

'Worst storm ever' paralyzes Plymouth

Worst snow storm in Plymouth's history struck Thursday and paralyzed the village.

It was the fourth major storm of the winter. After four days, most of the village was plowed out. There were no deaths directly attributed to the snow. Two persons were hospitalized, one of them a small child with frostbite.

Failure of Ohio Power Co. circuits at the substation in Birchfield street on Thursday resulted in a power outage for about 40 per cent of the village that lasted until long after dark on Friday. Most of these homes were also without heat, since there was insufficient current to operate the thermostat or heating controls.

When the snowfall had concluded, there were eight and 10-foot drifts across Route 61 south of where it joins Route 98. Route 61 was blocked at the entrance to the sewer lagoons.

Village employees were compelled to shut down the water pumping station when the power failed. While the power was off and the pumps inoperative, two of them froze. Much of the village was without water service until early Sunday morning.

Only three incidents requiring emergency attention developed during the crisis. Glenn Frakes, who lives at 71 Plymouth street, was afflicted with heart seizure after his house temperature became so cold on Friday that he could not breathe well. He was taken to the house of a neighbor and ministered to by the rescue squad, and thereafter taken to Willard Area hospital by the ambulance after the road had been plowed out. By this time the Ohio Power Co. repair crews had arrived from Willard and power was restored late Friday afternoon.

Part of this operation was obstructed by failure of the telephone system. Overloading of the exchange caused a small fire to break out there on Friday about 10 a. m. Fortunately, a General Telephone Co. employee stationed here was in the building and put the fire out with an extinguisher. Repairs were effected and some service was restored but only a few calls could be made during Saturday and Sunday.

A one-year-old child occupying a trailer in Sandusky street was taken from the trailer by an older sister on Thursday, when the winds whipped the snow, because there was fear the trailer would be upset by the wind. The child, Claude Hammond, 3rd, eventually was given emergency treatment by Mrs. James Dorton at her house at West Broadway and Wall street before transport to Willard Area hospital.

The child's mother had gone to the house of the proprietor, Noah Sammons, Jr., to inquire why there was no heat nor water. She was absent about 15 minutes.

A fire in a house at 360 West Broadway during the early morning hours Saturday forced the temporary evacuation of the householder, Robert C. Haas, to the house of a neighbor. Haas is afflicted with emphysema and could not breathe in the smoke-filled house.

Plymouth Locomotive Works, Inc., was hardest hit by the crisis. When its current failed on Thursday, it lost power to operate the compressors, which in turn furnish water cooling for machine tools. These froze, together with the water services running to and from them. It will be a while, say PLW workers, "before we get things back to running again."

A remarkable spirit of cooperation and neighborliness swept through the village as soon as people began to perceive how serious matters were. One village told the Advertiser, "I not only spoke to my neighbor for the first time in almost five years, but I was invited into his house and given something to eat."

Most of the new dwellings in Brooks court are heated by electricity and rely on electric power for cooking. When the power went off, some of the householders converged on others to share their miseries and their supplies. When the power was restored, the demand on the service was so great that it went out again. So when most of the village regained electric current on Friday, Brooks court households did not have any electric service and therefore no heating or cooking.

Businesses got their doors open as soon as they could. Miller's Hardware proprietor William R. Miller said Monday that "yesterday was the first Sunday this store was open since we started business, 53 years."

Plymouth Pharmacy accepted requests for prescriptions throughout the emergency.

Broadway market and Mack's Foodland opened Friday morning and served customers throughout the remainder of the day. Both stores were open on Sunday.

First National Bank of Mansfield departed from custom and with a skeleton staff opened Saturday morning for emergency service.

Filling stations encountered some difficulty in obtaining change on Saturday but when they could not breathe in the smoke-filled house, they served what few motorists could negotiate the snow-filled roads to buy gasoline products.

Mail delivery came here Sunday to relieve shortages. Two does, fully grown, ran east in West high street Sunday about 2 p. m., into the yard of Daniel Thornberry at West High and Plymouth streets, into the yard of A. L. Paddock, 78 Plymouth street, across the street and south of the Frakes house before they disappeared.

A request to the National Guard at Norwalk to furnish water in a tanker was withdrawn on Friday after the village water supply began to flow from Willard with a 1,500-gallon supply.

Wayne E. Strine was admitted to Willard Area hospital for treatment of a back injury received Friday when he fell while evacuating a small baby from Plymouth elementary school to Plymouth United Methodist church.

When the water pumps failed on Thursday, there was no hot water to sustain the heat in the school so occupants were taken to the church. Strine was serving as a volunteer fireman and rescue squadman when the accident occurred.

Russell J. Moser, 71, village policeman and superintendent, fell on ice while shoveling snow at his home, 181 Trux street, Jan. 25 and received a double fracture of the right hip.

He was taken to Mansfield General hospital.

Deputy sheriff stranded in snow

During the height of the storm Thursday morning, Plymouth police received a report that a Richland county sheriff's deputy was stranded in Henry road between Routes 98 and 61.

