

Precedent feared, transfer denied by school board

No transfer of territory by Plymouth Local School district will occur this year, it was voted at education meeting Monday night.

A request to trade acreage with Buckeye Central Local School district that would allow pupils in the Plymouth district to attend the New Washington school.

Kenneth Karl earlier asked the board to trade 319 acres in the Buckeye district to Plymouth in exchange for 239 acres, thus putting his property in the Buckeye district.

Similar requests have been made in the past. Each time the Plymouth board has declined, because it feared it would set a precedent that would in time whittle away the school district.

Karl said many years ago his property was in the Buckeye Central district and two families had asked to be transferred to Plymouth, which was done.

D.M. Echelberry said he thinks it will be good for pupils to go through a change of schools. This will make for an easier adjustment when they eventually leave for college. Karl contended his children have gone through eight years at St. Bernard school in New Washington and do not want to leave their friends.

Supt. Jeffrey Sluson said Karl has the alternative of sending his children to Buckeye Central as tuition pupils.

The other alternative Karl may use is that of requesting a special election to transfer the property involved.

Approval was given to eight extracurricular sport assignments.

Rod Barnsdollar was named co-head wrestling coach. He is a newcomer here, having been head wrestling coach at Norwalk, Conn., for two years.

Daniel Donoghue was named head boys' track coach with Paul Gase as assistant.

Gary Lydy will coach junior high school boys' track.

Paul McClinton will again be head coach for the varsity girls' track team with Mrs. Randy sucker assistant.

S. Michael Tracey will be head baseball coach, David Hirsch his assistant.

Five were approved as substitute custodians. These are Christopher Gayheart, Patricia Cooper, Sam Spangler, Kathy Patrick and Kenneth R. Echelberry.

Sluson told the board that filling these positions is becoming a problem because of sickness among the present custodial staff.

Approval was given to the Robert Smiths to transfer their daughter, Danielle, to transfer to the Crestview district as a tuition pupil.

Approval was also given to have the extra curricular choir program changed from afternoon sessions to morning, with a $5 fee for materials.

Request of J. Jeffreay Conklin, band director, to allow the band to march in the Columbus' holiday parade Nov. 23 was granted. Last year the band participated in the parade in Toledo.

Granville S. Fleisher, high school principal, told the board the application for accreditation by North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges is progressing satisfactorily. The self study for faculty members is to begin Nov. 24. He said he has asked Douglas A. Dickson to help in compiling a video presentation of the school that will be part of the district's application.

Mark Sheely, elementary and junior high school principal, said the school is working with the Richland county children's services. Paul Gase represents the school.

He also said he is deeply appreciative of the help the Plymouth Fire Department offered during the Haloween parade.

ESOP awaits consultants' work on tax liability

How much do employees of Plymouth Locomotive Works, Inc., want to buy?

Jeffrey Steiner, who bought control of Banner Industries Inc., from Samuel G. Krasney and his family, wants to sell off the manufacturing division save for the aircraft parts business.

He's offered one or all of the following lines in an ESOP (employee stock ownership plan) purchase:

Plymouth Locomotive Works, Inc.

Banner Industrial Plymouth Supply Co., Inc.
Commercial Casting Co.
Raymond Machine Co.

Miles Christian, who's spent a lifetime in the employ and management of PLW and its predecessor, the Fate-Roof-Heath Co., which he joined after service as a Navy Lieutenant in World War II, and David A. Howard, the Plymouth High school alumnus of 972 who is now a Shiloh lawyer and serves as legal representative of the employees engaged in negotiations over property buyout, and some of the employee delegates met with Banner and some consultants at Cleveland Monday.

Conclusion?

"This is a slow process, made even slower by the consideration of the reforms the new tax regulations. Most of the reforms seem beneficial to an employee buyout such as is contemplated, but we need to look very carefully into what we're getting into," Christian said Tuesday.

Should local employees buy the controversial Schreck line?

