

To succeed fired coach— Dover man, 25, hired to coach girls' quintet

A 25-year-old Dover man now teaching in Lincolnview Local district, Van Wert county, where his colleague is a Plymouth graduate, is the new head girls' basketball coach and sixth grade teacher.

He is Michael Badertscher, an alumnus of Bluffton college, who was offered a contract Monday night after Plymouth Board of Education interviewed him and three local candidates for the post.

These were Mrs. John Echel, berry, present reserve coach; S. Michael Tracey, former boys' head basketball coach, and Larry Kamann, a 1969 alumnus of Plymouth High school, where he excelled in basketball and baseball.

Badertscher would have been boys' reserve basketball coach this season. He has experience with boys and girls in lower basketball to competition and has served as assistant volleyball coach.

A Plymouth alumnus of 1963, Allen Arnold, is head of the English department in Lincolnview High school. He also is a Bluffton college graduate.

$30.47 a ton bid low for paving here

Low bid of $30.47 a ton of blacktopping by Eric Blacktopping will be accepted for this year's street repaving by James C. Root, village administrator.

Village council gave him the authority to accept the lowest and best bid when they were received Friday.

Four other companies filed tenders. They were S. E. Johnson, $32.60 a ton; Mansfield Asphalt, $34.50 a ton; Sarver Paving, $34.70 a ton, and Kokosing Construction, $35.40 a ton.

Erie did last year's work, which Root has said was satisfactory.

He plans on the repairs starting within a few weeks.

Two companies bid on the pole barn for Greenlawn cemetery. Owens Construction, Willard, was low with $11,000. Baldrige Construction's bid was $12,800.

The bids are for a completely finished building.

It is now up to the village council to determine which bid to accept.

Split vote approves Echelberry fire pay

By a vote of three to two, village council agreed June 11 to pay Kenneth Echelberry for fire runs and ambulance calls during the working day, effective June 11.

For six months, since Echelberry took over the position of cemetery sexton, the problem of paying him twice from village funds has raged.

Fire Chief Wayne E. Strine has contended it is a conflict of interest and as a salaried employee of the village, he was being paid for an eight hour day for the cemetery work, rain or shine.

Richard Wolfe, 2nd, village solicitor, had told the council there was no conflict between the two positions, although he said the village should have a policy concerning the other village positions.

In the absence of Councilman E. Adrian Cole, Councilmen Roy Barber and Terry Hopkins voted yes on the motion to pay Echelberry. Mrs. Terry Jump, Bill Taulbee and Keith Hebble voted in favor.

A motion was passed to have the solicitor prepare a resolution to place a one mill levy on the November ballot for Mary Fate park.

If the resolution is passed next month, it will be the only levy on the ballot for the village.

Hebble thinks the needs of the park should be studied more carefully to ascertain if there would be funding from other village sources before voters are asked to approve an additional tax.

Clerk John Fazzino told the council the Community Chest has given the park $500 and the swimming pool $1,500. Hopkins said the Firemen's association has donated four picnic tables.

Village Administrator James C. Root voiced his objection when the question of paying the fire chief mileage money for a trip to Huntsville to take the new fire pumper to Rosnoke, Va., was raised. He said Strine had not told him beforehand that the trip had been planned and it was his responsibility to issue a purchase order.

He also said at one time Strine had asked for a purchase order for fire hose and bought coats instead. The solicitor was asked to write a letter concerning the unsightly condition of a Bell street property, about which there have been numerous complaints of overgrown trees and brush and abandoned vehicles.

The voice of The Advertiser— Some ideas at matriculation

For the first time in our memory, one whose application to be educated with the funding of others was looked upon favorably because of our efforts came to the scene of the crime to express thanks.

Which were most appreciated, we are quick to state. There was an observation made by the prospective collegian that excited a nerve.

"This town is no different from any other place, we put our pants on one leg at a time just like they do, we like steak and French fried potatoes and ice cream like they do, we're all the same."

Which brought to mind these data from a recent survey prepared by David Williams, Southwest Educational Development laboratories, Austin, Tex.

He made inquiry of 3,000 parents.

