

Petty's trial

The trial that is scheduled to begin at Mansfield on Monday has serious implications for each of us.

Not the least of these is that what we are doing is testing the solemn word of a twice-elected sheriff, a former station commander in the Highway Patrol, in a case fraught with all the nasty facets of political clout.

Sheriff Petty is accused of covering up evidence against the daughter of the woman who may very well be the most powerful leader of the majority party in the county, a woman who twice directed Petty's campaign for election, each time with remarkable success.

When the people with reason distrust the word of a sworn officer of the law, the entire criminal justice system fails of its task and duty. The sheriff must be presumed to be innocent until a jury of his peers convicts him. But even he must see that the allegations laid against him, some of which are patently true, affect adversely his capacity to serve in any law enforcement assignment. If he is declared innocent of these charges, he faces a terrible job of mending fences. It is not easy, anywhere, at any time, to convince folks that one is telling the truth when responsible persons under oath have sworn that one has lied, and produces documentary evidence to prove it.

The Petty trial is the culmination of a long series of strange conduct by him, his wife, and some of his deputies. Some knowledgeable persons assert that the interplay of office politics and courthouse politics, the most vicious kinds of the breed, is the cause of Petty's difficulties. To some extent, this is the obvious truth. But it is not the whole truth.

Sheriff Petty, if in fact he does go to trial, is bound to learn, by this experience, that he who lives by the sword may die by it as well.

Creationism

He who thinks the decision of the Supreme Court in the matter of whether Louisiana acted constitutionally in enacting a law requiring that pupils be taught the theory of creationism as well as of evolution will count for much needs to examine the facts.

He need go no farther than this village. In 1964, the board of education was furnished with certified copies of an opinion by the attorney general that the teaching of religion in the public schools is counter to the Ohio Constitution. And what did it do? It approved another year of such teaching.

And so did the next board, and the next, and the next, and the next, and the next.

Finally, the teaching of religion in Plymouth Local School district died out. But not because the board of education chose to obey the law. Not on your life. Teaching of religion died out because its sponsors failed to furnish proper insurance coverage, which they found to be unconscionably costly, and they gave up the program.

That we were openly defying the state — and the federal — Constitution didn't seem to bother anybody. Matter of fact, some parents who declined to allow their children to participate unwittingly precipitated on them the scorn and ridicule of their schoolmates and their parents. Nor did the parents escape criticism.

It is good that the court was not closely divided. Rather, by vote of seven to two, the principles of the republic have been reasserted.

But don't hold your breath until all of us, from Hawaii to Maine, Alaska to Florida and on to Puerto Rico, accept the decision and all that it means.

And what does it mean?

It means that if you wish your child to learn the Biblical concept of the origins of the earth and all that in it, don't expect him to learn it in the public schools. Teach it to him at home, where it always belonged.

Is there danger that teaching of evolution by the schools will overcome what you've done at home? Of course. Less so if you've taught the child thoroughly. That's what life's all about. As the twig's bent, so grows the tree.

Petty trial set to start Monday

Sheriff Richard Petty goes on trial Monday on three counts involving misfeasance in his office.

Maneuvers by his attorney, Gary Schwerkart, to delay the trial and to obstruct the introduction of some damaging evidence have been thwarted by the special judge, Summit County Common Pleas Judge John Reese, whom Schwerkart has already accused of bias in an affidavit filed with the Ohio Supreme Court. Chief Justice Thomas Moyer turned that court over to make his final gesture to mitigate the effect of the evidence assembled by the special prosecutor, Rock Coss, Hillboro. During interrogation of prospective jurors that will commence Monday, Schwerkart will, these sources say, be at pains to try to show that his client can't get a fair trial in Richland county because the elements of the case have been unduly publicized and most prospective jurors obviously thus have a prejudiced view of the accused's innocence.

These "attaches fully expect Judge Reese to turn down any motion by Schwerkart to change the venue. Under these circumstances, they say, "Then the fur begins to fly — Petty can't stand the weight of the evidence that Coss has collected and he and his lawyer will start to plea bargain. And when they talk about a cheaper way to obtain justice, everybody wakes up and listens, because if this case goes to a full trial, it'll cost the county a bundle, a real bundle." Judge Reese is en banc because please see page 4

Plymouth, Shiloh to share refund of $1.6 million by Ohio Power Co.

