Water deficit only $7,919 Sidewalk repair to become an issue

With some juggling of figures so that the year end balances in several funds, water and cemetery, look better than originally thought, the budget for next year is ready to be sent to the Richland county auditor.

The budget hearing preceded the council committee meeting last week. It was a public hearing, but no citizens appeared.

Those two funds will simply have to undergo a tightening of their belts. The anticipated year-end deficit in the water fund was $12,519, but council members managed to lower it to $7,719 by cutting back on personal services from $57,600 to $52,800.

Mrs. A.L. Paddock, Jr., said she respects the figure provides for an annual raise, but she does not think it is necessary to plan on so much for salaries since the village no longer must treat it as water. This was a daily duty in the past and involved overtime on weekends.

The other bugaboo in the water fund is that the village is putting money aside from monthly collections which may be paid to Willard if the appeal of the decision of Huron County Common Pleas Court Judge Robert W. Smith is rejected.

Smith ruled several months ago that Willard is justified in raising the village's rate 17 per cent.

The village has said that Willard has "one good customer", in that it does not have to maintain the village lines nor bill each customer and that it gets its money on time with no problem of collecting a delinquency. The village offered a five per cent increase.

Because of this situation, a certain amount must be put into escrow each month. This is close to $13,000 a year in contrast to what the village paid Willard under the existing contract.

The other fund in serious trouble is that of the cemetery, because it is losing about $8,000, a drop in the collection of property taxes from $27,000 to $19,000 because of the expiration of one mill levy.

By cutting back operation and maintenance from $5,000 to $3,000 for 1988, and the same amounts in the capital improvement fund, the ending balance was raised from $1,134 to $3,134.

The council learned that after waiting over five years that Route 61 through the village is to be resurfaced in 1988.

The village's share will be $1,586.

Legislation will be passed to approve this sum.

Councilman Bill Taulbee said some streets should be yellow lined, particularly West Broad way, because of the fire lane, and any, because of the fire lane, and asking villagers for suggestions of any streets which they feel should be marked for the traffic flow, and will contact a company which does this type of work.

Councilman Everett Eckstein said the planning commission at its last meeting discussed the repair of sidewalks. What if those householders who are required to repair their walks come up with the idea that those who do not have them should install them, he asked.

This brought out the codified ordinances of the village, from which Mayor Keith Hebble quoted, "walks must be installed in all main streets, but need not be in minor streets."

"What is a bad or a dangerous sidewalk will be studied further and a survey made. Householders will be told if their walks are deemed to be replaced or repaired.

All members of the police department have qualified on the firing range for the weapon they carry. Police Chief Stephen Cauldill told council.

He said that he is pleased with the work of the Explorers post is doing in the department. "It is giving them good experience and they are helping the village," he said.

The mayor suggested the rank of sergeant be created for the department. Presently, there are two ranks, chief and captain.

Cauldill likes the idea, which will be included in the next pay ordinance.

Landmark burns

Fire swept through the west side of Clarence Donnemwirth house in west side of Sandusky street early Sunday. Police suspected arson, tracked suspects by footprints and say they have obtained two confessions.

Two youths held on charge of arson in Donnemwirth fire

A fire purposely set completely destroyed the Clarence Donnemwirth home and its contents in Sandusky street early Sunday morning.

The blaze was spotted by Patrolman Dane Howard at 3:26 a.m. and he reported it to the fire department.

Jeffrey Wilson and Tommy Barnett, both of Plymouth, were apprehended shortly later by Howard and Patrolman Allen Carey. They confessed to setting the fire.

They are both in the Shelby jail pending charges of arson.

Each of the accused is 20 years old. They are neighbors. Wilson resides at 215 Sandusky street, Barnett at 213 Sandusky street.

Charges will be filed in Huron county common pleas court.

Resignations of two Plymouth High school teachers were accepted by the Plymouth Board of Education Monday night.

The teachers are Mrs. Robin McClure, instructor of English who has been adviser to the National Honor society, and Kathy Brooks, who taught vocational home economics.

