

Some thoughts on independence in 1984

What sort of celebration was appropriate yesterday, when the nation marked No. 208?

Was there, yesterday, on the greatest holiday of them all, genuine justification for optimism? Is there today?

What does it take to be optimistic?

We confess we do not know.

And we admit to a philosophical bias for pessimism, a bias that we didn't discover, not by a long shot, and certainly not one that we alone promote.

It is certainly easier to find conditions and circumstances to be pessimistic about. Much easier than it is to find those about which to be optimistic.

Which leads us to the pessimistic thought of the day.

"Many employers," says the Associated Press under a New York dateline, "say recent high school graduates lack not only preparation in math and science, but also basic communication skills and work attitudes."

The survey was made by the Conference Board, a business-financed research organization.

We called these folks to get some sense of where they're coming from and where they're going, mostly to determine if they, too, have a built-in pessimistic bias.

Not so, they insist. And they sent us some details of their findings, which include:

More than half of the executives rated writing skills of recent high school graduates as "poor," one retailing personnel executive said, "Their writing skills are practically non-existent."

More than 90 per cent of the firms surveyed said they hire very high school graduates anyway, preferring to employ people with three to four years of experience after high school.

Graduates are coming out of school painfully mismatched for the world of work.

"Business," said the executive director of the Board's corporation relations program, "can teach new hires how to add is they have to, but they can't teach them to take their job seriously."

"I have a basic problem," said one respondent, a utility executive, "convincing the high school graduate that there is an ethic of responsibility that requires that you show up for work."

A food company executive said "many recent high school graduates find it difficult to take orders."

None of the data shown to us relates, so far as we can see, to our graduates, specifically. That is, none of the executives who responded to the survey does business within a reasonable driving distance of our high school. But it's the wont here to insist that our graduates are "typical, average, perhaps just a bit above the national run of the mill, good kids who love their families and who, for the most part, making allowance for a wild fling here and there, behave themselves."

We accept this, now as in the past.

But we can't help wondering if our graduates, average, typical as they are, are not right in the center of those of whom these executives complain.

A joint vocational school not far from here reports only 33 per cent of its most recent graduates were employed in their chosen field of endeavor. We didn't have more than one black in the class, not this year, nor last, nor the year before, yet 66 per cent of the graduates can't find the work they want and any number of others can't find work, period.

This is what concerned us on July 4, 1984, Independence Day. Independence from what?

L. W. Becker, village native, succumbs at 76

Brother of Mrs. John Root, Lawrence W. (Pinky) Becker, 76, Plymouth, Mich., died in Livonia, Mich., June 19, six weeks after the death of his wife, Dorothy E. Becker, which occurred May 10. Born here Jan. 9, 1908, son of the late Alton and Lena Long Becker, he was graduated by Plymouth High school in 1926. He retired in 1972 as a design engineer for General Motors Corp., Lansing, Mich., and Ford Motor Co., Dearborn, Mich. He was a 1931 alumnus of General Motors Institute, then called General Motors Technical school.

He moved to Plymouth from Lansing in 1967.

He was a life member of BPOE, a member of the Plymouth Kiwanis club and a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Two sons, Ronald, Rhinelander, Wis., and Robert, Rio Rancho, N. M.; a sister, Helen, now Mrs. Reed Smith, Huron, and a granddaughter, Melissa, also survive. A brother Donald, died earlier.

The Rev. Sanford Burr conducted services June 21 at Plymouth and interment took place there.

Planners aim for U.S. funds to restore old buildings

Village planning commission met Monday night to discuss historical preservations of the older buildings in the village.

A representative of the Ohio Historical society met with Douglas A. Dickson to take a quick look at those in the Square.

Dickson said his comments were "very hopeful that the village could qualify for a grant to restore those on both the north and south side of the Square."

Pictures are to be taken and sent to Columbus for consideration.

As future athletic complex —

Schools seek to buy 60-A. Ellis property

Purchase of almost 60 acres of real estate entirely within the village limits was authorized by Plymouth Board of Education Thursday night when in special session it directed the Richland county prosecutor to prepare documents for an option to buy the Carl V. Ellis house and farm in West Broadway.

The board would pay $69,000 for the property. There is an offer to buy the house and 56,100 of an acre of land tendered by an as yet unidentified buyer. This offer is subject to acquisition of the entire site by the board.

The option would be for 45 days. The board would pay $200 for it. Ellis is free to refuse it. He is represented in the sale by All Seasons Real Estate, which has an exclusive contract with Ellis to sell the property.

Proceeds of the sale of the house and small parcel of land that it occupies would be applied to the $69,000 price the board intends to pay the seller.

Additionally, the schools will seek to sell about 38 acres of land deeded to it by the federal government slightly more than 20 years ago on the site of Wilkins Air Force station. This land has been used for farming purposes by vocational agriculture pupils. It has been consistently fertilized and improved and, save for a small portion that is unusable for agricultural purposes, Keith Johnson, vocational agricultural instructor told the board Thursday, entirely arable. As farm land, it would sell, John Fazzini, representing All Seasons, said Thursday night, "for between $1,050 and $1,300 an acre." But he added that, for other purposes, mostly industrial, for which the site is now zoned, "the land is probably worth more than that and you'd have to hire an appraiser to determine just what that value is."

Proceeds of sale of the 38-acre site at Shelby and of the sale of the Ellis house and 56,100 of an acre of ground that it occupies will "come pretty close", said President Donald M. Eichelberger of the board, "to paying for the deal."

It is the board's intention to assign use of the land to the vocational agriculture department for instructional purposes. About nine acres is wooded, Supt. Douglas Staggs told the board, and could suitably be used as a biology-botany laboratory out-of-doors site.

