Jodi M. Bauer is the only daughter of the J. Michael Bauers of Shiloh. She's an inquisitive child and when his Holiness Pope John Paul II came to Detroit, Mich., Miss Bauer was among the throngs to greet him.

Here's her narrative: "We stayed at the house of my Aunt Margerite and Uncle Rocky. We left Ohio at 1 a.m. and got to Detroit at 1:35 a.m. We left the house at 7:01 a.m. to see the pope. please see page 5

The voice of The Advertiser —

Rule No. 6?

The justly celebrated Calvin Trillin, in his trenchant style, recounts that his friend, Nick, who was brought up by his widowed mother compelled to work full time to support her young family, was guided by some rules written by her and fastened to the refrigerator door.

There were five of them, Nick remembers, but he forgets, at this late date, what they were.

At which point Trillian postulates Rule No. 6, two words that are almost identical. One thinks of that rule as he walks to work these brisk mornings.

Perhaps because he was seeking to rack up what the young call brownie points, he carried a garbage bag to the place where the trash hauler would collect it later. He has done this a few times over nearly 33 years, the while admitting he ought to have done so many, many times. How long, he speculates, will this pleasant relationship with the trash hauler be permitted to continue? If the scavenger should not submit what will ultimately be considered the losest and best bid, the relationship will end. And if he does, the friendly arrangement with the other scavenger that has served his neighbor of nearly 33 years so well will terminate.

As he walks northward to the intersection, he reflects on this intolerable situation and considers that it may be time to enforce Rule 6.

He turns the corner and heads east, past the domicile of the leading scowflaw of the village, one who with his younger brothers has put the village to enormous expense to deal with his multiplicity of offenses, and those of his kin, and aside from an enforced residence, albeit brief, as and aside from a guest of the state in Mohican State forest, has received little or no punishment for his obvious sins. Save for some fines, mostly quite small, hardly any of them settled at this time.

He has entered pleas of not guilty to a handful of accusations. Will they fight the man who says that's not his right. Or that it is not our duty to ensure his right to conduct himself in such fashion.

Gilbert, the lyricist of the famed composing team that included Sullivan, made great capital of "Let the punishment fit the crime". Which, doubtless, is what the magistrate did, taking each misdemeanor separately.

But is there not a greater crime here? The crime of raising the middle finger (it used to be the application of the thumb to the nose) to the public in defiance of order, if not law? Is it not time here to enforce Rule 6?

He turns at the corner and continues northbound, intending to stop at the post office. He is somewhat late this morning and he excuses this fault by observing that all of the mail, first and second and third class, will have been put up in his box.

He encounters three young friends, each of them but newly graduated, or having quit, from the high school, none of them married, and each of them visibly in what used to be called "a family way".

They are pitifully young. From the gist of their boisterous (which could be spelled "boysterous", as well) conversation he reinforces his first impression, obtained long since: these young women are not grown up enough to be a suitable parent to a child. And he thinks that it may be time, somehow, in some way, to enforce Rule 6.

Which is, "Enough's enough!"

Miss Branham chosen queen at Homecoming

Donell Branham is the 1987 Homecoming queen.

For the first time since memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the winner of the balloting was not announced until the moment of coronation.

She is the daughter of the Donald Branham, a 12th grader who belongs to the Louis Bromfield Chapter, National Honor society, plays basketball and runs in cross country and track and field. The twin sons of the John Harts carried the football, the twin daughters of Coach Richard Roll and Mrs. Roll the queen's crown.

Kin of chief, Mrs. Beebe, 77, dies at Willard

Maternal grandmother of Police Chief Stephen J. Caudill, Mrs. Harry Beebe, 77, 1467 Miller road, Willard, died in Hillside Acres Nursing home there Sept. 22 of a half-sister, Leah Swartz, died earlier.

Born Irene Bickel in Thompson township, Seneca county, she lived in Norwich township, Huron county, most of her life. She was widowed in 1971. Two brothers, William and Bud Bickel, and a half-sister, Leah Swartz, died earlier.

