

Rotten concepts: prejudice derives from apron string

One who retains, after all these years, a position of respect and confidence in this community said to us, nearly 31 years ago, "Welcome to Plymouth. It's a good little town. What's so good about it is that we've never had any niggers and we don't want any, there's no place for them here."

That the speaker has received short shrift from us, in the main, over three decades probably doesn't mean much. What should have been done was to deliver a paste in the mouth. But law and custom did not then, and do not now, countenance such action.

What led to the "dredging up" of this? ("Mr. Editor, you're always dredging up something, especially something that makes us look bad, not matter that it's true!") A report has been verified that a citizen sought a public service in a public institution and agreed to pay the freight. When the time came for the public institution to produce, there was a flutter and a flurry and an abject refusal of some in the institution to perform as advertised, if not required. Why? Because the client is black. At last, two of the performers agreed to service the client and he was, indeed, satisfactorily dealt with, so much so that he praises the server.

But not the program.

The recent general election showed us, if we wanted to see, that prejudice is not dead in this country. Not by a long shot. The erudite and estimable Bill Moyers said on national television, "If you think prejudice isn't stronger than ever in this country, then you're simply blind to the facts."

Most of the prejudice hereabouts comes down less upon race or color than upon social origin, but only because there isn't much opportunity for racial prejudice. If one derives from south of Route 40, or more especially south of the Ohio river, he has something to live down. If he comes from east of Youngstown, he has two strikes against him. If he goes to mass on Saturday night or Sunday morning, there is something fundamentally wrong with him. A child whose parents are divorced or separated is made to suffer because of that fact. One who speaks his mind is shunned. One whose mind is keen and whose ability to articulate what is in his mind is avoided if not excluded.

Renters are regarded with less respect than freeholders. Pupils who abstain from athletics or social events of the school, for whatever reason, are "queer".

What can we do about it?

Not much, probably.

Children who manifest prejudices (vide the frightful tale recounted in the county seat daily newspaper on Sunday last, about the twin girls in Vermilion) do not do so on their own. Prejudice does not come with one's genes. Prejudice comes from what one hears at the dinner table, at the apron strings (come to think of it, are there more than a handful of women who wear aprons any more?), in the car en route to an outing.

As the twig is bent, so grows the tree.

Some of our textbooks have prejudices built in them. Sexual prejudices. And make no mistake about it, sexual prejudice is the worst kind, and it is here the strongest.

A conspicuous effort should be made to show to the world, certainly, but to ourselves, most of all, that we can set aside these rotten concepts and behave as mature, responsible citizens of the late '80's. Like what? Like recruiting a Jewish teacher, a black teacher, a refugee family. Like showing more concern for the qualifications of women for public office.

To show concern is a step forward. But it's not enough. There has been enough, indeed, far too much, of sitting on our bottoms and doing nothing for too long. The courageous and the honorable are invited to step forward.

Mrs. D. E. Cook succumbs at 70 in Florida

Wife of David E. Cook, formerly of Plymouth, Mrs. Helen B. Cook, 70, died Nov. 20 at her home in Barefoot Bay, Fla.

Born Helen Gwartz in Bethlehem, she was employed by Shelby Spring Hinge Co., before it went out of business. She lived in Florida four years, having previously resided in Baseline road east of her home.

Her husband, three step-daughters, Mrs. Barbara West, Mansfield; Susan, now Mrs. Richard Ciganko, Rosendale, N.Y., and Mrs. Patricia Stott, Glasgow, Ky.; a step-son, David E. Jr., Libertyville, Ill.; five brothers, George, John, Henry and Howard Gwartz, Shelby, and Clement Gwartz, Crestline; a sister, Mrs. Barbara Durnwald, New Washington, and 11 step-grandchildren survive.

The Rev. Robert DeSloover was celebrant of the funeral mass from St. Bernard's Roman Catholic church, New Washington, Saturday at 10:30 a. m. Interment by Secor Funeral home was in Greenlawn cemetery here.

Ross infant dies after birth at Shelby

Graveside services were conducted in Oakland cemetery, Shelby, Nov. 21 for the infant grandson of Stanley Ross and great-grandson of Mrs. Ida Rosa, who died Nov. 19 shortly after birth.

He is also survived by his parents, the John Rosses, Shelby; his maternal grandparents, the Bill Coxes, Greenwich, and Mrs. Rose Cox, in West Virginia; his paternal grandparents, the Ed Mackeys, Plymouth; his paternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Ida Wallace, Shelby, and his paternal great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Rella Jones, Shelby.

The Rev. James L. Smith, First Presbyterian church, Shelby, conducted the service.