Both have accepted positions in districts closer to their homes. No replacements were suggested Monday.

Supt. Jeffrey Slauson told the board summer maintenance work in the Shiloh building is slightly behind schedule but that he hopes it will be completed by the targeted date, Aug. 27.

He suggested that Charlotte Adams be placed as a custodian on hourly rate at Shiloh to replace Raymond Babcock, who was retiring, and that Mrs. Carol Ireland be hired to help with the work. The board approved.

Several changes were made in supplemental contracts, which included reinstating a freshman cheerleader adviser, Slauson said that Julie Mayer offered to take on the younger girls along with her other cheerleading duties because she felt the girls needed the experience for their future years.

Kevin Steinmetz was named assistant boy's varsity basketball coach at $1,356, Brian Neff's compensation as athletic director was raised to $1,252 from $1,127 because school personnel did not meet his previous experience as a coach.

John Hart was also raised to please see page 2

It was not the first fire destroying a Donnemwirth house.

In 1942, when the householder was away on business for the Fate-Root-Heath Co., for which he was a crack mechanic, and the housewife and her children were with him in Shelby, their house in Route 98 burned out.

This time, as well, the house was not occupied. Clarence and his wife were long since dead. The house, built in the last century, stood unoccupied. Its owners, the Donnemwirth children, Jacques E. Plymouth; Desmond V. Shelby, and Shirley, now Mrs. Bill Taulbee, Plymouth, kept it locked. It was furnished and there were a number of antiques stored in it.

These went up in flames and smoke. Jacques E. Donnemwirth, known to his intimates as Zeke, said Monday evening he is doubtful that the insurance settlement will be enough to rebuild the frame house, raised in the penultimate decade of the last century, or to save it from raising. It was apparent that the fire had damaged structural elements at the west side, where obviously the flames began.

Patrolman Dane Howard on routine patrol Sunday at 3:26 a.m. saw smoke emanating from the southwest corner of the structure.

He summoned Plymouth Fire department, which fought the blaze until well after daybreak.

Howard and his conferees, Patrolman Allen Carey, traced footprints found at the west side of the house and found they led to a house that lies south of the burning structure.

Here they roused occupants and their questioning led to admissions by both Wilson and Barnett, eventually, that they set the fire.

Both officers said "their obvious lies trapped them."

Burglary gets $300

An aggravated burglary in the house of Caris Tuttle at 64 Mulberry street was reported to police by him Monday about midnight.

Police cordoned off the premises and searched for clues Tuesday morning.

A neighbor told Chief Stephen Cauldill that she, and her husband, saw a dark blue short car, occupied by two persons, one of whom was a woman, at the house during the time the burglary is believed to have occurred, Monday between 6:30 and 12 p.m.

Police interviewed these persons, without positive results. They awaited arrival on Tuesday of a state fingerprint expert to ascertain if the thieves left clues of that nature.

John Fate Root succumbs at 77 in Willard rest home

John Fate Root, 77, who retired from his family's manufactory after two generations as treasurer, member of the board of directors and ultimately chairman of the board, died in Hillside Nursing home, Willard, the night of July 7.

He was in failing health for a long time and had been stricken by apoplexy.

Elder son of John Andrew and Josephine Fate Root, he was born in Plymouth, Apr. 14, 1910. He was graduated by Plymouth High school in 1928. Throughout his youth, often accompanied at the organ by his father, he sang publicly in an acceptable baritone.

He attended Wittenburg university, Springfield, and Oberlin college, Cleveland. He earned a broad reputation as a credit expert and collector of debts.

His passion in later life was golf. So long as he resided at 300 Willard drive, he maintained an immaculate mowed driving and pitching range behind his home.

Mrs. Root moved to 101 Sandusky street after he was admitted to the rest home.

He married Marjorie E. Becker, 56 years ago.

She survives. So do three sons, John Becker, Avon Lake, Louis Fate, Mansfield, and Lawrence James, Plymouth, a brother, H. James, Plymouth, and six grand children.