She also survived by a son, Richard H. Willard; two daughters, Mrs. Julia Mae Getz, Willard, and Mrs. Gladys L. Caudill, Mansfield; two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Moyer, Willard, and Mrs. Dolores Depinet, Tiffin; nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The Rev. Edward Brandt, Trinity Lutheran church, Willard, conducted services in Willard Friday at 1 p.m. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery there.

Michael R. Taylor is chairman of membership and finance committees, Claud Row his fundraiser assistant.

Granville S. Fleisher, high school principal, and John Hart, middle school principal, will be co-chairmen of the visiting expert authority-artist committee.

Classroom teachers may apply for grants of up to $200 to augment public and other funds for use in special projects, such as field trips.

Write-in candidates file for council, board

What shapes up as a bitter campaign for write-in selection as councilman and another write-in effort that would, if successful, give Plymouth Board of Education for the first time in its history a husband-and-wife representation is assured for Nov. 5.

H. Lee Welker and Bill Taubee, both incumbent councilmen, Welker by appointment, Taubee by election, both R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. employees, and Mrs. Wanda Caudill, wife of Police Chief Stephen J. Caudill, have declared their intent to seek election to two vacancies on the village council. Terms of Welker and Taubee will expire Dec. 31.

Taubee and Welker had a noisy, almost violent falling out over whether the council ought to approve the controversial ordinance to seek one trash hauler and compel each householder to make use of his services.

Taubee, whose support of the measure derives from a dispute he had with a scavenger who objected to his including of the trash of his neighbor for the lowest fee, is solidly for the proposal. Welker is against it.

Mrs. Caudill says she would vote nay, if given the opportunity.

John Fazzini, retired superintendent of schools and resigned clerk-treasurer, filed his nominating petition in due time and his name will appear on the ballot.

Mrs. Thomas F. Root, nee Joanne Lawrence of New London, who came here as a teacher after graduating from Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, almost at the end of World War II, will be a write-in candidate for election to seat on Plymouth Board of Education.

Her husband served as member and president of the board almost a generation ago. Her elder son, Thomas L., now a lawyer in Washington, D.C., has been a write-in candidate.

Another candidate in that election, David A. Howard, somewhat better organized as a write-in candidate, was successful.

It was Fazzini, who, when superintendent of schools, found he could not work successfully with Howard and precipitated the seeking of an attorney-general's opinion as to whether Howard could simultaneously serve as village councilman and school board member. The opinion came down against Howard to continue as councilman and he resigned as school board member.

Mrs. Root retired as teacher of English in Pioneer Joint Vocational school after teaching in Plymouth High school, in non-continuous tenures, for many years. She is four times a mother, a daughter and three sons, and four times a grandmother.

She will challenge incumbent Charles Reinhart and Martin McKenzie, whose names will appear on the ballot.

Hamman charged once again

Two more charges by Plymouth police have been lodged against Robert Hamman as a result of a scuffle and abusive language in the Square Monday at 9:15 p.m.

He is now charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

A friend, Scott Lynch, came to his aid. This resulted in three charges against him, disorderly conduct, obstructing official business and resisting arrest.

Both will appear in mayor's court.

Police 'sweep' hits Shiloh

A meeting on Sept. 23 with the police committee of Shiloh's village council and the newly appointed sheriff, H. Dale Shelder, resulted in a decision to "enforce the law strictly" and turmoil and commotion in downtown Shiloh Friday and Saturday nights ensued.

Police vehicles bearing the sheriff's department insignia and some undercover cars, whose occupants fanned out, stopped every pedestrian and vehicle rider and issued summonses by the dozens, came to Shiloh.

The police committee, Councilman C. R. Reeder, Mrs. Ronald Powers and Robert Barker, and Mayor Delmar Nesbitt said it had received numerous telephone calls to "clean Shiloh up" and they said, "What we did Friday and Saturday was just that."

Under normal circumstances misdemeanors in Shiloh are dealt with in Shelby Municipal court. For this please see page 3

Finder's fee report 'tale', hospital president asserts

A finder's fee to be paid in event of a merger, lease or sale of Willard Area hospital?