And among his findings:

- 77.5 per cent of the parents took part in open houses and other special school programs;
- 67 per cent attended parent-teacher conferences;
- 64.6 per cent helped their children with their homework;
- 58.5 per cent took part in P-TA activities.

If our young friend is so naive or inexperienced as to assert that we compare favorably with those data, assuming they are valid, he is due for a sad, not to say rude, awakening.

Matter of fact, we think we will call him on the telephone to suggest that when he has matriculated he ought to tell the dean that he wants to major in some discipline that will give the answers to the obvious questions, which are "How do we get as many as 77 per cent of parents out to open houses and other special school programs other than athletic events?" "How do we attract 67 per cent of parents to attend teacher conferences?" "How do we draw 58 per cent of parents to P-TA activities?" "How do we ensure that 64.6 per cent of parents will help their children with homework?"

And we'll also suggest, as strongly as we can, that inquiry ought to be made of the dean thus: "How can this university teach me to want to go back to my home town to teach the folks there what you have taught me?"

A few words about pride.

To a world striving to communicate, we provide quality communications products and services. In an era of technological advances, we are a leader in innovation. Yet our pride is being part of the communities we serve—the cities and towns which look to GTE for answers to communications needs. We're proud of those communities and we're proud to be part of them.

The front runner in communications. And proud of it.

"Our heat pump works just like our refrigerator."

In the summer, a heat pump works the same way as a refrigerator does—it pumps the heat out to keep things cool inside. In the winter, a heat pump keeps you warm by pumping heat from outside into the house. The heat pump is so wonderfully efficient and economical because it pumps the heat that's already in the air. A heat pump delivers two units of heat for each unit of energy it uses because it doesn't have to generate heat, just pump it. And that saves you money. No doubt about it—for dependability, economy and year-round comfort, the electric heat pump is a great value.

Reds win again, rout Cubs, 30 to 3; Indians prevail

Pete Rose could take lessons from PML Reds. They've got him beat at the start: they're undefeated!

PML Reds stormed to their fifth consecutive victory Thursday collecting 15 hits in a 20 to 3 rout of Cubs, who are anything but the equals of their National League namesakes. PML Cubs have lost every game so far.

Once more Brian Combs went to the hill for the Reds and once more he was deadly. He allowed only two safeties, he struck out 12, he walked nine.

And at the bat he was equally devastating.

In five turns, he got four hits, two doubles, a single and an inside-the-park home run.

His battery mate, Brian Slone, had three safeties.

The Reds put it away in the second with seven scores off Jason Rook, who went three frames, gave up nine runs on six hits, walking seven and fanning four. Reds got 11 runs off his relief, Bret King, who allowed nine hits, six walks and got only two K's.

In three sports—

Ex-Red star winner of stipend

A 1979 alumnus of Plymouth High school, now an electrical engineering student in the University of Cincinnati, has received $1,000 from the American Consulting Engineers Council's national scholarship competition.

He is Michael R. Berberick, one of 23 students selected to receive awards from 62 national finalists. The council awarded the students $50,000 from voluntary contributions by ACEC member firms.

The Ohio Association of Consulting Engineers, which selected him from among other statewide candidates and sponsored him in the national competition, presented the check to him in local ceremonies.

He is the son of the Robert Berbericks, 330 Trux street.

Berberick's 3.89 grade-point average (out of a possible 4.0) is augmented by his participation in Tau Beta Pi national engineering honor society, professional organizations, community activities and intramural sports on campus.

The winners collected 30 hits, including five by Nancy Beverly and four for four by Chris Ross and Rhonda Barber. Miss Beverly struck a double, Angie Oney two doubles.

Loretta Hayes went two innings, fanning one and walking five. Miss Oney finished up, striking out three and passing six in four frames.

Hall hits 4-for-7, grand slam as pitcher

Steve Hall, Plymouth's traveling baseball pitcher, traveled substantially over the weekend to three victories by Mansfield Trailblazers.

He pitched his team to a 15 to 5 win over Springfield Sunday, allowing six hits and two earned runs in six innings of work.