Plymouth and Shiloh are among 14 communities to share in a refund to be paid by Ohio Power Co. if its appeal of a Federal Energy Regulatory commission ruling is turned down.

The two villages joined 12 other purchasers of wholesale power, led by Bryan, Wapakoneta and Carey, in a protest against rates affixed by Ohio Power in 1982. The lawsuit was laid on the argument that Ohio Power was selling coal from companies it owns to its generating facilities. The municipalities contended, through their attorneys, Duncan, Allen and Mitchell,

Washington, D. C., and their consultant, John S. Savvel and Associates, Findlay, that coal could be bought cheaper in the open market than from company-owned mines, thus eliminating the need for rate increases. FERC studied the prices in the open market at a time the suit was filed and compared them to Ohio Power's charges. The ruling was in favor of the plaintiffs, which would mean approximately $1,600,000 in refunds to the 14 municipalities associated in the suit.

They shared the legal fees, which total about $30,000, and they will vote later as to whether the refund will be taken in a lump sum or credited on each municipality's bill.

Signs are the majority will favor the lump sum payment. If this occurs, September is the earliest date the two villages can expect any money. Ohio Power has appealed the ruling. If it is turned down, the case may be taken to a federal court.

Any payments received before the issue is resolved will, of course, be recoverable by Ohio Power should its appeal succeed later on. For this reason, it is likely the villages will deposit the refund money in a capital improvement escrow account. If the appeal is successful, the amount of refund will have to be returned, together with interest. If the payment remains with the villages, it is likely they will be applied to capital improvements, expansion of services and such.

Youth, 18, held in vandalism of mailbox

An 18-year-old Plymouth man was arrested last week by Huron county sheriff's deputies on charges of criminal mischief and trespassing.

Douglas Houser, 52 Bell street, is accused of smashing the mailbox of Daniel Traxler, 1430 Peru Center road, and of damaging one of his vehicles. The offense occurred June 5, deputies say. They also arrested two 17-year-old Willardites, one a girl. They report Traxler caught the girl June 5 at 1 a.m. When he returned home to find teenagers vandalizing his premises. Deputies confiscated a vehicle the two boys left behind.

Born July 17, 1909, in West Liberty, Ky., he lived in or near Shiloh and Shelby since 1945. A World War II veteran, he was engaged in farming until he retired.

He is also survived by two sons, Everett and Edward Marshall Lewis, Big Fork, Mont.; four sisters, Mrs. Grace Casky and Mrs. Ida Hamilton, Shelby; Roland Lewis and Mrs. Flow Foot, Desert Hot Springs, Cal., and two grandchildren.

Four held on charge of open cans

A 19-year-old villager and three 17-year-old companions were arrested at West High and Bell streets Thursday at 1:20 a.m.

Len Barnett, 17 West Broadway, driver, was the subject of a radio notice by Shelby police that his car was noticed at Springmill Drive in localities recklessly.

Barnett and his companions told police they found the beer by the side of the road.

All were charged with possession of open containers of alcoholic beverage in a vehicle. Barnett was summoned on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

A 35-year-old Shilohan was accused of drunken driving Thursday at 6:30 a.m.

Paul Deskine, driving a vehicle owned by Charles Deskine, also of Shiloh, ran off the road and took out 50 feet of a fence in North street.

He was taken to Shelby jail with bond set at $250.

Trash collection fee up at landfill, house, too

Huron county landfill fees have already been raised. Now Richland county will build its own refuse transfer station, to be funded from fees paid for use of the landfill.

Effective Aug. 1, trash haulers and private citizens will pay $3.75 a cubic yard to dump refuse at the landfill. Current rate is $1.25.

What will this mean to those who hire a commercial scavenger to deal with their refuse? About an additional $2.50 a month, on the average.

Why did the commissioners raise the dumping fee? It was noted that volume of trash dealt with has increased substantially, whereas the county's population has remained stable.