Not in the cards, nor any written or oral contract with anybody. Joseph R. Lokes, 296 Plymouth Springfield road, president of the hospital's board of trustees, said Monday morning.

He spoke out in response to a report in Willard media that Cousmanman Jack Fryman said at a public meeting he knows of such an agreement and volunteered to "see if I can get a copy of it."

Lokes said "the trustees run the hospital. HMP doesn't run the hospital, and no such agreement by the trustees has been made."

He challenged "anybody to bring forth any alleged documents showing any conspiracy relating to the hospital, its administration or the board." This apparently was in response to a report said to have originated with a member of the board of trustees that a recently departed employee, bitter over the unfair treatment he claimed the hospital gave him in his termination, had turned over to him some documents that implicate a leading Willard industry, a Willard real-estate man and the hospital administration in secret talks, with a prospective suitor that would lead to merger before April of this year, when the trustees were first advised by Hospital Management Personnel, Inc., to consider such an action to resolve the hospital's fiscal problems.

Lokes acknowledged an uninitiated breakdown in regular furnishing of hospital fiscal data to the council of Willard, as required by the lease agreement entered into 20 years ago. He said this was the result of the retirement of a veteran employee who usually dealt with that procedure and "the successor simply didn't pick up on it."

Lokes said he and Frederick M. Welfel, chief executive officer of the hospital, decided not to meet with the city council to explain further details of the hospital's fiscal straits and give a preliminary overview of merger discussions because the council declined to conduct the discussion in camera. Meetings with a citizen's group was declined because Lokes and Welfel feared that to do so when Rodney Steele, a nurse-anesthetologist in the hospital, who is a member of the group, was present might be a "conflict of interest."

Meeting with another citizen group, headed by Mmes. Betty Leonard, a leading hospital volunteer, and June Taylor, was not effected, Lokes said, because the hospital "didn't know who was representing whom."

Lokes apparently sought from the hospital the names and addresses of members of the hospital association for the purpose of soliciting 25 per cent of them to petition for a special meeting. This request was declined. "We aren't authorized to reveal anyone's name and address by reason of his membership in this or any other organization," Lokes said.

Lokes blamed unwillingness of local physicians, whom he did not identify, for failure to progress with a management scheme to deal with declining admissions and revenue resulting in red ink.

Lokes opened with remarks about "spreading of rumors" later he said the trustees "would hope for and they expect of the citizens two things: to tell their doctors they prefer to be treated in Shiloh and to stand up and challenge anyone with negative statements about the hospital to show a copy of the document or documents upon which such statements are based."

Lokes said it will be about a month before the board will come to terms with any recommendation to merge or not merge, and if so, to merge with whom. If the result favors a merger, he said, a letter of intent would be executed. This would bind the two parties, the fiance and the fiancée, to proceed along pre- agreed lines to reach an arrangement which will meet the needs.

What needs? Lokes said only recently an estimate for refurbishing of the obstetrics ward "came in at $375,000," which he later said was $275,000 over what the trustees had been led to expect would be the cost of such work.

Lokes said in response to a leading question that none of the suitors has so far shown any desire to destroy local autonomy. "We need the support of the community, regardless of which road we take, and that support is best gained by having local control," he said.

He asserted the trustees have examined at some length most of the options available to them in resolving the hospital's dilemma save a fund-raising scheme. Lokes said the trustees tend to fear this might turn into an annual event and "I don't think the trustees could in good conscience recommend that solution."

He promised to do with specifics of a merger proposal later. He said no such offer has yet been made to the whole board of trustees.

No. 3 was ill on Homecoming night. He played a bit but couldn't hook it in the second half. Chuck Deskins hopes it's all cleared up tomorrow. If so, Trojan forwards are in for a tough night. This kid runs hard, plays hard, tackles hard.

By AUNT LIZ
Some days this world seems sadder than usual.