He douled two home runs, one a grand slam, a double and a single and drew a pass in seven trips to the dish on Sunday. The Trailblazers won the nightcap as well, 14 to 2.

Trailblazers whipped Columbus St. Charles, 6 to 2, on Saturday.

They will play 12 games in six days in Nashville, Tenn., beginning Sunday.

Trailblazers are now 6-and-0 in the Georgia State League for 16-year-olds in Columbus.

'Vous etiez, tous, si gentil!'

She never dreamt, when she was a young girl singing the songs of World War I in her classroom in Wood county two generations ago, that she would serve breakfast at her kitchen table to a true rose of Picardy.

And that's exactly what Mrs. Marvin Courtwright did at the Courtright home in North street last week.

Her cousin, Mme. Madeleine DeGraeve Beauget, of Peronne-Flamincourt in Picardy, and her aunt, Mme. Marthe Quaebeuf DeGraeve of Houthulst, in Belgium, came to Plymouth to see personally one of their family that was until last week only an imagination reinforced by post.

The two widows (Mme. DeGraeve is 75 years old, a widow for nine years; her niece, a generation younger, was widowed four years ago) flew from Brussels directly to Detroit, Mich., where Mrs. Courtwright's kin from Leispic met them and took them home to rural Wood county for a few days. After their visit here, which ended Sunday, they went on to Lima to see other kin. And on Tuesday they are flying back to Brussels.

The cultural shock of small-town America was both sharp and deep.

"Is it what they imagined? "Yes and no. You have so much space around your houses here, which is what we do not have in Belgium," observed Mme. DeGraeve. "And the American fashion of eating is much different from ours."

How so? "Our heaviest meal is at noontime, and we always have a soup, sometimes a heavy soup. The favorite in Belgium is made with lentils which are absolutely magnificent. I do not understand that you do not grow more lentils. They are easily raised and they are so delicious when made into a soup."

And with perhaps 60 years of experience in the kitchen, this blue-eyed, remarkably intense Belgian woman promptly recites the recipe for so-doing.

To which she adds a recipe for preparation of chicoree, what is called Romanette lettuce here, involving cooking it, and another for red cabbage, a staple in Belgium.

Where, she hastens to add, one vegetable is served at a time, and only one, whereas over here you have several vegetables, and they are all very good, but it is different from what we do. "And many of them served raw!"

The septuagenarian visitor was struck by the absence of "queques magazines" — many stores — "even in such a small town". She added quickly, "In Belgium, in a town of this size, there would be many more small shops and stores and several cafes, places where one can buy something to eat and something to drink, as well."

And she inquired why. Whereupon she gave a brief lesson in what happened to small towns as retail centers in this country.

Mme. DeGraeve was struck also by what she promptly labelled "your social contract". She inquired about layoff pay, referring to the Courtwrights' young son, Mark, as an example. Depends upon the length of time employed and the nature of employment, she was told. "And do families with children receive as in the case in Belgian state subsidies?" She was assured they do not. "Then what sort of assistance do those who need it get from the government?" And her face lighted up and then grew somber as her aunt described the cost of child care and aid to dependent children system in this state, including its cost to the taxpayer.

Both women showed keen interest in American politics.

Confessed Kennedy-philes, they inquired what was the sentiment in this country after the widowed Jacqueline "married the Greek with so much money". They seemed satisfied with the response, delivered with the disclaimer that it was the reaction of just one American who admittedly was no admirer of President Kennedy.

And what of Nixon? And of Reagan? Their hosts got the strong impression that Europeans are considerably more well informed about matters American than Americans are of matters European, much less specifics of Belgium and France.

Is there juvenile delinquency in Belgium and France? Is there substantial drug traffic? Do young people use drugs in large numbers?

Their smiles turn to frowns. Ah, yes, indeed there is juvenile delinquency. And there is heavy traffic in drugs. And many young people — and others, as well — use drugs. It must be universal, they observe.

And the police? The question is theirs.

The police, they are told, try to cope with the problem as best they can. Trafficking has a higher priority than using, so far as our police are concerned.