Higher rates, said Commissioner Edward Olson, will make disposing of trash at the Cairns road site less attractive for out-of-county haulers.

The commissioners approved issuance of decalcomania to be licensed refuse haulers. These must be displayed on all trucks used by the haulers, effective July 15, or the vehicles will be turned away.

EPA has not so far decided on whether the proposed Amon-West road site for a landfill will be approved. The commissioners will thus again seek bids to construct a county-owned transfer station building. Earlier they sought to hire two private operators on contract to provide this service, but got no bids.

One bid from BFI was submitted to haul refuse out of the county. It was for $24.50 a ton. Commissioners will rebid this contract as well.

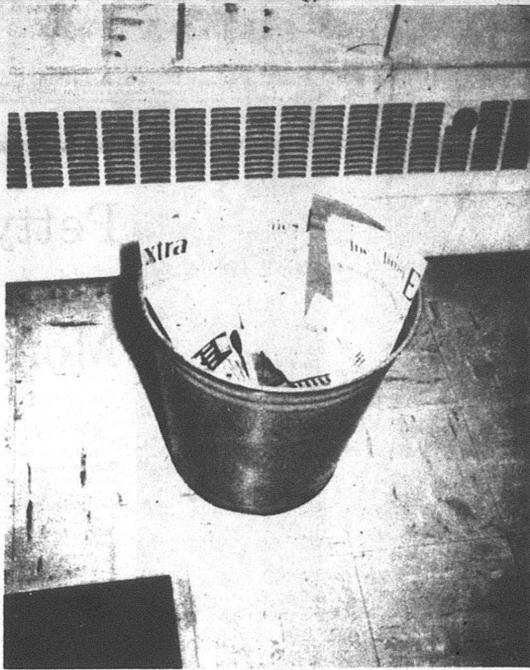

This construction will make recycling mandatory. All haulers will be required to stop with their loads at the new building, where the process of separating recyclables from the bulk of the refuse will begin. Such recyclables as are retrieved will be sold at market price and the proceeds applied to the cost of operating the landfill.

The commissioners point out that householders will find refuse disposal cheaper if they separate recyclable items at home. Newsprint, cardboard, cans and glass can be removed from refuse and recycled.

"Fifty per cent," says Olson, "of what you're putting in a plastic bag is recyclable." He estimates that 20 tons of refuse could be eliminated daily by recycling and that the county will pay about $25 a ton six days a week to haul refuse out of the county, resulting in a savings of $150,000 a year by separating newspapers, cardboard, cans and bottles and jars from the bulk of the refuse.

Recycle, recycle is Auntie's chant; try onion cakes

By AUNT LIZ

Landfills seem to be getting out of control.

Maybe it is time that the packaging industry stops and thinks a little. Better yet, maybe the shoppers should.

Everyone is to blame. It is simply easier sometimes to open a can of vegetables or fruit rather than starting with something fresh that must be cleaned and cut. It's easier to buy juice in a can or frozen than to squeeze oranges or grapefruit or make grape juice. And how many times do you cheat on a recipe that calls for fresh lemon juice and you use the stuff out of a bottle?

I can even remember when every decent kitchen had a nutmeg grater, which is now an antique. So are potato mashers and rolling pins. It all comes neatly wrapped in a package that eventually ends up in some hole in good ground that possibly could be used for something better.

Then there are all those shelves of beautifully wrapped cookies, even the Girl Scouts are guilty on that score. That is also easier than standing over a hot stove, and if you do indulge in baking a bunch of cookies, you do it because it is fun, not out of necessity.

Some things can be recycled, but most of us don't bother, including me. My only good point on recycling is that I do save jars for jelly and that is because it is cheaper than buying them. For years my favorite jar was what silver polish came in, just the right size and not bad looking. That day is over, the polish now comes in a plastic jar. That is happening with some other things that used to be in glass and made great water jugs for the refrigerator.

And what are you having for dinner? Maybe you are really cooking, just maybe, or is it a completely prepared meal that merely needs to go in a microwave for a few minutes? Granted that does have its advantages, some can be tasty, no fuxing it, and you can build up a whole set of plates.

