

On liberty

Today is the 209th anniversary of the independence of the nation.

Americans have prided themselves on their independence. There is a classic story about two men, one English, one American, who walked into a restaurant. The Englishman walked in as if he owned the place. The American walked in as if he didn't give a damn who owned the place.

Whether this be a fair description of the brand of liberty we cherish can be put on hold, for the nonce. Let us consider just how much freedom we have (enjoy?) locally and what are the threats to it.

Those of us who live in Huron and Richland counties are the recipients of a kind of government that, while certainly not the best in these United (?) States, is equally certainly a heck of a way from being the worst. Perhaps, almost positively, farther from being the worst than from being the best.

One of the reasons for this is that we get a considerable number of services, some of them, in fact, very valuable services, for a relatively small amount of cost to the individual.

He who argues that he pays an enormous amount of money for county services, as distinguished from municipal and state services, simply doesn't know what he is talking about.

Those who are charged by law with management of the business of the two counties have of late been wont to beat themselves on the breast with claims of efficient management (which are, by and large, mostly true) while issuing dire warnings that if their revenues aren't substantially raised, and raised quickly, the counties are apt to go bankrupt.

The latest of these is Mr. Carabin, the chairman of the Huron county board. He says increasing the piggy-back sales tax is a foregone conclusion, but it won't be enough. The Congress has its machete in hand and is cutting the guts out of appropriations by which the states and the counties benefit. Lawsuits seeking massive amounts of money are pending; if juries decide against the county, as one did in adjoining Erie county, to the tune of $10 million, there will, indeed, be Hell to pay. Welfare costs continue to rise, in geometric rather than arithmetic progression. Deficit after 1966 bills are settled will amount to $500,000, at least, he says.

Although it is commonplace for those who aspire to elective office to state their qualifications and experience for that office, none of them ever seeks to make clear whether he listened to or undertook to understand warnings that were set forth when he began to conduct himself in the fashion of which he now boasts.

Yet that's what we did.

We told the officeholders, Mr. Carabin included, and he's a nice fellow, we don't mean to single him out unfairly, that:

1. Unless there is some concerted effort to prevent or control the necessity for welfare payments (read ADC, with the emphasis on the second consonant), the need to fund larger payments in these categories is certain and absolute.

2. The pendulum of justice swings both ways. It never stops on dead center. There will be, indeed there have been, some untoward awards by juries, notably against government subdivisions. They'll even out in the long run. And why shouldn't the aggrieved have the right to resort to his peers for redress?

3. Federal Revenue Sharing was intended to be a windfall. It should have been regarded as such and used as such. To have conducted one's business so that reliance upon revenue sharing and such became tantamount to a drug habit was improper, unreasonable, dishonest and undeserving of confidence or respect.

If we do not learn the mistakes of our past, we are doomed to repeat them in our tomorrows.

When you think today about how free you are, how free we all are, think for a minute about how free our government has been to mismanage - and that's what it is, mismanagement - our resources.

Hot chase produces arrest in assault

A Richland county sheriff's vehicle, careening at a speed estimated by bystanders at "over 60" and narrowly missing a collision in West Broadway, sped through Plymouth Sunday at 2:15 p. m. en route to a bizarre occurrence in Base Line road.

A 28-year-old New Washington resident, described by some witnesses as of Mexican origin, was taken into custody on a charge of felonious assault against his woman friend after he allegedly drove his light truck into her car.

The pair are said to have exchanged hot words in a lovers' quarrel before she departed westward in West Broadway. He set out in hot pursuit. He sought to force the car of the 21-year-old woman, said by other witnesses to have been the child of a village functionary estranged from her husband, off the road.

Preoccupied with his mission, he breached the stop sign at Route 698 and then halted abruptly. The woman fled her vehicle after a passenger in the man's truck told her to get out. When she did so, the excited and excitable driver put his truck into reverse gear and plowed into her car, which knocked the woman down. She was not hurt.

The angry man then fled across a field, where he was apprehended and taken to Richland county jail.

The sheriff's car, warning lights blazing but without siren, sped through the village shortly after 4:30 p. m. en route to Mansfield to incarcerate the accused.

In PFD dispute, Echelberry v. Strine - 'Uneven discipline' charged to chief Round 2 in the continuing feud between Fire Chief Wayne E. Strine and Assistant Fire Chief Kenneth Echelberry was played out at a public hearing Monday night before the council safety committee.

Echelberry requested the hearing after receiving a written reprimand and disciplinary action from Strine for not being in complete fire dress at a car fire at 2:30 a. m. at Curly's Drive-In last month.

He and his counsel, Neil A. McKown, admitted the reprimand was accurate but maintained that Strine was being selective in singling out Echelberry while others, Assistant Fire Chief Wallace H. Redden, Fireman Richard Roll and Strine himself, were not properly attired.

