

Are we sitting on reservoir of black gold?

It may just be that the Village of Plymouth is sitting on a black gold mine. Mayor Eric J. Akers received an inquiry May 20 from Pioneer Resources, Inc., requesting that it be allowed to drill for oil or gas on village property. Its representative, Arthur A. Nelson, is being invited to meet with the council July 23 to discuss the situation. The mayor turned the letter over to Councilman D. Douglas Brumbach, who will arrange the meeting. He told the council Monday that he had checked into the company and that it has a good background.

Liquor permit renewal may be objected to

"Now is the time to take action so that the problem of nuisance permit premises can be controlled," Director Clifford Reich of the Ohio Department of Liquor Control announced. Director Reich reminds communities of their right to object to permit renewals. Upon receipt of their objection, the Department of Liquor Control will schedule a hearing to be conducted by the department in accordance with Sec. 4303.271 of the Ohio Revised Code. All permits expire Oct. 1 and local governments have until Aug. 31 to submit their objections to renewals as set by Sec. 4303.271, which state, "Any objection shall be made no later than 90 days prior to the expiration of the permit." Sec. 4303.271 states "Any objection... shall be made by a resolution" specifying the reasons for objecting to the renewal and requesting a hearing. The resolution shall be accompanied by a statement by the chief legal officer of the political subdivision in his opinion, the objection is based upon substantial legal grounds within the meaning and intent of Division (A) of Sec. 4304.292 of the Revised Code. Sec. 4303.292 provides the criteria for the department's rejection of permit renewals, transfers and renewals. "It is important that local governments understand and follow the procedures set out in Sec. 4303.271 so that their objections can be effective," Director Reich stated. "If local governments have any confusion concerning the procedures or need any assistance in submitting their objections, I ask that they please call me at (614) 466-2142, and help will be provided," the director said.

The Voice of The Advertiser - On the holiday

Saturday is Independence day. Time was when young and old alike celebrated by discharging firecrackers. A quirk in Ohio law allows anybody to perjure himself by saying he's buying these deadly things for resale, therefore he gets them and no more re-sells them than the man in the moon.

The best advice is that one should abstain from firecrackers, whether on July 4 or any other day. We hope the police and sheriff will be diligent in bringing to book anyone who discharges firecrackers, or weapons, whether long- or short-barreled, on the holiday.

That there's a glut of gasoline may induce some folks to travel over the Fourth. On the other hand, the new tax of slightly over three cents a gallon may deter such travel.

Some communities, including this one, have taken some steps to keep the folks at home. They're safer that way. When a town has such a splendid park as this one does, everyone should use it, weather cooperating.

Some of the virtues of our forebears are worth retaining. Before the clamdip on firecrackers, nearly everybody's logan was "A Safe and Sane Fourth!"

To which we add "Amen!" A small-town newspaperman often has tasteful tasks to perform, none so often as having to write the death notice a friend who died needlessly.

Mother saves two children from burning

Two children were taken from a burning dwelling in Preston road early Monday after fire broke out in the kitchen and leveled the house.

Mrs. Len Barnett, who lives at 361 Preston road, took her son through a door and then raised a ladder to the second story to remove her daughter from a bedroom. Neither child was hurt. Mrs. Barnett planned to visit a doctor for treatment of smoke inhalation.

Firemen were summoned to the site Monday at 3:23 a. m. Chief Wayne E. Strine said the house was fully aflame when the department arrived. Sixteen firemen fought the blaze. Shelby firemen were summoned with additional water.

Smiths' kin, J. F. McClure, succumbs at 66

Joseph F. McClure, 66, Willard, husband of the former Madeleine H. Smith of Plymouth, died Sunday in University hospital, Columbus, of a lingering illness. He was formerly manager of the chambers of commerce at Ashland and Mansfield. Born in Washington Court house, he served in the Navy during World War II. He was a member of First Lutheran church, Albany, N. Y. He is also survived by three sons, Michael J., San Francisco, Cal.; T. Scott, Jacksonville, Fla.; and Jay, Guildenland, N. Y.; a daughter, Molly, Jacksonville, Fla.; and two sisters, Mrs. Enid Woodward, Chapel Hill, N. C., and Mrs. Ann Harris, Pennsylvania. Services were conducted yesterday at 11 a. m. from McQuate-Secor Funeral home. Burial was in Greenlawn cemetery.

10% power rate approved; is new $5 car tax legal?

