

Strict enforcement of parking rules starts Thursday

Strict enforcement of village parking regulations will take effect Thursday.

Acting Police Chief Bill N. Spognardi says he has found almost universal violation of parking regulations, which he asserts is not only illegal but hazardous.

He has instructed all officers to enforce the strict letter of the parking ordinance beginning Thursday at 7 a. m.

Village ordinances, Spognardi says, prohibit parking of a vehicle on a sidewalk, in front of a public or private driveway, within an intersection, within 10 feet of a fire hydrant, on a crosswalk, within 20 feet of a crosswalk or intersection, within 30 feet or on the approach of a flashing beacon, stop sign or traffic control device, between a safety zone and the adjacent kerb and within 50 feet of the nearest rail or railroad crossing.

Also, within 20 feet of the driveway entrance to a fire station and in the street opposite a fire station, beside or opposite any street excavation or obstruction beside any vehicle halted or parked at a kerb or edge of a street, on a bridge, wherever signs prohibit parking, within a foot of another parked vehicle and on the roadway.

To park illegally is a misdemeanor, Spognardi says, and punishment in mayor's court may be fined up to $100.

Blood call Monday

ARC Bloodmobile will call at Plymouth High school Monday at 10 a. m., seeking 160 pints of whole blood before it closes up shop at 4 p. m.

Plymouth Lions club is again sponsoring the visit, the last such during 1984.

Wayne H. Strine is visit chairman.

Persons needing transportation can call him at 687-8942 or 687-5511.

A 25-year-old Shilohan was treated in Shelby Memorial hospital for minor injuries early Sunday after he lost control of his car at Miles' corner in Route 603 and struck a ditch.

Jacob Shepherd, Shiloh route 1, was charged with drunken driving. The mishap occurred Sunday at 2:10 a. m.

A Plymouth High school football player, Timothy Deskina, 17, 156 Euclid street, Shiloh, skidded through a stop sign and struck a ditch in Shiloh Norwalk road Saturday at 11:30 p. m.

The voice of The Advertiser—

On parking laws

He who is now in charge of the police department, obviously with the consent of the mayor and the village council, has issued strict orders to enforce parking regulations.

The violations to which he has referred in his news release certainly occur, perhaps more often than anyone realizes, and they ought to be dealt with quickly and effectively.

But it must not be a witch hunt. Acting Chief Spognardi has taken pains to avoid that notion by anybody by giving a whole week's warning. The purpose of the police department is not to make money, nor even to pay its expenses. Even-handed justice, which is everyone's right, demands that sensible enforcement of traffic laws, which are designed to protect the safety of everyone, be effective but not burdensome.

What is apt to cause more concern than the violations of which the acting chief has spoken is the two hour parking limit.

Some business people about the Public Square have for long insisted that parking there is a serious problem. They imply that strict enforcement of the parking rules will ameliorate the situation.

Time was when this contention was true. Even a blind man can now see that those days are gone. We hope no more.

Strict enforcement of the parking rules in the Public Square will certainly exercise customers of the watering places, the beauty parlor, the doctors' offices (now there are three) and the bicycle shop.

One parking summons may send them away from here for good.

So far as we are led to believe, there is no business, absolutely no business, that opens its doors on the Public Square than can afford the loss of a single customer.

If the strict enforcement, unlike rigid discipline in the Army ("You pull on the reins for a week or so and make everything GI, then when everybody is all spit and polish and toes the line, you let up on the reins a little"), extends into the snow season, there is likely to be greater complaint. In addition to the vocal (and perhaps written) complaints the village council and the mayor are likely to get, there will be another, and more painful, one: income tax payments to the village won't be so large as they have been.

Golfer, 31, succumbs to lightning bolt

William Van Wagner struck at Woody Ridge

A 31-year-old former Plymouth High school athletic standout died Friday 18 hours after he was struck by lightning on the 18th hole of Woody Ridge Golf course, Routes 598 and 98 south of here.

William L. (Bubba) Van Wagner, 2nd, 105 Mulberry street, was playing in a foursome at 6:30 p. m. when the bolt struck him at the shoulder, sped under his shirt and through his trouser leg, tearing it open, and exited through his shoe, which was spiked.

CPR was administered almost at once and a pulse and respiration were restored. These disappeared before the arrival of the Shelby ambulance, which reached the scene shortly before the Plymouth ambulance. Neither was equipped with a fibrillator.

Van Wagner was rushed to Shelby Memorial hospital and placed under life support in the intensive care unit. It was determined to remove him to the burn center of University hospital, Columbus, Friday, but irregular cardiac rhythm persisted. He died about 11 a. m.