Someone, some way, we are all going to have to change a little, or maybe there will be scenic landfills where there used to be lovely meadows and woods. It's like the way the orange groves in California are turning into condos.

Since this is the time that all gardens are producing, you don't have to be a landfill's best customer.

Most of everything can be eaten raw with a potato, a little sour cream, which means another plastic container. Save them, they are great for appeasance when that time comes. Or use them for spaghetti sauce. We do. It is easier to make a big pot of the stuff than I did to fill little containers, just enough for two, and freeze it.

Don't eat all those dainty onions that are ready now. Use them for what the Chinese call onion cakes. Take the easy way out, which everyone will approve. Buy the won-ton wrappers. They can be made from scratch if you feel creative.

For the stuffing, chop the onions fine. Spread a little oil on each pastry, put dabs of onion on, next sprinkle with a little soy sauce. Roll up and follow the package directions. They make a nice addition to grilled hamburgers.

Car stolen from Shiloh found in Shelby

A 1960 Chevrolet Citation belonging to John Steele, 16 Mechanic street, Shiloh, was found on a backstreet in Shiloh Sunday at 1:07 p.m.

The vehicle was damaged at the right front bumper, the right fender, the windshield and the roof.

Steele said the car was stolen.

Petty trial

none of the incumbent common pleas judge sitting in Mansfield wants to hear the evidence, on the grounds that each has already ruled on some evidence and for some evidence gathering procedures in the case.

Coss is prosecuting because John Allen, the Richard prosecutor of common pleas, stepped aside. He said he doesn't want anybody to think he or his office is deliberately prosecuting Petty.

Petty is accused of obstruction of justice and concealing evidence in the case of Ohio v. Fenton.

Mrs. Fenton is the daughter of Mrs. Louise Bush, the powerful chairman of the Democratic party in the county for several years and the director of Sheriff Petty's campaigns for office in 1980 and 1984. Apartments belonging to her were destroyed by fire. Anson was suspected but could not be proved. In time she went to Petty and, it is alleged, made a full confession in his presence and that of Mrs. Petty. It is this confession that the state claims its investigators found locked in the sheriff's desk after they were forced to break down the door while enforcing a search warrant they obtained from Common Pleas Judge James Heaton at 1:15 a.m. It is the "smoking gun" in the prosecution's case.

Coss has subpoenaed 17 persons to testify for the state. Col. Jack Walsh of the Ohio Highway Patrol, in which Petty served as a post commander before he stood for election as sheriff, heads the list.

Mrs. Fenton pleaded guilty earlier this year to arson, grand theft and burglary. She awaits sentencing. She and the man she supposedly tried to torch the Bowman street premises, Ronald Fitch, Mansfield, who also awaits sentencing, have been subpoenaed.

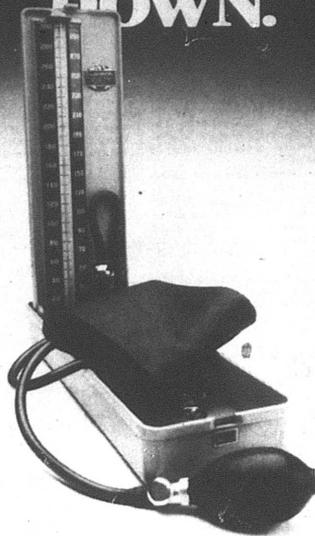

So has Mrs. Fenton's live-in friend, Ronald Holbrook, now incarcerated in Ross county correctional camp at Chillicothe.

William Taylor, Professional Law Enforcement, Inc., Dayton, with whom Petty secretly signed a $3,000 a month contract that he cancelled in 1983 in favor of employment if a PLE employee as an investigator on the sheriff's staff, is expected to be called to testify for the state, but he has not so far been subpoenaed.

Petty is not the first sheriff of Richland county to run afoul of the law. A predecessor, Thomas Weikel, was convicted of felonious conduct and was compelled to vacate his office. He served prison time.

Weikel was indicted in 1978 on 12 counts of theft in office and abuse of inmates. Eleven of his deputies were involved in 45 indictments against the sheriff and his staff. He was sentenced Oct. 9, 1979, and served six months in the Summit county jail.