Banner bought the line from a faltering outfit at Strongsville and moved it here, only to find that it didn't get all it bargained for or thought it was buying. The problems of tooling the local plant to accommodate the Schreck line, and the elusive cost factors, begged description and the consensus was, in time, that PLW simply is not up to speed, nor up and probably not later, to accommodate production of the Schreck lift truck line.

Where is the ball now? In whose court?

"It's in the court of the consultants, the experts in an ESOP, which means employee stock ownership plan, to figure out what ought to be bought, what can be bought, how much it will cost and how to go about it quickly to obtain the money to do it."

Why did levies fail at polls?

Autopsies are habitually by direction of the overseers at the scene of the demise.

The demise on Nov. 4 of the village operating levy, of the Richland county piggyback tax and of a proposed funding of the new county health district will be dealt with by the county commissioners. Post-mortem autopsies are undertaken. But he is the only public officer who isn't concerned, not to say seized, of the question, "Why?"

"Why did the village levy fail?"

It was defeated by 20 votes, 52.5 percent to 47.5 percent.

It is easier to answer how it was defeated than to say why.

Well, the outcome have different sides to every vote.

One need only to study results of the last dozen or so elections on municipal tax issues to conclude that the usual plurality of votes accorded to operating levies by voters residing in the Huron county side of the village did not materialize. One experienced student of electoral practice in the village observed at Norwalk on Nov. 4 at 9:25 p.m., "If this tax carried on the Huron side, it'd be by only four votes. I'll bet my last name the whole business got beat."

The observation was correct. No amount of obfuscation or delay occasioned by computer failure at Mansfield could change that fact.

What is important, to understand why the levy lost, is to explain why it did not obtain a stronger support in Huron county, where the population is less mobile, in large part because there is less rental housing occupied by lower income families, where freeholders in general dispose of more wealth than freeholders in the Richland county section of the village where freeholders are, for the most part, younger than those in Richland county and therefore, presumably, more willing to undertake additional taxation.

The Advertiser undertook to survey electors in the Huron county precinct. None wished to be identified and spoke only under pledge of confidentiality.

Electors were, so far as possible, separated into FFP voters, WASP voters, freeholders, retirees, those who work out-of-town, acknowledged Republicans and registered Democrats, males and females.

"I'm so mad about our water and sewer rates that I'll vote for anything until they get water and sewer rates down to where a working man can afford them" — WASP, renter.

"Nobody on the council, nor the mayor, nor the clerk, nor the administrator — nobody. I mean nobody asked me to vote for it, so I figured they don't really need it." — FFP, female, out-of-town worker.

"Unless and until the problem at the shanty is solved, so I can't vote for anything until we get unemployment, which I'm on now, I can't see any way out but to vote no. And that's how I voted." — FFP, freeholder, Democrat, PLW employee.

"To much of my pay check goes for taxes as it is. I'm not in favor of any more. Unless it's for schools, of course." — Male, public employee.

"You've got to think about what the whole council and the mayor are doing, and so far as I'm concerned, they're not doing a hell of a thing. That's helping us our costs keep going up, you can't buy anything here, there's no spirit, no pride in the town, everybody's biting everybody else's back. I'm almost sorry I live here." — FFP, Republican, out-of-town worker.

"The only taxes I'm voting for are for the cemetery and the fire department, and only then when they show me they need it." — WASP, Democrat.

"Nobody made clear to me that we need the money. Besides, the present levy doesn't expire for a year." — FFP, freeholder, out-of-town worker.

"Your paper gave some good reasons why we shouldn't vote for it, but did anybody in Willard Area hospital, where each was treated and released.

The New London driver was summoned on a charge of failure to halt at a stop sign. Mrs. Shepherd was charged with failure to wear a seat belt.

Van Wagner wins Caywood plaque

A 1944 alumnus of Shiloh High school who joined the Navy to fight in World War II, then returned to Cass township to found his family, is the fourth winner of the Gerald W. Caywood Memorial award for outstanding service to Ehret-Parsel Post 447, American Legion.

He is William L. (for LeRoy) Van Wagner, 62, younger son of the late Forrest Van Wagner, Shiloh, who now lives at 212 Trux street.