There are all sorts of important officials from here to there sitting around long tables trying to decide how many people they can pollish off with one instrument at a time. Hopefully, they have got tasty sandwiches and lots of hot, strong coffee that might make them out the numbers down a little.

Then there are some who spread miserable little rumors, like one country developing some kinds of instruments that can change our weather, which would be disastrous and manage to destroy all sorts of things we have in the air.

It was a real shock the other morning to hear a radio commentator whom I have listened to for some time, come right out and say X country was responsible for blowing up the Challenger.

I cannot believe that for one minute.

But there are some who simply are going their own sweet way and doing nice, worthwhile things to get along world-wide.

They are the guys on the right track of how to get along and influence people.

The Cleveland Zoo has made arrangements to exchange with Whelan Zoo in China a number of rare beasts that Americans probably have never seen.

They are sending a pair of golden monkeys, which are considered a real national treasure. Add half of a good sized onion, dried. When they are half done, add a tablespoon of flour, mix well, then stir in about a half cup of cold water to make a sauce. When it is thickened, add a little sugar and six tablespoons of cider vinegar.

Cleveland is sending some orangutans, a couple of pairs of tamarins, which are a South American form of squirrel, and other tropical birds, along with video equipment.

This is what I call being friends.
The Toledo Museum of Art, which is without a doubt one of the finest museums in this country, everything in a small masterpiece, is doing its part.

It has made an arrangement (that is a nice way to say "deal") with The Hermitage in Leningrad to borrow one of its most famous paintings, Rembrandt's "Holy Family with Angels".

It was painted in 1645 and ended up in Russia when the Empress Catherine II went on a shopping spree in 1772. It has never left Russia since.

This will be the only showing in this country, starting Monday until Jan. 3.

Toledo is sending The Heritage one of its great gems, an El Greco. Maybe there is hope for this globe after all.

We may not like each other, but no one is going to turn down a good foreign dish, no matter where it comes from.

Now that it is getting cooler, we need some things. There is nothing as tasty as a supper of sausage and German potato salad.

Recipes do vary and some say that red potatoes are best. Frankly, I don't think it makes any difference.

Start with about two pounds of boiled, peeled and sliced potatoes.

Dice about a half a pound of bacon and fry until not quite done. Add half of a good sized onion, dried. When they are half done, add a tablespoon of flour, mix well, then stir in about a half cup of cold water to make a sauce. When it is thickened, add a little sugar and six tablespoons of cider vinegar.

Pour this over the potatoes and serve.

You can also throw in a little dried celery with the potatoes. This makes it crunchier.

Their second son, Mark Curtis, weighing 8 lb., 12 oz., was born Sept. 23 in Willard Area hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Allen W. Carey, 42 Birchfield street, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herion, Lima, are the maternal grandparents.

A daughter was born Sunday in Mansfield General hospital to the Timothy Wiremans, 35 North Delaware street, Shiloh.

A daughter was born Sunday in Shady Memorial hospital to the Larry Wises, Kanator road, Shiloh.

Mrs. Root says why she'll run for board raised her family. Fourth, I believe that it is very important that women be represented on a board of education. Women represent perspectives in which an all-male group sometimes overlook. At the present time, no women represent the community on the Plymouth board.

Why do I think that I am qualified to fill a seat on the Plymouth Local School District Board of Education? I have lived in Plymouth for 39 years. I am the mother of four children, all of whom attended Plymouth schools. I am a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university and have spent almost 70 percent of my life as a student or as a teacher. I have taught school in Richland county for over 20 years, nine of those years in Plymouth High school.

My husband and I have supported the Plymouth schools continually as volunteer parents as well as with our tax dollars.

I have served various organizations and committees in this community and am a member of the Lutheran church in Plymouth.

I am FOR young people and for educating them to their fullest potential.

I shall appreciate the voters in this school district writing my name in the space provided at the front of the gray envelope in which they place their ballot card, on Election Day, Nov. 3.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
Joanne L. Root

Reserves rally wins, 14-8

Wendell Slone ran in from 18 yards out in the fourth quarter at Collins Monday to break an 8 to 8 tie and lead Big Red reserves to a 14 to 8 Firelands conference victory over Western Reserve reserves.