Judge to speak to initiates Sunday

Judge Robert W. Smith, Huron county common pleas bench, will address 10 initiates of Louis Bromfield Chapter, National Honor society, Sunday at 3 p. m. in a public ceremony in the high school auditorium.

He began his career on the bench in 1964, as municipal judge at Bellevue, and served there until 1978, when he became probate and juvenile judge. A year later he acceded to the common pleas bench and has served there since.

He was graduated by Norwalk High school in 1949 and by Adelbert college, Western Reserve university, Cleveland, in 1953. He took his LL.B. degree from Franklin Thomas Backus college of law of Western Reserve university in 1956 and was admitted to the Ohio bar in that year.

He was a staff attorney with the Ohio Turnpike commission from 1956 to 1957 and engaged in private practice from 1957 to 1973. He teaches the law of torts and search in Willard Police academy.

Divorced, he is the father of three grown children. A son is a member of the Ohio Highway patrol. A daughter is a senior in Ohio State university, intending to enter veterinary college. The younger son of a pre-law major in Ohio State university, where he is a junior.

Parents and families of initiates, all of whom are 11th graders, are invited.

Trucker hit by train succumbs to injuries

A 43-year-old Mansfielder died in General hospital there Friday of injuries received when his rig was struck by a train at the crossing in Peru Center road north of New Haven Nov. 21.

Carl D. Drake, driving for R. G. Beer, Mansfield, apparently did not stop for the crossing, which is marked but not with a flasher.

He was proceeding north, probably, police said, at about 15 miles an hour, when the freight headed west struck his rig.

Guard claims he was punched

A 34-year-old security guard at Plymouth Locomotive Works, Inc., was attacked Thursday at 3 a. m. by an unknown assailant, for whom police are searching.

Eane Howard, 85 Towline road 12, Willard, reported to police that he was walking his rounds when he was "sucker punched".

Fight at Shiloh result of theft

An altercation in front of Shiloh Inn Nov. 19 was the result of an attack by Monroe Barnett, 15 Prospect street, Shiloh, upon the alleged thief of a Remington semi-automatic rifle left in Barnett's car in front of the Inn on Nov. 18 at 9:30 p. m.

Value of the weapon is $105, Barnett said.

He was seated in the sheriff's vehicle, according to a report, when he saw the alleged thief approaching. He leaped from the sheriff's car and set upon the alleged thief.

Classen heads Boy Scout troop

Plymouth's Boy Scout troop is being revitalized.

Larry Classen is the new Scoutmaster and Michael Crawford his assistant.

Boys between 10½ and 17 years are invited to meet at the Scout hut in Mary Fate park Saturday at 2 p. m.

Scouting background is not required to become a member of the troop.

Classen plans new activities such as special field trips and campsouts.

Scouting began in Plymouth Apr. 24, 1938, with Morris M. Oldham, a high school science instructor, as the first Scoutmaster.

Impact was at the cab, which was thrust 36 feet along the right of way. Fire Chief John Yacob, Willard, said Drake was thrown clear of the wreckage. He was rushed to Willard Area hospital and thence to Mansfield.

Dean Baechtl, Natrona Hts., Pa., one of the engineers, was treated at Willard and then at Mansfield and released. He and the operating engineer, John J. Tarby, 36, Austintown, sought to protect themselves when they saw impact was inevitable by crouching in their compartment. Impact thrust Baechtl's head beneath the instrument panel of the engine.

Tarby was treated and released at Willard.

The train's impact thrust the tires and frame of the truck, loaded with two slabs of metal, each about 17 feet long, about 400 yards west of the crossing.

One of the slabs blocked Peru Center road for about two hours.

The collision took place at 10:45 a. m.

Drake was pastor of Mansfield Holiness chapel.

He is survived by his wife, Lee Linda Duncan; three sons and a daughter, all at home; his mother, Morehead, Ky.; seven brothers, including Roy, Shiloh, and five sisters.

The Rev. Leroy Manns conducted services Sunday at 11 p. m. at Morehead, Ky., where burial was in Drake cemetery.

Bruce Carpenter - Shiloh held on five counts after brawl here

A 36-year-old Shilohan was charged with two counts of assault and single counts of resisting arrest, disorderly conduct and criminal damaging after an altercation in front of 170 Nichols street Saturday.

Bruce Carpenter was also arrested on a warrant from Huron county and on a charge of assault alleged to have been committed here in February.

Police say they were called to the scene in Nichols street to break up a fight between Carpenter and Paul Risner, brother of Goble, the man whose colorful demeanor resulted in a spectacular jury trial at Shelby in the spring. Carpenter apparently accused Risner of cuckolding him with Mrs. Carpenter, whose given name is Althea. Risner told police he dated Mrs. Carpenter in February.