David Gibson sought to find him, but was unable to see the cruiser and had to return to the village.

Later it was learned the deputy obtained shelter in a nearby home.

A. H. Newmyer succumbs at 75 at Cleveland

A. H. Newmyer, 75, Mills road, Plymouth route 4, died Jan. 25 in Cleveland Clinic hospital. He was in failing health for some time.

A retired farmer, he operated a water supply service for farmers for several years.

He is survived by his wife, Minta, a retired elementary school teacher in Plymouth; two daughters, Lucille, now Mrs. Edwin Pierce, Amherst, and Louise, now Mrs. Robert Glew, New London; a son, Dr. Eldon, a chiropractor in Middleville, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. Ann Schaefer, Cleveland, and Mrs. Jennie Wiers, Celeryville, and five grandchildren.

Public schools closed early Jan. 25 and did not open for the remainder of the week. Roads outside the village were still sufficiently impassable that they did not open until yesterday. Unless the governor by fiat or the General Assembly by action excuses the lost days, pupils will find their school year extended by nine days. Five days allowed have already been used.

A 17-year-old Shiloh boy with appendicitis was taken to Mansfield General hospital by Air National Guardsmen who need 17 hours to negotiate the distance down Howman Street road, where William Faulkner underwent surgery.

A blizzard baby was born to Steve Endicott, a high school football and wrestling athlete, and his wife, who were at the home of her parents, the Dan Jerrells, in Route 13, Kenneth McFarland, chief of the Franklin-Weller Fire department; three snowmovers, Kenneth Lowmber and David and Robert Steiner, who got him there, and Jacqueline Justice, a high school girl who is studying practical nursing, delivered a son, Steven Michael, Thursday at 10:41 p. m.

No mail was delivered in the village Thursday, Friday or Saturday. Copies of the Advertiser mailed on Jan. 25 were delivered Monday. Mail in and out of the village was suspended because of snow drifts and did not resume until Monday, so far as first class mail was concerned. An enormous delivery of third and fourth class mailings, so called "junk" mailings, was distributed to boxholders on Saturday.

Shelby police and other staffed a train at Shelby late Saturday and loaded the engine compartment with milk, bread and other staples to be transported to Shiloh, where the food was distributed to needy families.

American Red Cross disaster training program was completed Jan. 25 in time for the real disaster situation early Thursday.

A Red Cross shelter was opened in Plymouth Elementary school as soon as school personnel could open the door. Mrs. Shelly, principal, and his family were early arrivals because they were without heat at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Caywood were brought to the school to supervise and provide food for the sheltered and volunteers working in and around Plymouth. There were 25 adults and 11 children and young sheltered at the peak of the storm. The fire department provided cots. So did the Red Cross. A generator provided lighting and extra heat. Because there was only partial power to the school, the recycling pump on the gas boiler could not function and the principal and others manually operated and controlled the water supply to the boiler throughout the night. Friday morning the school had been evacuated when the water supply was lost and volunteers again were called into service to move people, belongings, food and cots to Plymouth United Methodist church, which still had electricity and heat. The ambulance service and fire department provided the vehicle to move those in the shelter to the church. Some of

Auditor visits village council

Thomas Ferguson, auditor of the State of Ohio, paid a call on village council Jan. 24.

Mr. Ferguson had been the guest speaker at the monthly community club dinner at the Frontier Inn.

Mayor Elizabeth G. Paddock told the auditor the village had recently been audited by his department and said the examiner "had set the village on the right path, since there had been six different clerks since 1972."

Ferguson asked if the village had found anything to object to in the audit when it met with the examiner for a post-audit conference. The mayor said only she and the clerk had met with him and neither could find anything to object to.

He said it would probably be 90 days before the written report is received by the village (the audit was completed the last week of December).

Councilman G. Thomas Moore asked the auditor if there is a trend of errors common in all audits. Ferguson said no.

That each audit comes up with different faults and only occasionally do his examiners find a slight trend, which his department tries to find the reasons for and to remedy the situation.

The mayor asked what control the state department has over county auditors and recited the fact the village receives its tax money so late that it is necessary to borrow money. She added that other municipalities and school districts in Richland county had complained about this problem.

His answer was that the state legislature should pass regulations requiring county auditors to see that the money arrives promptly. He added that it is sometimes held so the county can obtain more interest on its deposits.

Chief Ferguson arrived, the council engaged in a discussion of the

Richard Stover dies suddenly

Formerly a municipal employee here, Richard S. Stover, 49, Willard route 4, died Jan. 25 in Willard Area hospital of a brief illness.

Born in Willard, he was an electrician by trade. He worked in the electric department here for many years, serving under Thomas F. Baker. He left here to join Ohio Power Co. at Tiffin, his ultimate employer.