Plymouth jumped off to an 8 to 0 lead in the second period when Todd Wilson broke off tackle from close in. Duke Hall ran the PATs.

The Roughriders tied it in the third quarter.

The Big Red is now 2-and-1.

Seven turnovers expensive, 'Riders trounce Red, 45-0

Where is he who knows not Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance", the piece that is remembered — dum-dum-dah-dah-dah-dum-dum, dum, dah-dah-dum — at every high school commencement in the land?

Were he in attendance in Mary Fete park Friday night, he would have heard it with increasing crescendo.

Plymouth furnished the pomp — it was the annual Homecoming game, and an attractive ritual representing hours of painstaking work was acted out before the game — and Western Reserve the circumstance.

Result: the worst beating administered to the Big Red since it joined the Firelands conference five years ago. The Roughriders capitalized on breaks and mistakes and trounced Plymouth, 45 to 0.

The first few minutes of the opening period were as nothing so much as the stylized mating dance of two exotic birds. Plymouth, the less aggressive of the pair, danced its dance of seven steps and 35 yards, 28 of them a shot by Co-Capt. Dave Powers over tackle — and lost the best at the Western Reserve 29.

The Roughriders strutted and paraded for 28 yards before they lost the best.

Plymouth thrust out its breast feathers and made only five steps before getting off a poor punt — the snap in this as well as the other three was deficient — of 20 yards.

From its 40, Western Reserve tore off 20 yards in two shots by Dane Burke, the offensive star of the night (he racked up 163 yards in 11 carries), and in eight plays was in the end zone. Todd Eungard ran the last three at 5:14. The run for PATs did not succeed.

The Roughriders were to score on each of their next five possessions.

Plymouth advanced with the next kickoff to the 'Rider 36, only to fall of first down. A 15-yard dead ball foul set the Big Red back 15 yards. On third down Burke swept end for 31 yards to the Red 11. Eungard got three over tackle to the eight and with the next play scored his second touchdown on 11:54 of the second period.

The run for PATs was again short.

Eungard was back in the end zone a little over two minutes later, this time on a four yard run that climaxed a 41-yard push in four plays, the Roughriders having fielded a Plymouth punt, Burke ran the PATs.

With 3:51 remaining in the half, Burke set out outside his left tackle and sped 51 yards to score. The kick for PAT was not good.

The ritual dancing resumed in the second half. By this time Western Reserve had collected 13 first downs with 34 plays, a total of 178 yards on the ground and 63 in the air. For its part, Plymouth had eight first downs, 85 yards by rushing and 58 yards by passing. Toward the end of the half the Big Red passed on 14 straight plays, connecting on three for 32 yards and giving up possession with the 14th on an interception.

The Roughriders punted for 39 yards — Larry Jackson is a left-footed boater and a splendid one — out of bounds at the Plymouth eight. On first down Chuck Kesse, who was to be intercepted six times this brisk, damp night, threw squarely into the hands of Brad Eungard and the visitors were in business at the Red five. They fumbled on the first play, Plymouth recovered, and eventually punted away.

Plymouth lost possession by fumble in its next series and by interception in the series after that.

It was Todd Eungard who nailed Kesse's throw at the Red 31. He sped to the end zone untouched. The kick for PAT was not good.

The clock read 11:36 of the fourth period. In its previous possession, leading by the lopsided score of 32 to 0, Western Reserve sought to run up the score by kicking a field goal from the Red 26. It did not connect.

From this and subsequent conduct by Barry Pickens, the Roughrider coach, (he kept his studs on the field until the lead was 38 points), a number of Plymouth fans began to insist that they now knew what his mother did when her newborn was laid at her side for the first time. They say she did not speak, she merely waggled her little tail. South Central fans were exercised the week before, as was the Trojan coach, because they concluded Pickens deliberately ran up the score. Western Reserve won, 48 to 6.