"Humph," observed Mme. DeGraeve. "That may be so with our police, but not until after they get theirs."

Confessed Roman Catholics, the two widows made discreet inquiry about the number and influence of persons of their faith in Ohio and open inquiry about the Amiah, "a curious people that interest us very much". Whence did they come? How do they live? What do people think of them?

It is rare that the interviewer turns the question upon the interviewer.

First things first. Ohio's population is about 35 per cent Roman Catholic. There may be 125 Roman Catholic families in Plymouth, where their church is a mission church, required to share the services of a priest with another.

Black ink on white paper does not adequately nor duly depict the attitude of the older widow toward her church.

"In Belgium the church asks always for money, money, money. The priest has a full wine cellar, he always has a television and a radio and a car and plenty of household help. Those who live in the rectory do so in fine style, but the poor's toes stick out of their shoes. And where does the money go?"

The question is rhetorical. At least, she expects no answer. She has it on the tip of her tongue.

"It goes to the bishop." "Across the room two eyes light up and there is a broad smile."

"It's the same here!" The Belgian visitor is curious, as well, about les peaux rouges, the redskins, the Indians. Are there many? In Ohio? How do they live? What do they do for a living? Are they happy? Can one see them?

And to the extent possible by one's experience and knowledge, Mme. DeGraeve is told about the Mohawks, who specialize in high iron, at fabulous wages for fantastic risks taken while they install the steel that is the backbone and the ribs of the skyscrapers in New York and Boston and Chicago.

And she is told, as well, of the crass dealings with the red man that were, in part, the result of discovery of gold in the Dakotas and the treaties with the Indians that displaced them from their sacred lands, the outcome of which was the massacre of the discoverer, George Catlin, and the Seventh Cavalry at Little Bighorn, two years later.

"One hears," Mme. DeGraeve observes, "that the ancient food of the Indians is today served at some tables. Is it true that you eat bison?"

Indeed, in some places. And not so far from Plymouth, either. Bison flesh is tasty, a bit different from beef, but when crossbred with cattle is both tasty and nutritious.

"And deer? Wild game?" "Such as?"

"Birds, such as partridge and pheasant. Do you have them?" She is assured that we do, indeed, have them. Not so many as in earlier times, many as man has expanded his economic interests he has diminished the places where wildfowl and animals can nest and raise young.

And at last, the obvious question, that which gnaws at everyone on both sides of the ocean? Will there be another war?

Does Mme. DeGraeve think so? Her face clouds. Perhaps, she says, with a characteristic shrug of the shoulders. "I hope not. I hope not in my lifetime, which is almost over. I hope never. Twice is too many. But I am afraid."

And Mme. Beauget, much the more reserved, whose warmth is of a deeper strain, certainly not less enchanting, of the two, comments. "It is necessary for us all to keep our heads."

Do we think there will be a third war?

In Boston, they say the way to answer a tough question is to throw it back, perhaps in another form?

Are we not at war now? Mme. DeGraeve's face lengthens, her eyes turn away. And then she addresses her inquirer openly.

"Perhaps you are right. But at least we are not shooting."

And then she smiles. "But, we must think and speak of more pleasant things. I am delighted to meet my family here, they have been so nice to me. I shall always carry in my heart and my thoughts what a splendid time I had here among you, how warm was the greeting and the hospitality. It gladdens an old woman's heart."

Her niece, a real rose of Picardy, in fullest bloom, laughs agreement.

"Vous etiez, tous, si gentil." It translates itself.

What's your interest? Try cold zucchini soup!

By AUNT LIZ

Have you ever thought how you have changed over the years?

What you did years back do you still like to knit, go to movies, spend hours window shopping?

Maybe most of us simply do not realize that we have changed.

An interesting study has been made by an agency into what attracts people.

It did a survey in 1953 of what interested men and women, then redid it in 1983.

In a 30-year period, it discovered that fashions and clothes now come out in first place for the gals versus religion in 1953.

And it stands to reason that business now comes first with men since they have to make enough moola to pay for the clothes. Sports were first for them, but now they are second.