He was a member of First Evangelical Lutheran church, which served as church councilman. He is a former member of Plymouth Board of Education. During his tenure, the board voted, unanimously to fire an athletic coach because he didn't win "Never again," he was wont to say.

Petty guilty

Jury convicts on four counts

Convicted on four counts of tampering with evidence and obstructing justice, Sheriff Richard H. Petty, 50-year-old chief law enforcement officer of Richland county, refuses to give up his badge as sheriff.

A jury of eight women and four men reached the verdict after about nine hours of deliberation. Jurors said they concluded that Petty is guilty of tampering with evidence by concealing the confession of Debbie Bush Berges Fenton from officers investigating a fire at her property in Bowman street, Mansfield, on July 6 shortly after 3:30 p.m.

The remainder of the verdicts were arrived at during deliberation of July F. Joseph Romano, bailiff of the court, was sent by Summit County Common Pleas Judge John Reece to the jury room on July 7 at 4:30 p.m. to inquire if the jury had reached a conclusion. Romano was told by the jurors that a verdict would be ready in 10 minutes or so.

Judge Reece read the verdicts with measured diction. Each word fell like a triphammer on the shocked sheriff. When the jurist reached the verdict on the third specification, Petty gulped like a drowning man and turned his gaze downward. Then Judge Reece polled the jurors, some of whom openly wept.

Sentencing will take place July 31. Petty is liable to maximum sentence of seven years in prison and a fine of $15,000.

Meanwhile, Petty has no intention of surrendering his badge.

His lawyer, Dennis Scherwath, who was bitter about the jury's decision, which he said is a travesty, "We all know about the famous 10 amendments," he told a reporter, "maybe there is an 11th amendment. The previous 10 shall not apply in Richland county." It is our intent:

to fight this and to allow the sheriff to stay on as long as the law permits unless for personal reasons the sheriff would want to countermand that decision."

The prosecutor, John Allen, said "We're going to re-contact the governor's office and we plan to pursue whatever civil remedies we can."

Allen added "As I understand Ohio law, he could hold onto his badge through the end of his term in the appeal process." The term expires Dec. 31 next year. Allen observed, "Ohio law forbids a convicted felon, which is what Petty will be on July 31, when he is sentenced, from holding an office of 'honor, trust or profit'."

Rocky Coss, Highland county's prosecutor who conducted the state's case, said "I don't think it's proper for a convicted felon to remain in office. It puts it big of a cloud over the office."

Coss said the sheriff's appearance in the witness chair was what did him in. "He testified," Coss said, "and people were interested in what he had to say. The fact is the story that he told was, in my estimation, incredibly absurd. The way he handled the case was totally contradictory to all standard operating procedures and the way in which he would have handled any other case not involving someone that close to him."

Co-counsel for the defense, Dennis Pusateri, observed "he had to take the stand, the climate of the case was that it was not so important what the state had, the jurors wanted to hear from the sheriff -- it was up to him to prove his innocence, and he didn't."

Petty was in fact a lame witness. His responses intended to exculpate him lacked authority and decisiveness.

Earlier, Governor Richard F. Celeste was asked by Allen to remove Petty. The governor, perhaps for reasons for political loyalty — Petty and the governor belong to the Democratic party — declined. He said then the matter should be dealt with through "existing criminal procedures."

Why postmen wear blue: dye from indigo is fast

By AUNT LIZ
There are some things you live with every day. Just accept them and never think to ask why. So why do the post office people wear a shade of blue? Granted in the smaller communities they kind of wear what they have, but the official color is now slate blue. It must have started after the Civil war, when the darker blue was picked up from what the soldiers of the North wore. There was a good reason.

The blue dye comes from plant fast dye and will not run when wet. So since the mail carriers were out come rain or shine, it was practical. Somewhere along the line all policemen wore dark blue and firemen did, too. That day is gone. Each community and department chooses its own, but they run to the darker shades. It is kind of understandable that a police officer should be rather subdued and not stand out in a bright red. How could he catch culprits if he could so readily be seen?