The Roughriders were to score once more.

Plymouth chose to accept possession at its 36 after the next kickoff, reasoning with considerable recititude that it was unlikely to run the ball beyond its 36 with another kick, this time from the 'Rider 35.

After Mike Bailey got four over right tackle Kesse passed directly over the middle, where the ball was snatched by the 'Riders' Bud Hite who dashed 47 yards for the T.D. This time the placement by David Hipp was good.

The clock read 10:44. Under a new rule, Coach Richard Roll could have cried for relief and surrendered all hope and the game would be over.

An unruly boy thought he ought to have done so. He reached up and doused the lights on the south side of the field.

Neither team did much thereafter, although the reserves of Western Reserve, among them what must be the smallest player to suit up in Firelands conference history (and he did extremely well, one David Baker, an inch short of five feet tall), pushed to the Red five before penalties set them back.

The less said of the Plymouth performance, as a whole, the better. Powers played his heart out. Some others played as though the game were spin-the-bottle. The defense was so full of leaks it never would pass floatation inspection.

Although Kesse passed 38 times, sometimes well off the mark, there were a number of occasions when his receivers seemed to have been looking for the Bolivian navy; they had virtually no concept at all of where to look for the ball, even when it was well thrown. The offensive line was clearly out-charged and outplayed by the 'Rider forwards put on the field.

Pickens has a good ball club. Do the Roughriders have a good coach? Probably the answer is yes. Do they have a good man as coach? On what he showed in this one — and it be said he almost constantly railed at the officials — the jury is still out.

Older Grad: "Cowboys over Pirates is a close call. Big Red should have an easy win over South Central."

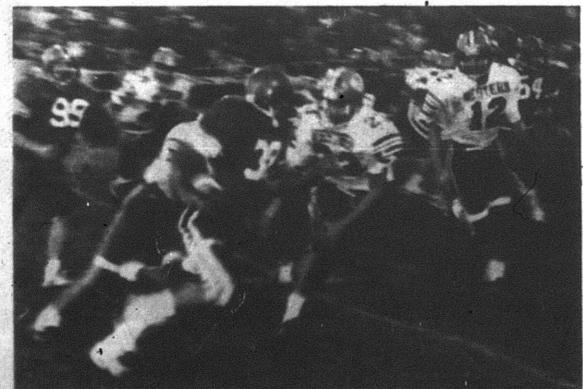

Past Dad: "Home field advantage only reason for Mapleton over Danbury. Same for Western Reserve over Eagles. Central Michigan not so tough as previously but enough, I think, to take Kent State. For BGSU to beat Arizona is for Joe Duffer to beat Nicklaus in match play."

Young Dad: "South Central is no match for Plymouth. Monroeville will beat Western Reserve; Eagles hit harder than anybody in the league with the best coaching." Old Grad: "Black River has enough to top Crestview. New London is too tough for St. Paul's. Plymouth on comeback. Danbury to top Mounties. Monroeville will beat BGSU over Illinois. Miami by six. Central Michigan by six. Toledo will get by Western Michigan. Kentucky over Bobcats and Arizona over BGSU each by 14."

Guest: "I am not a football buff, so most of my choices are guesses. Of course, I stand behind Plymouth and Ohio State. Go Big Red, stomp the Trojans!"

Slight gain

Mike Bailey, No. 38, rounds right end in 45 to 0 rout by Western Reserve here Friday. No. 99 is James Fletcher. No. 12 of the 'Riders is Brian Eungard.

Girl visits Detroit, sees pope

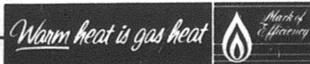

"We went on the people mover after we rode a bus for some distance and we rode the people mover past a lake, we saw Canada in the distance and then we saw the pope and he blessed us."
 "When it was over we were going to walk to the bus but we lost our way and we were tired. We found a map that didn't help us so we asked a policeman where we were. The policeman gave us a ride to the bus in the police car. It was fun! We held our hands up in the air so people looking at us wouldn't think we were in trouble with the police!"