McKown called it "selective enforcement of the rules."

That led to a lengthy discussion of the interpretation of the existing fire department rules and regulations as to who is entitled to go directly to a fire without reporting to the fire station for fire clothing.

Echelberry said he had always carried his gear in his vehicle, but since new clothing had been issued, he was told by Strine that he could not wear the old and that the new gear could not be removed from the fire station. He said it was the only way he has of keeping check on it.

After over an hour of bickering, Councilman E. Adrian Cole said in his opinion that everyone fighting a fire should be in full gear, "All or none," he said.

Councilman Terry Hopkins, who heads the safety committee and is also a member of the fire department, said the problem needed more study and that advice should be sought from the village solicitor.

The committee was asked by McKown to withdraw the reprimand and disciplinary action until the rules are enforced for everyone.

The Strine-Echelberry feud began when Echelberry was appointed sexton of Green-Lawn cemetery and Strine contended the position was a 40-hour a week one and that Echelberry should not be paid for any ambulance or fire calls during the working day.

Echelberry won when the solicitor ruled he could be paid.

Devlin pleads guilty of pot

Formerly of West Broadway, Thomas Devlin, New Haven, pleaded guilty in Huron county common pleas court to four counts of trafficking in marijuana, one of which is a third degree felony, penalty for which is a definite term of 18 months to two years in the penitentiary and a fine of up to $5,000.

The 25-year-old Devlin will be sentenced Aug. 2.

Ellis resigns

Carl V. Ellis has resigned as a trustee of Greenlawn cemetery owing to ill health.

He has served on the board 18 years. Previously he was village clerk, and has long been active in Huron county Republican circles, including 30 years of service on the Huron county fair board, and almost as long on the county board of health.

Mayor Dean A. Cline will now appoint a new member to the board.

Until the village ordinances were recodified in 1980, membership of the board was set at three with staggered terms for continuity. When the codification was approved, the number of trustees was not set, so there can be one or more than one on the board.

Driver, 25, hits pole, power out

A 25-year-old driver was accused of drunken driving early Saturday after his vehicle left Rome-Greenwich road south of Base Line road in Richland county and struck a stop sign and a utility pole.

Electric power to Greenwich and Shiloh was partially interrupted.

Terry Helms was taken to Mansfield General hospital for treatment of his injuries, after Shiloh Ambulance personnel took him to Willard Area hospital.

Benjamin Patrick, 19 Willard, drove off the left side of Route 224 east of New Haven Saturday at 4:15 a. m. and was charged with failure to control his vehicle.

His car struck several trees.

Convicted in Mansfield Municipal court of drunken driving, Richard A. Poth, 10 East Main street, Shiloh, was sentenced to 30 days in jail, which was suspended if he has no alcohol-connected traffic convictions over the next two years.

He was placed on probation for two years and fined $500 and costs. His driver's license was revoked for 60 days.

On a related charge of operating a motor vehicle on a closed highway, he was convicted and fined $10 and costs.

Blood call to sound here twice

Plymouth will have two visits of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile from now through June, 1986.

The first will be Sept. 23 from 11 a. m. until 5 p. m.

The second will be Feb. 2, 1986, from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Both visits at the high school are a project of Plymouth Lions club.

Some subscription rates to advance

Owing to substantial increase in mailing costs, both in force and in prospect, the publisher finds it necessary to raise subscription costs.

He hopes that no local increases will be necessary. Nevertheless, out-of-county subscribers (that is, to addressees in other than Crawford, Huron or Richland counties) will pay $10 a year, effective Aug. 1, and out-of-state subscribers will pay $12 a year, effective Aug. 1.

The pattern of advances in postal rates affects copies mailed the greatest distances from the place of publication. To be fair about it, and to avoid bookkeeping difficulties that would be beyond the capacity of the small staff to manage, those who live in California will pay the same rate as those who live in Pennsylvania, Michigan or Tennessee.

Additionally, those whose permanent residence is in the county district and who remove to a sunnier clime for the winter will be required to sustain the additional cost of delivering the newspaper to them. To be fair about this, each subscriber will be required to pay $2 if the sojourn in sunnier climes is 90 days or less, $3 if more than 90 days.

All of the foregoing adjustments will take effect Aug. 1.

Brothers Vanderpool making success of roofing work

Two Plymouth high school graduates, brothers all their lives and business partners since May, 1983, have profited, and done so handsomely, by doing the job nobody else wanted and doing them well. They are Larry and Ray Vanderpool, sons of H. Newton Vanderpool, 142 Sandusky street, and the late Mrs. Vanderpool. Larry was graduated here in 1969. His brother Ray got his diploma in 1967. They went to the national capital area 10 years ago. In time, they formed Technical Roof Systems, Inc., Manassas, Va., and are servicing the District of Columbia and environs, including suburban Maryland and Virginia, in the field of waterproofing and roofing. Their contracts have taken them as far as Florida.