Police say Risner fled the scene after Carpenter addressed Risner's son, Richard, 18, who was seated next to him at 170 Nichols street. But not before Carpenter assailed him, Risner told police. They sought to take Carpenter into custody in the street in front of the house but Carpenter resisted so strongly they were forced to apply handcuffs. When he was lodged in a cell in the police station, he became abusive and uncooperative, they said, so much so they were compelled to take him to Shelby Police lockup.

Two officers received slight injuries.

Carpenter was to appear in mayor's court Tuesday night.

So were Douglas Nease, 20, Shiloh route 2, and Curtis A. Guthrie, 20, 111 West Main street. Shiloh, arrested by police during a setto in the rear of Bob's cafe at 8 East Main street on Nov. 17.

Three hurt in collision in Road 12

Three villagers were injured in a collision in Town Line Road 12, Huron county, Thursday.

Timothy Isaac, 28, 111 West High street, was eastbound in a 1967 Chevrolet pickup truck when he failed to negotiate a turn at County Line Road 10.

His vehicle slid off the right side of the road, struck a ditch and overturned.

He was unhurt.

His passengers, Lisa Lord, 22, Amanda L. Isaac, two, and Brandy Barton, two, all of 111 West High street, were treated at Willard Area hospital for injuries. The children were released. Mrs. Lord was slated for surgery Friday.

Isaac was summoned on a charge of failure to control his vehicle and failure to use child restraints.

Some Pilgrims were not so nice

By AUNT LIZ

Now that Thanksgiving is just a memory for another year, some choice tidbits have reared their nasty little heads.

Several historians have decided that those nice, pious Pilgrims were not all they should have been. One even said that things were so bad in the Bay colony, there simply were not enough red letters for some naughty ladies to wear, there were that many of them.

I know of one young man who simply got kicked out of the colony because he was such a sur-actor. He did everything wrong, drank firewater with the natives, caressed around with their sisters. He finally married a nice Indian maiden, and settled down to a long, good, prosperous life.

The Pilgrims weren't much different from people today or from those before them. Right now we are on a genealogical kick because there is a chance that our family comes from that rabble rousing little group of people. It all started with an article on Mayflower descendants in the Cleveland paper.

Of the passengers who came in the Mayflower, only 23 left descendants, which was a surprise to learn. The catch is that they all had at least a dozen kids, and those kids had a dozen, so just about everyone in the countryside can claim an ancestor.

And so who cares? Maybe little kids who haven't become so blasé about the world.

I can just see a couple of third graders next November getting up in their classrooms saying "That's my Grandma Priscilla and Grandpa John" when some bedraggled teacher tries to explain the Pilgrims. Kids are strange beasts, they like to show off.

A few weeks ago a second grade class in California was studying volcanoes and one little one was able to take a real piece of volcano stone to show off. It came from Grandma and Grandpa, who got it from some thoughtful friends who visited Mt. St. Helen.

Just wait until they get to Greek stories. No one, but no one in their classes will have little stones from the Acropolis or Marathon. They do, because another kind friend brought them back to us. Being a grandmother is turning into a full time job. I've got one going on collecting stamps, and one thing she is getting under the Christmas tree, if I can do it, is a stamp from every country in the world. The catch is that there are so many new ones that I don't even know their names. I am trying to pick out ones that make sense to a seven-year-old, like a Mexican one with a juicy red tomato on it. It's pretty.

And since we have practically a whole turkey left over, getting dinner is a cinch. Of all the things we eat, that is the one thing that you can do so much with, and a little of it goes a long way, so it lasts and lasts.

It should be done systematically, though. First you have turkey sandwiches for a couple of nights, hot or cold. Left over cranberry sauce, a salad and a soup, that can change from one night to the next.

Then you have all the bits and little pieces, which can go into a casserole with rice, curry over rice, turkey a la king over biscuits or patty shells or turkey chow mein, also over rice, which is very good for you.

Frankly, you do not need any recipes for any of this, but you do need a good can opener. Every dish can be put together with canned soups for the sauce, then flavored, and no one will know the difference.

Finally, you can whip up a soup with the bones, some carrots, celery, onions and seasonings. Strain it if you like, and the broth can be used to cook noodles and rice.

Newsy notes . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Wechter and their son, Hudson, were holiday weekend guests of her mother, Mrs. Darrell B. Faust.

Mrs. Montelle Goth and her children, Manafield, joined them for the holiday dinner.

Talking turkey on Turkey day

The secret is to seize the initiative, to set the tone and the course of the conversation and then pursue it with vigor.

This is what was done on Thanksgiving day, when for the second time since 1966, no one with whom to banter niceties about the dinner, the day and the damels except his wife.

