life. There are areas of real hardship, of played-out industries, and persistent unemployment of family breadwinners. But these are a small, hard-core portion of what is classified as unemployment.

That classification includes also persons who could get off the unemployment compensation rolls by taking jobs that pay a little less than they care to work for; men in construction or other seasonal occupations who make a good annual income; women who "like being off a few weeks for a vacation"; husbands and wives who take turns working an collecting idleness pay.

So, if the term "employment" stirs pictures of the kind of mass misery that it represented in the depression of the 1930's, that is a misnomer — not in all cases but in most. For Samuel Lubell found a wheat farmer drawing unemployment compensation while his son worked the farm, various jobless workers doing extra jobs on the side which they did not report, and newly retired workers collecting 26 weeks' unemployment pay before going on social security.

These and other items call for some distinction between various types of joblessness — if they can be classified into types — and for some discernment in basing public policy on "unemployment" figures.

Miss Faust bride of Dayton teacher

Vaughn D'Lee Faust became the bride of Elwood Combs before the altar of First Presbyterian church Saturday afternoon.

The Rev. Robert Mace, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony in a setting of white gladioli and palms arranged on either side of the chancel, which was lighted by white candelabra. The family pews were marked with small flowers inset in white satin bows.

John Arndt, a former colleague of the bridegroom, played several selections at the organ.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride was attired in a gown of white silk organza over taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice and yoke applied with dainty self-fabric flowers. Short sleeves were complimented by bracelet-length gloves of white kid.

The bouffant skirt was of floor length. Its carriage back flowed into a wide chapel-length train accented with appliques and flat bow at the back of the waist. A veil of imported bridal illusion fell from a pearl-and-crystal pill-box headpiece.

She carried a white Bible, atop which was a bouquet of white delphiniums and Stephanotis and ivy.

HER ELDEST SISTER, Cheryl, was maid of honor, in a gown of white lace aquamarine taffeta, styled with fitted bodice. Over this she wore a short, loose-fitting lace jacket fashioned with Sabrina neckline. The modified bell skirt was of cocktail length. A shoulder-length veil fell from a plateau headpiece of dainty flowers with taffeta bustle photo by devito, Shelby trim She carried a colonial bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and white carnations tied with aquamarine streamers.

The bride's mother chose a peacock blue sleeveless sheath creation with matching feather hat.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a beige-and-black dress of a striped design, fashioned along straight lines. She wore a small matching beige hat with a flower crown and short veiling.

Cletis Combs, Trotwood, his brother, was best man. Venice Combs, Xenia, another brother, and Earl Lynch, Shelby route 3, substituting for his younger brother, Raymond, under treatment for injuries received in a traffic collision, ushered.

A reception for 75 took place in the church basement.

Natalie Faust, the bride's second sister, and Mrs. Myrtle Childers' Columbus, the bridegroom's sister, served the wedding cake. Maryellen Briggs, a girlhood chum of the bride, poured coffee. Shari Emsel, friend of the bride, served punch. Montelle L. Faust, the bride's youngest sister, registered guests in the bridal book.

Eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Darrell B. Faust, the bride is a graduate of Plymouth High school and of Flower hospital school of nursing, Toledo.

THE BRIDEGROOM, THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Combs, Larklane, Ky., is a graduate of Morehead State college, Morehead, Ky. He is a teacher in Mad River Township schools near Dayton, having served on the teaching staff of Plymouth school district earlier.

After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C., and Williamsburg Va., the couple will live in Dayton, where she will be engaged in public health work.

PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT? Only within the sphere of mulebriety. Ponder Greek folklore to explain why amazons of old would say "Never again!!!" To be one would certainly involve mastectomy, unthinkable just to please the ever-existent Mars. A woman would be so unsymmetrical.

DR. PASTEUR: Uncle Bill, many in the City of Roses were thinking of me when they counteracted the subterfuge of the ever-present car-petbagger.

ALESSANDRO VOLTA: You are so right, Unc. Only a small amount of voltage needed to furnish illumination when applied by those who know how.

MUNICIPAL GRANT: Don't be a rabbit and let that proverbial turtle bypass you. Complacency may indeed have a soporific effect. Remember, no somnambulation is permissible. A certain goal for all should be realized, or maybe make hay while the sun shines. Common sense should be the answer. Action and not some controversial confab which is inimical to the matter at hand.

POLTERGEIST: Unc, perhaps that ghostly graham cracker cannon at Municipal park explains why all friendly ghosts are escaping from Civil war accounts in newspapers for over a year. Perhaps they are egging on another holocaust greater than ever. Perhaps they erred slightly in calling it a great war. No right-thinker can agree.

JUDGE AMBI: Those who may be summoned may be numerous enough to overflow a certain drive-in theater where a voice may be heard. No amplifiers needed. Critics welcome after the third reading.

TOASTMASTER: Ladies and gentlemen of a year-long juy, Unc should not be considered the piece de resistance in any sense. Only maybe aware of an aura of mystery ever floating over the City of Roses. NEVER BEAR FALSE WITNESS.

PML Stars down Mansfield in tourney as Clark's bat backs tight pitching

All-Stars representing Plymouth Midget league downed Mansfield, 7 to 2, at Crestline Saturday and will play tomorrow at 6 p. m. at Crestline-Leesville game Monday night.