Jay Christopher Haver was married Saturday at 1 p.m. before the altar of Frederiksburg United Presbyterian church to Miss Valerie Lynn Walton.

The Rev. James Bean, retired professor of French and religion in the College of Wooster, performed the double ring ceremony in a setting specially prepared to honor the bride's late father and the couple's late grandparents. Two candelabras with rose-colored bows, a unity candle decorated with silken flowers in a roseate hue and a vase with a single white rose stood on the altar.

Family pews were marked by country hats decorated with bows, mauve and rose burgundy silken roses and baby's breath. Candles decorated with roses and baby's breath were placed in the church windows and lavender silken roses with fern on the organ.

Monica Weiss, organist, pianist and flautist, played a selection of seven pre-nuptial numbers, one on the flute, two on the piano. Bach's "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring" and Beethoven's "Für Elise" were included with the celebrated hymn, "A Mighty Fortress In Our God".

She played Purcell's "Trumpet Voluntary in D Major" for the processional and the rousing "Toccata in F" by Widor for the recessional.

Neither of the bridal couple was attended.

The bride was given in marriage by her eldest brother, Craig Walton.

She wore a designer gown of white matte taffeta styled with fitted bodice of beaded silken Venice laces with off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline. The sleeves were puffed and trimmed with taffeta ruffle. The full-ruffled, flounced skirt was styled with a scallops pulled up with self roses encircling the chapel-length train. OHIO NATURALLY

State Insect

The Ladybird Beetle, commonly known as the Ladybug, is a well known insect to people of all ages. Children enjoy collecting them during the summer months and adults enjoy seeing them in their garden for they know ladybugs eat unwanted insects.

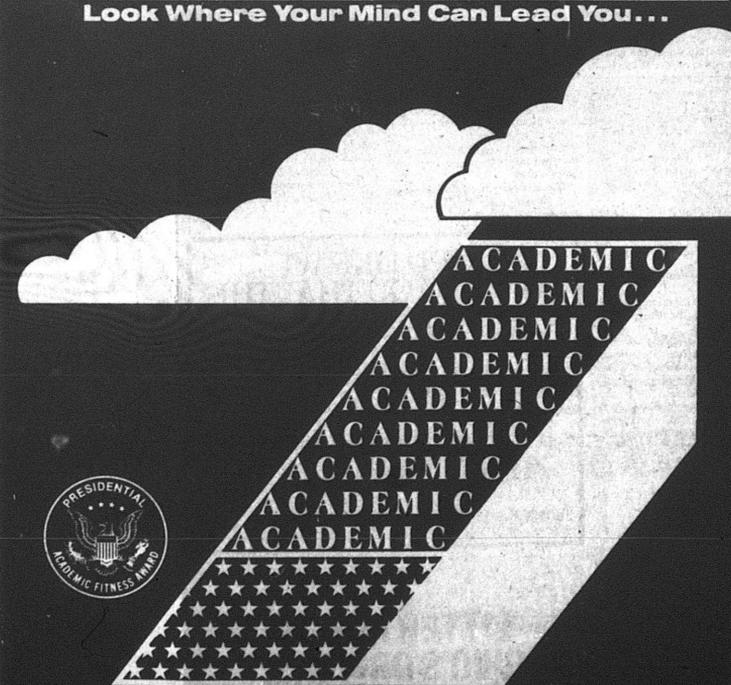

Ladybugs are in the order Coleoptera and make up the family Coccinellidae. They are a small beetle with a round body shaped like half a pea. They are often bright red or yellow with black, red, white or yellow spots. The markings vary considerably in any species making it difficult to recognize them by color pattern alone.

The primary diet of the ladybugs are plant lice and scale insects. For this reason, fruitgrowers find ladybugs very useful in helping to protect their crops. There are two kinds of ladybugs that harm beans, melons, squashes and other garden plants. But the work of the beneficial kinds of ladybugs far outweighs the damage done by the few harmful ones.

In June 1975, a new emblem was born. The Ohio legislature declared the common ladybug, officially named the Ladybird Beetle, as the official state insect. This insect with its attractive markings and helpful eating habits have raised it to official status in Ohio.