He was a tackle and fullback for the Big Red in his high school career, which ended with the 1971 season. He was named to the second team of the Johnny Applesseed conference. He was a significant contributor to the Plymouth basketball team and threw the discus and the shot on the track and field team.

He was recruited to play at Morehead State university, Morehead, Ky., by Mike Gottfried, now head coach of the University of Kansas at Lawrence, and he played there for three seasons until a neck injury led him to retire. He took his degree in physical education there in 1976.

Born in Shelby July 8, 1953, he was employed by Brunswick Defense Corp., Willard. He was a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon social fraternity at Morehead State.

He is survived by his wife, Terry; two daughters, Heather and Holly; his parents, the Van Wagners, Sr., Plymouth; an older brother, Richard, Oxnard, Cal., and a younger sister, Barbara, now Mrs. Christopher Wilcox, Lexington.

Dunn re-hired to coach varsity basketball team

With one dissenting vote, David P. Dunn was rehired as head boys' basketball coach by Plymouth Board of Education Thursday night.

The board met in executive session with the only two candidates who submitted applications. Six others had expressed interest. On motion of A. George Miller, who moved to hire Dunn during the Aug. 13 session, when his appointment was recommended by Supt. Douglas Stages, only to be rejected when the motion failed of a second, Charles Reinhart seconded. President Donald M.

Echelbarger, Dunn's uncle by marriage (Mrs. Dunn is the daughter of Echelbarger's older sister), called for further discussion. There was none.

On roll call, Member Martin McKenzie, who called for a separate vote on recommendations en bloc by Stages on Aug. 13, obviously seeking to dissuade Dunn, voted nay. Miller, Reinhart, Echelbarger and Donald Barnhouse voted yea in that order.

Dunn will thus undertake a fourth season at the helm of the basketball squad, which he has so far led to only 11 victories in three years, one each in 1981-82 and 1982-83 and nine last season.

In doing so, he will begin with a green assistant, Dave Hirschy, and a squad decimated by the graduation of most of the starters of the 1983-84 squad. Only three lettermen will be back, Jeff Caudill and Jeff Leach, 12th graders, and Kevin Taylor, 11th grader. There will be six up from the reserve squad. Those letter winners are Brian Christoff, Troy Keene, Tim Parrigan, Eric Rath and Chris Runkle, 11th graders, and Steve Hall, 10th grader.

Stiff defense halts Knights; Ryman scores three TDs

A vigorous defense that limited Northmor to just one first down in the second half led Plymouth to an 18 to 2 victory over the Golden Knights here Friday night.

Intermittent drizzle held down the size of the crowd.

A brief memorial tribute to William L. (Bubba) Van Wagner, 2nd, who played with exceptional skill on the Big Red teams in 1968, 1969, 1970 and 1971, was conducted before the game.

Plymouth's offense came alive just once, producing a 15-play drive with the second half kickoff that covered 67 yards for the third score.

At no time was the Big Red able to make a nickle with an extra point try.

After eight minutes, there wasn't a fan at Robert A. Lewis Memorial field who wouldn't have traded Plymouth's chances for an old gum wrapper.

Northmor tackled Tim Deskins in the end zone for a safety with 4:41 remaining in the first period. It came during Plymouth's second possession of the game.

The first series produced a net loss of three yards by rushing and five by penalty. Junior Porter punted out.

Northmor started from its 47 and punched to the Red 15, where Kick Liberty's pass for Mark McMaster in the end zone fell incomplete.

Tim Deskins ran into his interference on the next play and lost a yard. On second down, Plymouth was penalized half the distance to the goal on a holding violation and on third down, Keene's pass to Deskins from the two lost yardage and covered the safety.

In Northmor's first series of the second quarter, Liberty sought to punt from the Knights' 49. The snap sailed over his head and before he could recover it Northmor had lost 23 yards.

Plymouth set out from the Golden Knights' 26 and in nine plays snapped over his head and before he could recover it Northmor had lost 23 yards.

Spartans win over golfers

Spartans of St. Peter's outshot Plymouth at Possum Run Thursday, 163 to 190.

Dave Thompson of St. Peter's and Larry Trout were co-medalists with rounds of 39, four over par.

Wildcats choice over Plymouth

Last time Plymouth played New London in football, in 1950, the Wildcats won, 63 to 0.

It won't be anywhere near like that score in Mary Fete park tomorrow as the Big Red opens defense of its Firlands conference championship. Nevertheless, Plymouth is an underdog. By how much, which is what the gambling fraternity wants to know, hardly anybody knows.