Eventually, Staggs said, the site can be developed as an athletic complex. It has access via Hoffman street at the east side and via West Broadway (there is an access strip measuring 155 feet in width leading north from West Broadway) from the south. Additionally, access can be had via Curtis drive and Pleasant street and Walnut street as extended. The property abuts Weber field, where Plymouth Midget league plays. That site was bought from the Ellis family almost 22 years ago.

Eichelberger said it is the board's main concern "to get these youngsters off the highways, which they must do now in going back and forth to Shelby in their cars and on farm equipment."

He pointed that "we probably will end up trading land for land gaining about 12 acres in the bargain, and it's only three blocks for the high school". This was in response to an inquiry from Mrs. Roger Pugh, one of the patrons of the school district present (the others were two reporters and Fazzini), he asked how the board intends to finance the purchase.

It isn't easy to serve meals that kids like!

By AUNT LIZ

For years I was under the impression that I was among the hostesses with the "mostes". I am not.

It took three little kids to tell me outright what an absolute failure I am.

And for years I really catered to what I thought people would like. No way would I serve anything too far out like curries or even Chinese things if I knew they believed in red meat and potatoes.

The three came for dinner. I had talked to one mother and a grandmother so I thought I had a feast of what kids liked down pat.

They all ate the wieners, which we cooked out doors, and the corn on the cob, the potato chips, olives and celery.

That where it kind of ended. One ate macaroni here, so I had that for him. Two didn't touch it, which means we eat it for days. No one ate perfectly tasty devilled eggs, which I consider a real treat, so they are left over.

Two ate strawberries on their ice cream, one did not. Another got treat down the drain.

One of them did drink their grape juice and didn't even spill it, which was great.

What was really wanted was watermelon, fudge sauce, macaroni, brown, gum and a jumping rope.

I am giving them one more try, and so help me, we'll be ready.

Our kids really weren't it bad, although we had one who would not touch a tomato but did not object to catsup, pizza or spaghetti sauce. They both hated their father's version of a Sunday night supper of scrambled eggs and sweetbreads, which I had to agree with. And there were times when I had to beg our friendly meat man to not admit he had tripe.

Eating habits really develop at home while you are growing up.

Part of it is the idea of what it all is. I remember my mother serving crabmeat salad (back in those days when it was within reason, nice) and telling everyone it was chicken salad, and they ate it. Had they known, they would have sneered.

Since this is getting to be fresh fruit, a dish of anything can use a little something to go with it, which one eliminates a rich topping on the fruit. This is equally as calorific which is beside the point as an be used for picnics.

For orange nut bars and is to be baked in a greased nine inch square pan for about an hour.

Beat three eggs until light and fluffy. Add a six ounce can of frozen orange juice. Mix well. Then add a cup of sugar, two cups of graham cracker crumbs, a teaspoon of vanilla and baking powder each, a cup of chopped nuts and an eight ounce package of chopped dates.

They can be frosted if you like with a mixture of a cup and a fourth of powdered sugar mixed with two and a half tablespoons of orange juice.

K. D. Cellar weds Polly Deskins

Mrs. Polly Anne Deskins became the bride of Keith David Cellar June 2 in a 6:30 p.m. ceremony.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Lawrence Cornell. He is the son of Mrs. Hazel Cellar, Nankin.

The Revs. Gordon Meier and Colin Crouch performed the double ring ceremony in St. John's church, Kennonsburg.

The church was built in the early 1800's on the land of the bridegroom's great-great grandfather.

Bouquets of lavender and white daisies were palced on the altar.

Mrs. Gordon Meier, organist, played "Sunrise, Sunset" and "Great Is Thy Faithfulness."

The bride wore a street-length dress of mauve with a white design with gray accessories. She carries a single long stemmed mauve rose with baby's breath.

Her sister, Holly, now Mrs. Mark Korbas, Shelby, matron of honor, wore a pink dotted Swiss. Her flowers were a corsage of daisies. Steven Lykins, Ontario, was best man. The bride's son, Joshua, was groomsmen.

Mrs. Cornell chose a tan and white striped dress. Mrs. Cellar wore pink. Both mothers wore daisy corsages.

A reception took place at the home of the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Millie Stoneburner, Salesville.

The bride's cake was two tiered with mauve and dusty blue roses. The couple spent a wedding trip at Salt Fork State Park lodge.

The bride is a graduate of Plymouth High school. The bridegroom graduated from Mapleton High school and North Central Technical college, Mansfield.

Both are employed by Shelby Mutual Insurance Co.

They are living here. Among the guests were the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cornell, Lake Worth, Fla.

Carters' kin to be married on Aug. 4

Engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Carl Lyn, to Michael Patrick McLendon, son of the Gilbert McLendon, Willard, are announced by the Theodore Fozes, Greenwich.

They will be married Aug. 4. The bride-elect is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Carter and a great-granddaughter of Harold Buckman.

She is a 1981 alumna of South Central High school employed by First Buckeye bank.

Her fiancé was an outstanding tennis player in Willard High school, by which he was graduated.

A slick plan for a rainy day.

Some people manage to go through life without ever having a rainy day. But most people run into a storm now and then.

So it pays to plan for a storm and then hope it never happens.

The Payroll Savings Plan is one sure, safe, easy way to force yourself to start saving. And savings are a must to keep any financial plan from going on the skids.

The little you set aside each payday for U.S. Savings Bonds will grow. And help to keep you covered come rain or come shine.

And if you're lucky enough to miss the rain, it might help you plant a few shade trees.

Take stock in America.

When you put part of your savings into U.S. Savings Bonds you're helping to build a brighter future for your country and for yourself.