Although he was major surgery to repair knee joints, he was recognized at the annual Veterans' day dinner for contributions during the past year.

The award was established by gift of Arthur L. Paddock, Jr., and Elizabeth G. Paddock, then members of the post, in memory of their friend of over 25 years, the late past commander and longtime member of the Legion post who died of cancer.

Previous winners were Joel Van Loo, Harvey Robinson and J. Max Fidler.

Van Wagner served in the Pacific theater.

He and his wife, Dorothy, are the parents of a son, Richard, 36, in California, and a daughter, Barbara, now Mrs. Christopher Wilcox, Lexington. A son, William L., was killed when struck by a bolt of lightning while golfing. There were several grandchildren.

He joined Garrett-Riest Post 503, Shiloh, and transferred to Ehret-Parsel Post when he moved here. He was employed many years by Mansfield Tire & Rubber Co. until he was retired.

He served as commander, first vice-commander and finance officer of Ehret-Parsel post.

out-of-town worker.

I'm ashamed to say I've never been to a council meeting. I don't know more than the mayor commands. I don't know the mayor, the clerk was superintendent when I was in school and yes, I voted no, because we can't afford one single penny more in taxes." — WASP, female, out-of-town worker, confessed Democrat.

Rick Sowash, the young GOP candidate who upset Paul White, the septuagenarian Democratic workhorse for Richland county commissioners, didn't carry the Plymouth precinct. His only appearance during the post-Labor day campaign was to give a truncated of the Johnny Appleseed life story for which he extorts abandons fee for free to Plymouth Historical society, before a modest audience, only 35 per cent of which was comprised of Richland county residents who might vote.

Why did he win?

Dale Bricker, Sr., Shelby, a life Republican who campaigned and ran as an independent and ran as an independent, made enough of the vote to make a difference in the outcome if it can be determined how much of that vote would have gone to White.

He campaigned on his record of raising objections to expensive highway and administrative justice spending, and by doing so, aimed his guns at the administrators of those funds. Lawrence Heit, the engineer, and Judge Robert W. Smith

Why did levies fail at polls? Loss of Huron county vote crucial

Signs are that White was turned out for a number of reasons: Sowash is much younger, considerably more articulate. White was embroiled in the middle of two passionate disputes that angered a number of voters, even some not directly involved (the Hanna sewer situation and the landfill problem), the classic endorsement of organized labor to Democratic candidates in Richland county was denied to White, to mention a few.

Should the reelection of James Westerhold as Huron county treasurer be regarded as a mandate? If so, a mandate for what?

The Democratic opponent, Mrs. Bresson, trailed the Republican, Gene Shepherd, by a relative handful of ballots. Westerhold defeated each of them. Would he have prevailed if he had had but one opponent?

He campaigned on his record of raising objections to expensive highway and administrative justice spending, and by doing so, aimed his guns at the administrators of those funds. Lawrence Heit, the engineer, and Judge Robert W. Smith presence in Norwalk and strives to beat its competitors, the Sandusky Register and the Norwalk Reflector, to the political story, has a weekly column, called for Westerhold's resignation after the scandal of the abused child and endorsed Shepherd in the general election. Mrs. Bresson said Westerhold, who owns a radio station in Norwalk, is for that reason unfit for public office. Some deputies in the sheriff's department, in a signed letter, attacked Westerhold.

Others, however, claimed Westerhold threatened office holders. Some anonymous mailings, of an exceptionally libelous character were made to a number of public and private figures in the county.

Westerhold is genetically a Republican who is wearing an independent coat because he does not command, or has not so far commanded, the backing of the old GOP guard, the power structure of the party that doesn't hold office but determines who does. His Republican colleagues, Roy Palen and Thomas Carobin, are sometimes unable to cope with the thrusts of Westerhold's actions. Huron countyans can expect more of that sort of thing.