Coach Richard Roll said Saturday, "New London has a very good team and even though it was shelled by Wellington last week, bear in mind that Wellington is an exceptional team. New London will give us all we can bargain for. They have a reputation for being hard-hitters and we expect a tough game."

The Wildcats, coached by Bob Haseman, have an experienced quarterback who can throw and run. His name is Steve Kozel. He completed passes for over 800 yards last season, as an 11th grader, when he was sharing the job with Bret Cooke, who threw for almost as much. Steve Kozel is 5'11 and this season and Plymouth's so far untied secondary (Steve Hall intercepted five passes Friday night, in what has to be considered a poor showing by Rick Liberty, the Northmor passer, who usually completes 60 per cent of his throws) may be hard put to contain Kozel.

Kent Ross, an 11th grader, is the main running back.

There are 11 lettermen on the Wildcat squad.

Jeff Romine will also do his share of running the ball.

Shawn Tappel plays wingback. The Wildcats figure to be outweighed up front. Dave Skolnicki is a 12th grader who plays at guard. His classmate, Scott Bartell, is on the other side of the center. Between them, they scale 300 pounds.

On defense, the Wildcats haven't been so formidable, but they have had to cope with Class AA clubs in two of three outings. They met Perks in the first game, then South Central, then Wellington. They licked the Trojans, 14 to 0.

Kozel is also the Wildcat punter. Haseman has 41 players on his travel team. Of these, 11 are 12th graders and seven are 11th graders. All the same, only a handful of this group has more than slight game experience. Game time is 8 p. m.

Girls record first triumph

First triumph of the season was recorded Sept. 11 by Big Red volleyball team. And it was a lopsided one.

Sarah Robinson scored 14 points on service for the Big Red. She recorded three aces. Tracy Keene scored 10 points for Plymouth.

Happiest woman in town? Miss Lisa Diebley, new coach. It was her first victory, too.

Plymouth reserves prevailed, 15 to 1 and 15 to 5.

Johnny-come-lately: 'Teaching's challenging!'

The hair is gray, the face shows the handsome lines that come of age, of care, of concern, of love, of dedication to a job.

And the eyes gleam - they're past twinkling - when she gives voice.

What does she say? Why? Upon what does it depend? What is its intent?

Who and what is she?

She is Mrs. Wayne H. Strine, nee Agatha Althouse, married nearly half a century, a teacher and guide to pupils of Plymouth Local School district since the annexation with Shiloh a quarter of a century ago. She entered her profession as a Johnny-come-lately.

"My youngest child had just started to school when I began college. I was 34 years old. And like a lot of college girls, I was pregnant when I was graduated. I've been lucky. We had just the best persons in the whole world to watch out for our youngest, who's married now and a father on his own, and the business of keeping a family going and teaching wasn't so difficult as it could have or might have been."

She was graduated by Ashland college in 1957 and she was hired as home economics teacher assigned at Shiloh that year. Her husband was already an administrator in the Plymouth district, an assignment from which he eventually retired, having held every administrative post in Plymouth schools save superintendent.

"I didn't want vocational home economics as a job or assignment because I didn't want to, indeed, I couldn't, sacrifice that additional time in extended service, away from my family."

How much family? There were three boys and a girl, each of whom is a Plymouth graduate. Wayne E., the eldest, is now the city's William's auditor of the City of Ashland. Marlene, now Mrs. Michael Evans, is a housewife in Fairfield. And Earl lives and works in Willard. There are nine grandchildren, and there is a high school pupil here and lives with the Strines.

"I enjoy teaching... I prefer doing it one-on-one."

"I enjoy teaching. And I prefer doing it one-on-one, if that's what I can. Which is why I seized the opportunity to become librarian, because my work is mostly with individuals rather than with classes."

"Why is the librarian's job so attractive to a mature woman?" "The discipline problems are fewer, for one thing. Now get this straight: There isn't so much of a discipline problem here at Plymouth as you'll read about elsewhere, but such as there is, I need not deal with it. If someone acts up or misbehaves in the library, I simply send him back to where he came from. I don't often send anybody to the office. Last year there was one. That's the only one I remember, lately, that is."

And it was? "I tell everybody that comes in here that they can call me what they like so long as I don't hear it. But when I hear it, I feel compelled, out of self-respect as a person and out of

"I tell everybody that comes in here that they can call me what they like so long as I don't hear it. But when I hear it, I feel compelled, out of self-respect... and for my role as a teacher, to deal with it..."

respect for my role as a teacher, to deal with it. I wrote up a slip and the offender was dealt with by the principal, whom I have found to be a fair man who backs up the teacher when that's necessary yet who is sympathetic with the needs and wants of the pupil."