Like a Broadway stage production, Plymouth village council does three acts to put the whole play together. It all began Thursday when the council met in regular session.

Only four councilmen were present. Councilman D. Douglas Brumbach was ill. Ervin Howard did not appear and had not told anyone why he would be absent. Mayor Eric J. Akers, the leading man of the production, had several pieces of important legislation that demanded immediate enactment.

They were emergency ordinances that require the vote of five of the six council members. The first, however, was not a tax. It was effective Tuesday.

The mayor said that Mrs. Charles Pritchard, vice-chairman, will be the acting head of the commission until a new member is appointed and a new chairman chosen.

Act 2 began Friday at 5:45 p. m. Councilmen Brumbach, Moore, Dean Cline and Billy Taublee were there. Holloway called to say he would be late.

Brumbach told his colleagues that he was very unhappy about their decision concerning the electric rate raise. He has maintained for a month that it should be double to cover the company's raise.

The mayor had worked out the increase, to which the council agreed, that will cover the approximate cost of $325,000 to pay Ohio Power for the year and leave enough for local operation and maintenance plus putting away about $25,000 in the electric reserve fund. According to his calculations, the rate will bring in about $425,000 annually.

Because of Brumbach's objections, all that was done Friday was to create by emergency ordinance a special fund for capital water improvements, in which monies from the HUD grant and the loan from the Ohio Water Development Administration may be deposited and paid out. This is required by the Richland county auditor and action had to be taken so it can be included in temporary appropriations and also in the 1982 budget.

The third act opened Monday at 7:30 p. m. Howard was still missing. The first piece of legislation the mayor suggested was the electric rate increase. All five councilmen voted for it, even Brumbach, but he gave the mayor and council a warning: never will he vote for another increase because he thinks this one is not sufficient.

The next ordinance to be considered was that which would have the water and sewer charges billed every two months rather than quarterly.

This went down the drain because Brumbach said it was improperly worded. He said it did not refer to previous ordinances that it would be changing.

He said this would confuse village clerks and the company which is codifying the ordinances. Cline said he doesn't think this is true since the codification would review all back ordinances.

The ordinance was passed on its first reading, however, but failed to gain the five votes needed to suspend the rules to pass it as an emergency.

The next ordinance the mayor proposed also passed on its first reading when it was realized that it was completely dependent on the bi-monthly billing ordinance. This would allow property owners who have rented multiple dwellings served by one water meter to receive credit for the minimum monthly billings of each dwelling.

Then came the really "Big One": An ordinance for the mayor to be authorized to enter into a contract for the construction of the water line from Willard to Plymouth.

It had been written in imprecise terms, not mentioning the name of the company whose low bid was to be accepted, but an overall statement that the mayor would sign a contract.

Brumbach immediately objected, saying that in the past the council had always given its authorization to the mayor to sign a contract which specifically stated with whom it was to be authorized.

The mayor changed the wording and the ordinance which gives the water line contract to Nor-Con Excavators, Inc., Norwalk, was approved. The mayor said that two easements for the water line are required. Each will cost $500. One is to Mrs. Frank Smith for the lift station that will be on her property, and the other to the Armitage family for a small section of the line which will pass through its property the Marsh run area in Route 598. This money will come out of the operation and maintenance of the water fund.

The mayor also recommended that the cost of a $2,000 line truck for the electric department be taken out of the electric reserve fund. The council approved both. Through all three acts, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Enderby were part of the audience. They attended the sessions in the hope that the council would reimburse them for what they say has been double payments in sewer and water charges since 1973. Their renters paid the monthly minimum charge each month, and they were billed quarterly for the complete amount of water used. They and W. Roger Ross, proprietor of Happy Hollow Trailer court, who has the same problem, maintain that the village owes them money. The new ordinance passed Monday only solves the problem currently. They are to meet with the service committee Monday at 7:30 p. m. to iron it out. Meanwhile the council's rules committee, which is headed by Howard, says that legally the village has been right in its billing procedure. Neither the Enderbys nor Ross agree. They say that credit should have been given for the quarterly charges of 6,000 gallons of water used by each of their renters. Ross is strongly questioning if the village has been giving credit to other individual water users for those first two months they pay the minimum water charge, then receive a bill the third month which reflects the total water usage during the quarter.

Emergency? Long distance call? They're for free now!