He was a veteran of Navy service. He was a member of First United Methodist church at Willard. He is survived by his wife, Mary Jean, three sons, Walter, Plymouth; Richard, Willard; and Kevin, at home in Briarwood Estates trailer park; two daughters, Sandra, now Mrs. Terry Patter, and Brenda, now Mrs. James Ousley, both of Plymouth; his mother, Mrs. Helen Seiple; two brothers, Robert Stover, Fremont, and Glenn Seiple, Willard; and two sisters, Corwin Leonard, Plymouth; The Rev. Eugene Priest, his pastor, conducted services at Willard Friday at 2 p. M. Burial was in Maple Grove cemetery, New Haven township.

three items David Howard had prepared for the special meeting, namely, "To discuss situation concerning police chief"; "To discuss problems in utilities department"; and "To discuss village solicitor's contract."

The reason the meeting was illegally called was that the Ohio Revised Code clearly states that only the mayor or any three council members may call a special meeting. The notices were delivered to the council and mayor Monday evening with only the signature of Councilman James L. Jacobs, Sr.

The discussion that followed brought out some salient points of the thinking of the new council members. Several wished to make drastic changes in the village.

Councilman Ervin Howard questioned the appointment of the fire chief. Solicitor Robert A. McKown upon checking the code said that a fire chief is re-appointed every two years but once appointed it is a life-time position, similar to that of a police chief. Removal from the position must be based on serious charges.

Councilman Ervin Howard questioned the appointment of the solicitor, which was done at the Jan. 4, 1977, meeting for a two year period. He said the 1941 codified village ordinance said the appointment should be made during the even years. The mayor said so far as she could remember, that since 1972 when McKown was first appointed, each appointment had been for a two year period.

David Howard said he could not find this in the back minutes. Both McKown and the mayor said that there could have been one year that the appointment had come later than January and the minutes would be rechecked.

Ervin Howard said he wants to do things "the right way" and suggested that perhaps McKown's contract should be redone.

$4,000 loss in Haas fire

Plymouth firemen answered a call Saturday at 5 a. m. at the Robert C. Haas residence in West Broadway.

The blaze, confined to one wall of the house, was determined to have been caused in the fireplace and chimney. Damage was estimated at $4,000.

Because of the considerable amount of smoke, Mr. Haas, who requires oxygen periodically, was moved to the Clayton Loehm home across the street by the Plymouth ambulance service, which also responded to the fire call.

R. K. Dawson dies of cancer

R. Keith Dawson, 60, Plymouth route 1, died of cancer in Mansfield General hospital Jan. 25.

He was the son of the late Fred Dawson, for many years trustee of Cass township and commissioner of Richland county, who died last year, and Mrs. Dawson. Born in Shiloh Mar. 12, 1917, he was engaged in farming and as a security guard for Sherwood Medical Industries, Willard. He was a member of the Garrett-Riest Post American Legion, having served during World War

II. In addition to his mother, he is survived by his wife, Grace; a daughter, Mrs. Audrey Ramoska, Manhattan, Kan.; a step-son, Donald Harnly, Plymouth; a step-daughter, Joyce Ann, now Mrs. Charles Hughes, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; a brother, Dean, Shiloh; and two step-grandchildren. The Rev. Colin Crouch, Christian Alliance church, Willard, conducted last rites from the Quaker-Secor Funeral home Tuesday at 11 a. m. Burial was in Mt. Hope cemetery, Cass township.

On the level... A camera aimed almost anywhere would produce results such as this, but a shot of the village hall will convince the doubting in Florida (and California) that snow up to 20 inches in depth on the level has fallen in 10 days and, on the level, it's a pain in the neck!

4-Hers choose new officers

Mark Loehn is the new president of Busy Fingers 4-H club. He was elected Jan. 23 at the home of the adviser, Mrs. Kent Knaus. Other officers are Farti Carnahan, vice-president; Barbara Kensingner, secretary-treasurer; secretary - treasurer; Darrin Kensingner, news reporter; Melinda Sexton, health chairman; Jennifer Rath and Carrie Loehn, recreation leaders. The Kensingners will be

New members are Jody Arnold, Tammy Boock, Tammy Clammons, Melissa Messer and Dana Myers and were greeted.

Officers will be installed Feb. 28 at the home of another adviser, Mrs. G. Deming Seymour. Miss Eleanor Company is also an adviser.

Two named to honor roll at Ashland

Carole Myers and Sue Shury, Plymouth route 1, have been named to the dean's list for the first semester in Ashland college.

To be eligible for this honor, a student must be enrolled full time and maintain a 3.5 or better average for the semester. Miss Myers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Myers. Miss Shury is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shury.

Miss Myers qualified with a 4.0 average. She is an alumna of South Central High school majoring in home economics. Miss Shury, a 1976 alumna of Plymouth High school, is majoring in music education.

Worst snow paralyzes Plymouth

those in the shelter and other volunteers provided the manpower to remove several large drifts of snow leading into the church itself before evacuation of the school began. During the complete blackout of about four hours heat was provided in the kitchen from the kitchen ranges, light came from candles while the water was obtained from the snow. Distilled water and other needed supplies were obtained from Plymouth Pharmacy and Albert Marvin donated coffee, bread and other food items for the shelter. The last family left Saturday afternoon.

Mayor Paddock praised village crews who worked long and tiresome hours to relieve water and electric shortages and to plow streets.