How competitive are they? They recently won the award of a contract to reroof the operations center of the Department of State in Foggy Bottom, a section of Washington. They were compelled to employ helicopters to lift the steel, roofing materials and ballast instead of the conventional cranes.

Larry writes the tenders for the firm. Now he has completed preparation of specifications and a tender on the reroofing of the premises at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., occupied as offices and residence by one Reagan, R. W.

When ideas fail, use dog, cat to entertain kids

By AUNT LIZ

It is absolutely amazing how much you can learn in five days.

Being a mother is so different from being a grandmother.

Grandmother as father kept on probation when visits are very far apart.

For weeks I was tearing my hair out wondering how would I entertain two kids for a couple of days.

We had absolutely nothing for kids anymore. So many of our friends saved their kids' things, I didn't. If they were not in shreds and still usable and playable, they got passed on to another little friend.

That didn't matter too much. All you need is some four-legged furry friends.

Even though they have had a dog all their lives, there is something special about Grandma's and Grandpa's dog. Then the frosting on the cake was a real live cat who loves attention and got it while their poor father kept muttering under his breath, "I hope they don't want a cat now". (He has kattenphobia.)

The other thing which comes in handy is people. They meet some nice friends, young, middle, and older. They loved the lady who made a doll and cradle out of a napkin, and thought the retired football coach who could knock on their heads so they could hear things was the cat's misao. I think he keeps that little trick in reserve for all his former players who come back to visit with their kids.

Children speak their own language, and they really take to each other. Just keep them supplied with Kool Aid and cookies, and everything is great.

Years ago I read in Dr. Spock that children should never be tatted out of their environment until about 10 or so. I guess he meant a permanent mole, not just a visit, but he was right. They wanted to be sure their mother and father were handy.

67% of teachers here exceed BA training

Latest Gallup poll shows that a preponderance of respondents would favor higher taxes to pay superior teachers.

How should teachers be rated? Some states have considered merit raises for teachers, a practice their unions adamantly oppose. They say it's fraught with politics; if a teacher doesn't butter up the supervisor, the teacher won't get a good mark and there will be no merit raise. What's more, the union, or its leaders, at least, argue that there is no suitable nor satisfactory method by which to measure the achievement of a teacher. Measurement based upon results of achievement tests develops "teaching to the test" by instructors who cherish the raise more than their dedication to the calling.

Classically, merit of teachers has been graded by training and tenure.

Longevity in this instance, tenure refers to length of service, in the teaching profession, not necessarily length of service in the present system.

There are 71 certified teachers in Plymouth Local School district. Each of them is the possessor of a baccalaureate degree.

Sixty-seven per cent of them have more than the traditional 120 semester hours of credit required to qualify for a baccalaureate degree. Twenty-nine per cent hold a master's degree.

Seventeen per cent of them have 20 or more years of experience on the job.

Half of them together have 14 or more years in the profession.

The following tables, compiled by The Advertiser from data furnished by Supt. Douglas Staggs, shows amount of training and length of service of the teaching staff in Plymouth Local School district.

Buck-Hawk contest subject of wager

What is certainly the greatest wager in Plymouth since the late Dominic J. Dorion challenged his old friend and colleague, the late Marshall H. Burns, in the 1962 general election, in which Dorion's candidate was Dwight D. Eisenhower and Burns was backing Adlai E. Stevenson, was sealed Monday in them iddle of the Public Square.

The only alumnus of Ohio State university doing business on the Square on a regular basis was challenged by the only alumnus of the University of Iowa on the outcome of the Ohio State vs. Iowa football game at Columbus in the coming season.

The stakes: loser will push the winner around the Square in a wheelbarrow.

The condition: the spot published in the Cleveland daily on the Friday before the game, whatever it is, will accrue to the supporter of that team. He must win clearly. If he uses or needs the spot, when it is added to the actual score he must defeat his opponent. A tie goes to the other wagerer.

Winner shall be accorded a reasonable time to whoop up a crowd. How much is reasonable will be decided by Dr. Pierre E. Haver.

Taking The Bite Out Of The Bear.

Some Wall Street investors spend a lot of time looking over their shoulder. Even during bull markets, when things are surging ahead, they worry about the bear showing up to take a bite out of them.

But you can get the best of the bull and take the bite out of the bear, if you join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds every payday.

Bonds have a variable interest rate, so when the bull is leading the Wall Street parade, you get to share in those higher returns. And where others may quake at the coming of the bear, you're protected by a guaranteed minimum.

Bonds let you relax and enjoy the bull markets, knowing that if the bear does make an appearance, for you, his growl will be worse than his bite.

Take stock in America.