Persons who must call long distance to summon emergency services no longer will be charged a toll. General Telephone Co. of Ohio announced. An experimental plan, instituted July 1, eliminates toll charges on calls to fire, police and ambulance services. Chiefly affected are residents in rural areas. Allen W. Hughes, Marion, vice president-general manager, said the 30-month plan was authorized by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio in February. By Dec. 31, 1983, the PUCO will decide if the plan is to be made permanent. Every six months, General of Ohio will report to the PUCO its experience with the plan. Hughes said the company has programmed its computers to recognize emergency phone numbers. Telephone users then will not be billed. Emergency calls from pay phones are not included in the plan, he said. Charges for pay telephone calls normally are not processed by computer. Calls from other telephones, however, will apply whether dialed direct or handled by an operator. General of Ohio's existing calling areas affect about 11,200 customers. Ambulance calls, 17,000 each fire calls and 52,000 on police calls. Some customers are involved in more than one category. Hughes said any customer inadvertently billed for an emergency call after July 1 should call the company's business office. The charge will be removed.

New tomatoes!

Debbie Gravenhorst, a neighbor who works part-time, is almost five feet eight inches tall, and the plants are just about that tall.

Hydroponic? It just means chemically fed!

A young widow has made a dream come true with her first crop of tomatoes.

Mrs. John Welter and her husband became interested several years ago in growing tomatoes hydroponically from the standard method.

The large plastic greenhouse on their Pontiac Section road farm is more like a lush jungle than a greenhouse.

They went to a Medina concern which over a period of 23 years has developed what is called "hydroponic" flavored container scientific grown tomatoes.

The Welters began last July to erect the structure and equip it.

Mr. Welter lost his life last September in a collision and his wife continued with the help of neighbors and friends.

She started the plants in the basement of their home in March from jumbo seeds.

Once started, the plants were transferred to "growing blocks" which were then placed in tubes nourished only by water with added nutrients.

Mrs. Welter says she loved a heavy rain. From a two inch rainfall, she can plan on 7,000 gallons running off the roof of the structure which is funnelled into two cisterns.

The water then circulates among the plants 24 hours a day, on for 10 minutes at a time and off for five minutes.

The heat from the sun brings the temperature to a constant 80 degrees although the thermometer is set at 68.

Because of the cost of heat, December and January are the only months when there are no growing plants.

Mrs. Welter has one full time employee and two part-time ones to help her.

To date her beautiful product is being sold in grocery stores in Monroeville, Norwalk and Willard. She hopes to expand her market.

A black sheep? This one's tan, and barks!

By AUNT LIZ
Most families have a what is fondly called a "black sheep".

Some can be blacker than others about what they do and do not do.

We have one, but he is sort of bluish red, and his big thing is blackmail.

Each of us are fortunate to have a dog who can read the letters on a small sack that spell Doggie Bag.

Once you walk in the back door holding such a container, he goes out of his mind. The first thing he does is to indicate that he must go outside. He really does not need to, but he must be out before he can come back in.

He will not come in, but keeps pounding on the door, until you dangle a tasty piece of left-over meat we have carefully scrounged from dinner plates wherever we go.

There are times when an ordinary common dog biscuit will get him in, but when he knows there is salmon in the refrigerator, no soap.

He really believes in sharing everything we might eat, and unless we go on a strict diet of little cheese crackers or some of those other little tidbits things to snack on, we do not stand a chance. They are junk food, as we all know, and so does he, and he will not touch them.

You can almost test a new recipe on him. Last week he turned his nose up at a dog biscuit that had been dipped in some cherry jelly that I had made from canned juice and thought it was a great, easy recipe.

I hate to admit it, but he is pretty much right. It was easy, but not great, and somehow we still have six little jars of it.

After giving it some thought, it will have to wait until apple season is really here. It should be back to greatest in a baked apple dish.

I learned this in Switzerland. Slice apples, put in a baking dish with just a speck of water in the bottom, then layer the apples with strawberry jelly. I figure the cherry will work as well. Bake until the apples are softish and serve warm with a little whipped cream or soft vanilla ice cream. What can add to it is to dot each layer with a speck of butter, which really just adds more calories than flavor.

Someone gave us a really nice 1981 almanac the other day that gives weather reports for our important holidays.

July 4 sounds good for here. Halloween is going to be cold and wet. Don't plan on visiting family too much for Thanksgiving. We are in for a small blizzard and lots of nice white snow.

Christmas is not that bad. There is to be heavy snow here and there.

These things are pretty much guess work, but something how they can hit it on the nail. Everyone knows that Christmas should be white anyway.