Larry Kamman pitched a strong game for Plymouth, fanning seven. Jim Clark homered over the right field fence, a tremendous blast that carried 250 feet on the fly, and Lee Fenner belted a pair of heat and the hardboots allowed that was curtains for the filly. She seemed 'peaked, a little tired, the heat's got her, she's not so 'pear' as she was."

THERE WAS AT LEAST one dissenting opinion. "Not a dam' bit of it," he said, the big guy said, puffing on his stogie, "don't sell that little mare a short. Wait'll the sorrel gets to the head of heartbreak alley."

It was exactly so. White shot the filly to the head end at the half pole and she trotted supremely to that turn in the fence which has, at Goshen, at least, for so long been called "heartbreak alley, where you find out which is Hardly Able Stable and who's the boss of the Needmore Barn."

It almost succeeded. But Brown Berry broke stride and White's filly never was headed down the stretch to the wire.

THERE WERE WORDS between White and Egan after they brought 'em back, and White said, "Any time, Fred, for munneh, mah-bles or chawlit."

At this point Egan found himself in fourth spot, a length off the pace, and pocketed slightly by a black colt and a bay gelding.

Fred "lifted" his colt, hoping to slide him around the black. It is a maneuver that, even when executed by a sound and experienced reinsman, is risky at best. It involves the raising of the reins with one terrible pull while the horse's off fore foot is off the ground and a sliding of the horse, bike and driver around in the obstructing entry, using momentum to help the horse.

How a man wishes he could be there at the Hambletonian! Sure, the pacers go faster, and the Little Brown Jug is a lulu. But once a trotting man, always to be out for exercise, let alone in near-record time.

But once a trotting man, always to be out for exercise, let alone in near-record time. Sure, the pacers go faster, and the Little Brown Jug is a lulu. But once a trotting man, always to be out for exercise, let alone in near-record time.

Old Timer wants to see Hambletonian

In another week the hardboots will be gathering at DuQuoin Fairgrounds, in central Illinois, for the annual renewal of the Hambletonian, king of all the harness races because it is older, has more prestige and is more racing-for-the-sport-of-it than any event the harness moguls offer during the year. They don't allow any betting at DuQuoin.

A man wishes he could be there to see it. Not so much that DuQuoin is any marvel, although it is a perfectly attractive little community in a setting of agricultural plenty. Rather, more to compare the modern-day Hambletonian with what it was a generation and more ago, when harness racing's appeal was to the dedicated enthusiasts rather than to the "improver-of-the-breed" who has two bucks riding on an entry.

In August of 1933, the Lyle brothers of Plainfield, N. J., had a chestnut colt named Brown Berry, trained and driven by Fred Egan, who was looked upon by investors and the hangers-on at the Calcutta Pool to be the class of the field.

Cagey Ben White, now dead, thought otherwise. He was there with a bay filly called Mary Reynolds, out of a Winston-Salem, N. C., stable owned by a tobacco magnate.

The Calcutta in those days was conducted in a big tent and the auctioneer was a portly type in a white jacket, a wing collar, a black bow tie, with a florid manner. The fellow who bid $5,600 for Brown Berry in the pool was standing close enough that a man could count the grey hairs in his mustache.

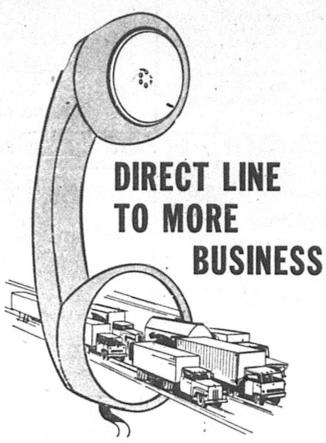

The pool works this way: each entry is "sold" for the high bid. The bid money goes into a common pool or purse. He who has "bought" the winner collects the pool.

CAPTAIN HANOVER, driven by Tom Berry, whom Steve Phillips of Xenia labelled the "biggest squaker in the business," tried to climb the rail at the head of the stretch and the stir excited the hardboots at that spot.

This was before the vehicular starting gate. The horses "scored" down in front.

Egan took the first heat with White third. White had the advantage of scoring nearer the rail in the second go-around, sufficient to steer the filly home by two lengths.

They came out for the third

DeWitt pleads innocent in trial

Charged with unsafe operation by the state highway patrol after he brought with 19-year-old Raymond Lynch in Route 61 early on Aug. 3, Walter DeWitt, 27, 59 Portland street, pleaded not guilty upon arraignment before Shelby Municipal Court Judge William R. Morris Aug. 7.

The case was discontinued until tomorrow, with cash bond raised from $25 to $200.

Laubie property sold by sheriff

Real estate belonging to Fred Laubie, entrusted Shelby by automobile dealer, was knocked down in a sheriff's sale at Mansfield Friday.

Shelby Realty, Inc., bid $17 more than the lawful minimum at which the three parcels could be sold. It paid $30,000 for the properties — a new car dealership building at Mohican street and Whitney avenue — which were appraised at $133,475.

First National Bank of Mansfield, having loaned money to Laubie, sought a judgment against him for the amount due — $80,405 — plus interest at eight per cent. This was obtained in Richland county common pleas court after Laubie defaulted on the loan.