Republicans in Richland county have argued for a long time they are by breeding, training and experience and better qualified to manage and execute than the Democrats. For the first time in a generation, the board of commissioners is entirely Republican. The only other officers of their party in the courthouse are two common plebeian judges, one of whom, James Henson, is newly re-elected, and the coroner.

For the first time in a generation, and their party, it is in a classic situation in the Legion hall, at the bowling alley, in the pizza shop, at the time clock, wherever sensible folks gather, it is otherwise said, but for this piece, it is "They must wave the sceptre or descend from the throne."

And the first issue they've got to deal with is the loss of payback revenue.

The county health issue was started by failure to communicate effectively with those precincts where the proposed tax would amount to less than what the taxing authority was paying in annual fees.

God's old house comes down

AT RIGHT: Mrs. Paul Gosse, a member of Sacred Heart church at Bethlehem, also known as Shelby Settlement, displays a bottle removed from cornerstone of the old church building.

Bottle contains a small piece of paper. It was placed in the cornerstone in 1852. Question: how can one remove the paper without destroying either paper or bottle?

AT LEFT: Morning before crew of Kittle Truck & Equipment Co. swung its steel ball, this is how the old church stood on the rolling terrain at Bethlehem.

BELOW: One of earliest photographs of the old church, taken when its new and loft campanile was in place.

Wreckers raze first church at Bethlehem

Route 61 between Shelby and Crestline was laid out, legend has it, by "a drunken surveyor chaining a scalded snake."

The road twists and turns every few rods, often at right angles.

Down the highway a piece from Shelby is the place called, variously, Shelby Settlement and Bethlehem, where the wrecking ball was recently applied to the first brick church ever raised there.

On Aug. 15, 1851, a committee of men (even then there were well-known places in the hierarchy of the church, even in the lay offices) agreed in a meeting to build a brick church to replace the wooden edifice then in use.

These men were Johannes Baumgartner, Simon Metzger, Heinrich Dollinger, Burton Henger, Joseph Gosser, Carl Sutter and Joseph Horning. Those names can still be found on mailboxes within a stone's throw of Bethlehem.

Sixty-two persons signed the pledge book, thus promising to pay for the new church. The church was completed in two years, in 1853, but not wholly finished for several years, for there were interior appurtenances to be added. The original altar stands today in Our Mother of Sorrows Roman Catholic church at North Auburn, only four miles as the crow flies to the northwest.

When the new church was raised later, the building erected in 1853 served as a social until 1977, when a new hall was dedicated.

After that, the old structure became, as old buildings habitually do, a kind of catchall place, used for storage, whatnots and such.

Cost of maintaining the building, and of refurbishing it, prompted the parishioners to opt to level it. What they'll do with the site on which it stood for 133 years hasn't been decided.

They talked with animals — and painted them!

An old hand with a brush and his neighbor-surrogate have completed a volunteer labor of love.

Donald B. Shaver, 157 Trux street, a retiree of the local industry, is a seasoned craftsman with a paintbrush and easel. He makes captivating figures of apples and other fruit, figures that are dressed and clothed.

His neighbor, Eldon G. Burkett, 153 Whitney avenue, longtime member of the board of trustees of Mary Fate park, asked him to consider painting animals that comprise the children's exercise menagerie in the park. These animals are mounted on strong springs, so that when the child climbs on the, he gets a bounding ride.

Shaver, who served a few terms as park trustee himself, agreed and recruited another neighbor, Gary L. Smith, 146

Wells Avenue, to help.

The two, with paint furnished by the trustees, completed the job and all animals are now locked up in the park's storage shed, ready for the 1987 season that will open on or about May 29.

"I think that Don and Gary have done a great job," Gary said this week. "They deserve the applause of everybody and they sure as hell have got mine."

High Blood Pressure? Me?

You Bet Your Life!

23 million Americans — young and old, men and women — have high blood pressure.

Like half of them, you could have it and not know it. You can feel healthy, be active and still have it.

Unreated, it can lead to stroke or heart attack. It's easily detected, and can usually be controlled.

Don't take chances. Have your blood pressure checked, and follow your doctor's orders.