This is the list of the current interests in order of women: fashions and clothes, food, health, home furnishings, cultural activities, child care, travel, home-making, education and entertainment and books. (Ed. Note: Where do men come in?)

For men it's business, sports, automobiles, travel, science, politics, health, cultural activities, entertainment and education. (Ed. Note: No women?)

Where do you fit in? And why? What has really changed a whole generation is that little piece of furniture that comes forth with all sorts of interesting things and some plain trash.

The study shows that in 1953 most American households with children under four had a television, so they were brought up on it. And who can resist being a tycoon like J. R. or dressing like Alexis?

Both in 1953 and 1983, food was second for women's interests, thank heaven.

Eating is universal, everyone does it. Even the family pet. I did not realize that cats like corn on the cob until one little guy rescued an eaten one out of the garbage. He loves the stuff.

No matter where you stop for a bite, it can be the same the world over.

One of the more glamorous estates in Longhank has come up with something special that sounds as though it could come out of any back yard in Ohio.

It's for now, too. They call it Soupe de Courgettes au Gineembre Gaudin's.

We call it Cold Zucchini Soup with Ginger.

Trim and slice a pound of tender little zucchinis, peel and dice a smallish potato, and chop a half cup of onions. Then add a half cup of chopped celery and three tablespoons of peeled, mined gingerroot.

Cook them a few minutes in some butter. Add four and a half cups of chicken broth. Simmer until everything is tender. Puree it all in a food processor, cover and chill over night.

Just before putting it on the table, add a third of a cup of good cream and sprinkle some nutmeg in it.

It can be served hot too, but the secret is to let it stand overnight so the flavors mix.

Deadline set June 25 to purchase reprints

Pre-publication sale of two reprints sponsored by Kinologists is nearing the final date, June 25.

The two books are an atlas showing the landowners in Huron county for 1842, 1873 and 1891 and "History of the Firelands" by W. W. Williams, originally published in 1879.

Indexes have been added to both books.

The maps of 1842 have not been previously published. They are from a wall map used at the Huron county courthouse to show landowners, mills, schools, churches and cemeteries. With the later atlases added, this will be a volume of about 400 pages bound in library buckram and titled in gold.

The Williams "History of the Firelands" contains much early history of Huron and Erie counties, including Ruggles township, which became a part of Ashland county in 1846. Biographies of many early residents are also included.

Both of these reprints may be ordered from Mrs. H. F. Sturges, treasurer, 150 Coleman court, New London, 44851. Checks should be made payable to Kinologists, FHS. Cost of the maps and atlases is $27.50. Five per cent sales tax should be added as well as a $2.50 packaging and shipping charge.

The Williams history is $31 plus the sales tax and a $3 packaging and shipping charge. Books may be picked up at the Firelands Museum, 4 Case avenue, Norwalk, in which case there would be no packaging and shipping charge. Delivery of the books is scheduled for mid-August.

Kiss Farming Goodbye

Gone would be the sweet smell of the alfalfa.

Gone would be the sprawling oak next to the field, where you always stopped for lunch.

Gone would be the smell of the sticky, muddy earth after a rain.

Maybe not today, tomorrow, or next year. But someday, unless you invest in the future of farming by investing in the Future Farmers of America.

High Blood Pressure? Me?

You Bet Your Life!
23 million Americans - young and old, men and women - have high blood pressure.
Like half of them, you could have it and not know it. You can feel healthy, be active and still have it.
Treated, it can lead to stroke or heart attack. It's easily detected, and can usually be controlled.
Don't take chances. Have your blood pressure checked, and follow your doctor's orders.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS
NOW PAYING
10.94%

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts! At the current rate, you could double your money in less than seven years.
Hold your Savings Bonds
for five years and you automatically get the higher variable rates that change every May 1 and November 1. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. You'll probably earn a lot more—but never less than 7½%.

Money market rates. A guaranteed return. You couldn't ask for better reasons to buy Savings Bonds. And Bonds are still a great way to keep America strong.
Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. Purchase them at almost any financial institution.
Or easier still, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Start today.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS
Paying Better Than Ever

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least 5 years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than 5 years earn lower interest.