And an event of a few days before, which increased him mightily but from which he cooled quickly, as is his wont, quite quickly, but which, as it always does, aggravated the distasteful side so much that she put her foot down again, with no more success than usual, was the subject of conversation.

players. Wouldn't a parent or a pupil, for that matter, want to know how many mistakes he made in seeking to factor an equation, for example, or to solve a problem? The basketball coach has the data kept so he can show the players what mistakes they made and why they made them, or at least why they made them. But you hardly ever hear about any one-one activity by the coach-teacher to show the boy or girl what mistakes he or she made in, for example, factoring the common monomial, or in the reasoning that should lead to the solving of the problem.

there is at least one Plymouth syndrome: are these people?"

"What syndrome are you talking about?"

"Why, it's 'I can't start, I don't want to play!' That's the Plymouth syndrome. And now I'm beginning to think that there's another Plymouth syndrome, which is nastier than the first. It is 'You don't get to play if your name isn't Suchandsuch.' That's taurine guano (that's not what he said, but this is a family newspaper). I've never seen any evidence of it. But there are some folks, mostly males but some females, who buttolhose me every chance they get and berate me, as if it were my fault, because Coach Soandso didn't play them or give them the opportunity to star that they think they ought to have had."

"Well, these are the 1980's and one would think that younger people of this day and age would be more sophisticated, more worldly, than their counterparts of half a generation ago. Besides, the few dollars that a coach gets for his work are more important to the family's survival than they used to be in the business world. The game is more intense and therefore those that hold the jobs lose sight of good manners and fairness because they want those dollars so much."

"... a program for less than two per cent of the enrollment... administrators would be laughed out of town."

program for less than two per cent of the enrollment, the public would laugh the administrators right out of town. And that of number 14, only four out of ten I am aware, got any help at all. So my figure less than two per cent is a lot smaller, in fact."

"Is the whole business worth it?"

"What whole business? High school athletics, you mean? The answer to that is yes and no. No if you mean it wastes the time, breath, and think athletics all the time, to be tied up with winning that you can't see the value of competition and sportsmanship. Yes if you mean a... a reasonable chance to win and opportunity... to develop his muscular coordination and his thinking processes in even and fair competition with his peers."

"I don't know, not for sure. I think it must be like playing the lottery. Everybody knows the odds are tremendous, the chances of winning so remote. Take the best football program in the country, at Valdosta, Ga. I phoned down there the other day. The town has 43,000 people, with one high school. There are about 2,000 pupils in it. The football program is enormously successful, undefeated seasons like you wouldn't believe. They have 10,000 people out for their games and they have over 1,200 people in the Boosters club. There are 80 boys on the varsity team and 40 on the junior varsity."

Dear Mr. Paddock:

Would you please put this letter to the editor in your newspaper?

Athletic Director

they were told by me that this would be the only time that they could take pictures of our teams. Instead they set up times to have the pictures taken before then with our winter coaches. The coaches were under the impression that these pictures would be filed for a later date. Thus, the Advertiser by complying to my wishes and coming and taking their pictures on the designated day was penalized. The Advertiser was done a grave injustice and this is why I feel you should be publicly apologized to, at least from me. I want to thank you for living by the rules.

Sincerely,
Sam L. Cook
Athletic Director

Games cancelled, one scheduled

Ninth grade boys' basketball games with Mapleton on Dec. 18 and Feb. 5 have been cancelled, because Mapleton will not field a ninth grade team this year.

New London's ninth graders will play here Dec. 12 at 4:15 p.m. Sam Cook, athletic director, reports. A game to replace the Feb. 5 contest is being sought.

"The point is that of all these remarkable athletes, there are just 24 graduates of Valdosta High school playing college ball now. Some of them are seniors, some juniors and so on. Let's strike an average of six in each class. That means of the 121 players on the Valdosta team in a given season, six made it on scholarship or assistance to some college somewhere. What're the percentages? A little under five per cent. What do you think the electors of this school district would say if the has a helluva big gym in your plans, it's harder to get the bond issue passed. He's right. That's the way it is, much as I regret it.

"And what can be done about it?"

"We must accentuate the positive aspects of athletics. We must point up sharply, how well some athletes have made it in another world. The Dick Lewises, the Chip Paddos, the Jimmy Hammans, the Washman boys, the Neil McKlowns, the Bill Bachrachs, people of that stripe, people who excelled at their level in some sport or another and learned how to make the rules work for them and how to get along with people and how to discipline themselves and they've made it independently of athletics. That's what we need to do. This week we're doing it. The academic teams of the Firelands conference have been chosen. We've got some players, male and female, on them and we're going to promote the hell out of that fact. Because what counts is not how many points you score or how many tackles you make or how many aces you serve, what counts is how you learn anything about living with a teacher. Now please pass the broccoli."