What happened? "The offender denied saying what I had heard said. A different consonant was placed before the word by the offender. But the principal said, 'Whether it was cat or bat (those weren't the words), it makes no difference, what you meant was clear, wasn't it? We don't allow that around here!'"

Is it possible for a female teacher, in these times, to be a good wife and mother and a good teacher at the same time? "It's possible but it's not easy. Each teacher gets, or is supposed to get, a personal period during the day when the teacher can think about her children and what she will prepare for dinner and how much it will cost to buy her boy a pair of shoes and if she has enough money in her purse to get the groceries. Not everybody can do it then, or does it then. And I suppose the teacher suffers, the pupils suffer and the family suffers. It takes an exceptional person to do both. There are some exceptional people in the teaching profession, not enough of them, fewer now than when I started, for a lot of reasons, mostly that many exceptional people that 20 or 25 years ago were going into the teaching profession now are choosing other lines of work."

How do pupils of 1984 differ from those of 1957?

"They seem more limited in their topics of discussion. Television has changed our lives so much, not for the better, either."

"They seem more limited in their topics of discussion. Perhaps this is a reflection of the times. Television has changed our lives so much, not for the better, either. Pupils of today, generally, I find, have insufficient background. They show the reasons for that, in part, by what they choose to read. They tend to want to read books that relate to their lives today. They don't go for books that were written a generation or two generations ago, no matter whether they're classics or almost classics. That's beyond the range of reference they want for themselves. If we don't have books that deal with today and tomorrow and the problems of today and tomorrow, we won't get readers in the library. Here or anywhere else.

"Do I think pupils read less well today than say, 25 years ago? Yes, I think that's so. It may be that there were fewer readers then, but that they read better, and more, than today. Whatever, there is a change and we've got to deal with it."

Where? "It must start lower down than the high school. Mrs. Lillo, who is the librarian at Shiloh, has started pupils to using the Reader's Guide, for example. She takes the copies of last year from here and uses them. And almost I can see how much it has helped."

"I think you're right when you say that few of the pupils that are graduated can communicate in writing effectively. Steps are being taken to overcome that. Last year, for example, Mrs. Ream assigned advanced English pupils to prepare an investigative theme as a term paper. The results were somewhat spotty. This year there will be at least three such papers. Those who don't do so well with the first will be expected to improve with the second and to have

"... Of course, the problem is that a teacher has a terrible time in reading, say, 125 term papers and grading them with significant comments in some detail..."

grasped at least the concept and the fundamentals by the third. Of course, the problem is that a teacher has a terrible time in reading, say, 125 term papers and grading them with significant comments in some detail. It may be impossible. What results is that the pupil is directed to submit a shorter paper: the whole effort is greater than the year before, but each part of it is less than what was done previously."

How can the inability to communicate be overcome? "There are many parts.

"... what Plymouth needs most is... some kind of program that entices the young people to use their minds more..."

Some of the cure is a bandaid kind of thing, and it works. Such as more in-depth assignments by classroom teachers, assignments that make pupils use their minds more. And to answer your question about what Plymouth needs most, in my view, it's this: some kind of program that entices the young people to use their minds more. The Cub Scouts and the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts and the Midget League are all very well, my children were part and parcel of them, but there has to be something more. Don't ask me what it is or should be, because I don't know. But we must equip our children not only to compete but to compete so that they will succeed at least as well as the top group. If you're going to play the game, you might just as well win.

"We need to encourage teachers more like the idea of three levels of teachers: the early, or inexperienced level, where the young teacher is closely supervised by an experienced teacher, who visits the classroom two or three times a week and prepares detailed oral and written reports of how well or poorly the young teacher succeeded; the second level, which comprises some of these persons and others of experience and talent and skill, and the master teacher level, those who still teach, perhaps deal with the most difficult classes to teach, and who also serve as role models for the others and who spend part of their time 'coaching the coaches', which is teaching the teachers, on the ground, so to speak.

"But, for Heaven's sake, don't ask me how to decide which teacher will be in which category, who will put them there, and how the pay scale will be adjusted."

Pay scales, do they occupy a teacher's thoughts?

"Oh, yes. When my husband taught in his first year, he got $500 for the whole year. He started on a two year certificate, after we were married, and he had to go to college and get his degree and get his master's degree at a time when teacher and administrator salaries were very low. It wasn't easy. We did without some things sometimes. Why, some teachers on the staff here today are paid more than my husband ever drew as principal."

If there were a younger Strine ready to opt for training for a career, would she recommend teaching? "Oh, my yes, by all means. Why? Because I've been so happy with what I've been doing. Despite the problems at the school, it's been a good life and I wouldn't change a thing in it. Well, I take that back. Let's say not many things."