And I can see the firemen taking to bright colors, which can be seen more clearly through smoke.

Another thing about blue is that it represents authority, something I never knew.

Then someone told me that blue is plain pleasing to the eye, which was nice to learn since it is my favorite color. So remember that when you have something important to do and have to impress someone.

And what can be more important than having good friends to dine? Frankly, they need to be more impressed than those you do not know to well because they know you and what you are capable of doing. This takes a little effort to outsmart them.

Start with a cold broccoli soup. Even those who do not like the stuff cannot easily say no to this. It is one of my favorite recipes smack out of an old Plain Dealer from High's restaurant. It is not one of those slap together deals.

Plan on a good hour to compose it, then another two to wash all the pots and pans.

Use a bunch of bunches of broccoli will do it. Cut the flowers off as short as possible and throw in a few of the slender stems. Cook them in three and a half cups of water until crispy tender. Drain, but save the water. Chop it all.

In a stick of margarine, cook a fourth of a cup of chopped onion until golden. Stir in two-thirds of a cup of flour to make a roux. When it is smooth, add two and a half cups of heated milk and the cooking liquid, which should still be hot. Also add a can of heated chicken broth. Stir until it thickens.

The original recipe says to strain it to remove the onion, but we like onions. Add the rest of the milk and broccoli, also such seasonings as desired.

It can be served hot or chilled. This is a large recipe and makes about three quarts or 10 servings. If you are doing this for just two, you can have it for maybe three days and give the rest away. I doubt if it would freeze decently and I haven't tried it.

To get a jump on future state board of education projects, the board will hire Valuation Engineering, Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa., to inventory the complete district. The work if it can be arranged will be done over the Christmas holidays when the buildings are empty.

Slauson told the board that inventories are required for larger districts but in several years all will be included. He also said that it will help for the district's insurance coverage to know down to the last item what is owned. The inventory will include when and under what circumstances an item was purchased and its cost. This will cost a total of $3,800. The inventory will be updated annually for five years at $300 each year. Slauson said at first he thought the cost would be more like $10,000.

Approval was given to the Plymouth district to join the Ohio Co-Op Purchasing plan that will save local money because the state purchases in bulk and the school then may buy it with no bidding necessary. The local district is also part of other joint purchasing groups.

Another joint savings plan the district joined last winter has proven successful, Slauson said. It is the Metropolitan Gas Saving program. From November through March the school saved $4,232, slightly more than Slauson said he had hoped for.

The plan charges each district 8.5 per cent of what it saves on gas heating bills, so Plymouth's charge for the coming school year will be $359.72, which the board approved.

Transportation of a handicapped youngster was also approved. The child will be transported by her family at $36 a day, a great savings to the district.

A touchy problem was mentioned at the end of the meeting by Slauson, that of teachers' sick leave. During the last school year 108 checked up $514 days at a cost of $92,002 for substitutes.

Under state law teachers are given 15 sick days a year and can accumulate up to 225.

The second game of the evening featured the first place Cubs (11-and-0) against the last place Tigers (0-and-10).

Thirteen first inning runs set the tone for the game, as the Cubs raced to a 19 to 3 victory and an undefeated season. The game was called after four innings due to the 15 run rule.

The Tigers scored three runs in the second inning, as walks went to Brandon Hall, Aden Channing and Josh Swartz loaded the bases. Jason Resendez plated Hall and Channing with a two-out double. Mike Krietemyer singled home Swartz to score the Tigers only other run.

Father Dials pitched four innings of three-hit ball with nine total strikeouts and three walks, all in the second inning. Dials also starred at the plate, as he singled, walked and tripled in four bats. He drove in two runs and stole three bases.

Brett King's triple drove home Chad Hughes and Jeremy Hale to empty the bases in the 11th hit in the first inning. Jason Rook recovered from a 104 fever over the weekend to add four singles to the 19-hit Cub attack. Rook had two RB's and stole five bases. Dale Fletcher added three singles, two RB's and five stolen bases. Every Cub had at least one hit for the night.

tance. He surrendered five hits, hit a batter, struck out seven and walked three through six innings of work.