"... it's been a good life and I wouldn't change a thing in it..."

What advice is there for the new teacher here? "Become involved in the community. We've been here since 1952 and we've always felt we are strangers. Perhaps that's our fault. My husband's "... We've been here since 1952 and we're always felt we are strangers..."

family was in Ashland, where we lived for a few years early on in his career here - our daughter was in the second grade when we came here, and my family was in Galion and when we had free time, we naturally spent it with our families.

"Plymouth is a strange town. It doesn't take to strangers very well. Oh, I know what you're going to say! It's that the population here has changed to much in the last 10 years or so that it's hard to find an old Plymouth family left. I agree, but the town could still be friendly."

"Perhaps the reason that teachers don't mix with the community so well is that there aren't many opportunities to mix. The churches don't socialize as they used to. Besides, some new teachers, perhaps a good many of them, don't wear their religion on their sleeves and they don't make any thoughts of it, for whatever reason."

"Neither are there many places where they can mix. The tone of some places doesn't appeal to some teachers. I can't say as some teachers who rightly or wrongly feel that their professional scorecard will be affected by their social scorecard. It certainly is difficult for a young, college-educated female teacher to find congenial social contacts of her experience and preference in a community that doesn't have very many young men of the same attitude, training and experience. Aside from the teaching profession, anyway."

After a generation and then some as a teacher and librarian, any thoughts for those who're coming on behind?

"Yes, one in particular. Teach to the individual but teach to all individuals. Teachers generally fail to teach on an individual basis. Each of those children who comes to class is the object of love and pride and hope of his family and it's the teacher's job to get as much of those out of that child as possible. Not possible for that teacher, but possible for any teacher, because chances are the child won't have another opportunity to be affected by another teacher at that age level."

"... Teach to the individual but teach to all individuals. Teachers generally fail to teach on an individual basis..."

no! I've tried to do that. I may not always have succeeded. But by gosh I've tried. And I still am!

Amen. The smile would disarm a Philistine.

Max Caywood, organist, played a prelude of nuptial music and accompanied Valerie Hiner. She sang "Perhaps Love", "Through the Eyes of Love", "Candle on the Water" and "Turn Around".

After the couple repeated the vows, the guests sang the hymn, "Love Divine, All Love Excelling".

The bride approached the chancel to Mendlesohn's "Wedding March". She was given in marriage by her parents.

She wore a white silk gown of organza designed with a Victorian neckline with a small lace ruffle. A wide ruffle fell from the lace bodice into a sleeve.

The full skirt was ruffled at the hemline.

Her coachman's hat was trimmed with seed pearls and white silk flowers. A fingertip veil fell from the brim.

She carried a bouquet of roses, daisies and baby's breath.

A silver English sapphire was hidden in her shoe.

Her sister, Shelly, was maid of honor. The bridegroom's sisters, Caren and Cathy Carson, were bridesmaids.

They wore lilac gowns of layered chiffon. They wore flowers with baby's breath in their hair and carried baskets of flowers.

Friends of the bridegroom, Jay Baker, Rob Camp and Mark Baker, Shelby, ushered.

Mrs. Root chose a lavender dress with a lace bodice. Mrs. Carson wore dusty rose with chiffon sleeves and bodice. Both mothers had wrist corsages of daisies and baby's breath.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. H. James Root, wore a silk dress of deep aquamarine.

Mrs. Ross Van Buskirk, the bride's maternal great-grandmother, chose a two piece pink dress.

Mrs. E. Duane Baker was the hostess for the reception at Ehret-Parrel Post 447, American Legion, decorated with lavender flowers and wedding bells.

Guests were assisted at the buffet table by Jackie Ernst, Beth Packham, Shannon Baker, Lisa Diane Baker and Lisa Ann Baker.

The bride's cousin, Mrs. James McClure, served the wedding cake, decorated with garlands of white daisies.

Mrs. McClure's daughter, Amy, registered guests. Rice with which to shower the couple on departure was distributed by David Webber, son of the John Webbers, Ontario.

It holds heat so well, an entire heating system is built around it.

Electric Thermal Storage, ETS, is a unique whole-house heating system built around bricks.

Heating coils inside an ETS furnace heat the special bricks hot enough to heat your home all night. And all the next day.

Because ETS uses electricity at night, when the cost of electricity is less, ETS customers qualify for special rates. So you'll get lower electric rates for heating. And for all other electricity you use at night. What's more, the same lower rates apply all weekend.

ETS heats your water, too. And individual room heaters are available, which let you comfort control any room.