Indians used three pitchers, Ricky Reeder allowing just two runs on three hits with four strikeouts, a walk and two hit batsmen through the final three innings of work.

Three consecutive walks loaded the bases in the Yankee second and the merry-go-round scored seven runs. They added five more in the third to break a 2 to 2 deadlock.

Elliott supported his own cause with three singles and a double. Nick Roll also hit three singles for the Yankees.

John Hissa was the lone batting hero for the Indians, as he whacked two singles and lined out Nick Fenner walked twice and stole a base.

Indians finished third at 3-and-7 in the PML standings.

Miss Vredenburg becomes bride of J. L. Wechter

Miss Jacquelyn A. Vredenburg, 34 North street, and James L. Wechter, Shelby, were married June 27 at 11:30 a.m. in St. Bernard's Roman Catholic church, New Washington, by the Rev. Robert DeSlover in a double ring ceremony.

The St. Bernard's folk choir, Janet Prazse, organist and cousin of the bridegroom, and Carolyn Kaple, soloist and cousin of the bridegroom, provided the music.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Larry Vredenburg, 34 North street, Bridgemoor in the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Wechter, New Washington.

The bride chose a high matron-neck dress made of white organza with Venise and Chantilly lace. It was styled with leg-o-mutton sleeves, a natural waist and full skirt. A cathedral-length train was accented with pearls and sequins on the bodice and sleeves. She wore a waite-length, Camellot veil accented with Chantilly lace.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of stephanotis and yellow roses, accented with white ribbons. Her honor attendant was her cousin, Michele Baker, Plymouth. She wore an organza gown of teal with a draped neck. The long dress featured short puffed sleeves and a natural waist. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses accented with baby's breath and teal streamers.

Other bridesmaids were Mrs. Angel Schroeder, Shelby, sister of the bridegroom; Belinda Kamann, Plymouth, cousin of the bride, and Carol Niedermeyer, Plymouth, friend of the bride. Their dresses were seaspray in color and identical in style to that of the honor attendant. They also carried ed bouquets of yellow flowers. The Seymours visited Norway's three largest cities, Oslo, Bergen, and Trondheim, and numerous fjords on the western coast. They witnessed the midnight sun after crossing the Arctic circle and cruised as far north as the Lofoten islands.

Two men beat heat in Canada

Two Plymouthites solved the problem of last week's torrid weather, but they went over 1,000 miles to do it.

 They planned the jaunt for over a year, not knowing the week would be the warmest in many years.

Fireflies

Fireflies, commonly known as lightning bugs, are a familiar yet intriguing sight as they brighten summer nights with their radiant signals.

Fireflies are flat, soft-bodied beetles of the family Lampyridae; the larvae and the females of the wingless species are often referred to as glowworms. However, "glowworm" may also designate an altogether different insect.

Their twinkling lights are a form of communication, and bring together adult males and females. There are several species of fireflies and each has a characteristic routine defined by patterns of flashing intensity, the length of the pauses between flashes and flight levels. The color of the glow differs depending on the species, varying from yellow to greenish-blue to pale blue.

A common species, Photinus pennsylvanicus is one of the largest of fireflies. Approximately three-quarters of an inch long, it is generally brown with yellow-orange stripes. This firefly sends a greenish-yellow message of one short flash followed by a longer signal.

The firefly's light organ, located in the abdomen, is as cool as the rest of its body. This "cold light" is produced by the reaction of the enzyme luciferase with the substance luciferin. The efficiency rating of this reaction is high—nearly 100 percent of the energy used is released as light; only a small percent is useless heat. In comparison, an incandescent light bulb releases only 10 percent of its energy as light.

The insect continues to interest scientists, who study not only its "cold light" capability, but how it uses this light to communicate. Synchronized flashing has been observed in some species.

Look for the twinkling lights of the tiny creatures as they fit above fields and around shrubs. The females remain close to the ground, often in the grass or on plant stems, while the males fly overhead, awaiting a response.
