

On primaries

The performance July 1 of the seven professed candidates for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1988 was a tour de force.

Each of them is articulate, seems to have a grasp of the issues, comes across fearfully and obviously represents a significant constituency. Save for the Rev. Mr. Jackson, each has an impressive record as a government servant. Four of the candidates are members of the national legislature, three in the U.S. Senate, one in the House of Representatives. One is an incumbent governor and one is an immediate past governor.

Robert Strauss, the old Democratic war horse, observed at the conclusion of the program that he could not remember, in over 50 years of his connection with partisan national politics, ever having been associated with six such imposing candidates.

The format of the program, its length, and the number of candidates who were each given a short opportunity to respond to every question resulted in a shallowness that failed to advance the dialogue materially. One thirsted for details. The moderator, William F. Buckley, Jr., co-ed of Governor Dukakis of Massachusetts, who boasted of a balanced budget in a state with the lowest unemployment rate of any industrial state by inquiring, "What part of your budget, Sir, goes for defense?"

One hopes the effort will continue. As Mr. Strauss observed, if we can get greater interest and participation in the primary process, in both parties, the nation will be enriched and "we'll have better and better presidents."

How right he is! That aim reflects credit upon us all. To improve the primary process, if it can be done, is the name of the game, what Mr. Jefferson had in mind. To seek to do so by changing the date of the primary election "to give Ohio more national clout" serves no useful purpose, as the General Assembly has recently decided, in opposition, thank God, to the stated wish of Richland county's favorite son, Sherrod Brown.

Thanks are due

That two councilmen saw fit to obstruct the railroading of an ordinance enabling the mayor and clerk to solicit bids and enter into contract with a refuse hauler without further, full consultation with the electorate brings credit to them.

The arguments by one councilman differs from that of the other, but not by so much as one would think. One asserts the ordinance errs in saying specifications are on file when they are not, and that the wording of the bill as drafted commits the cloaking of the mayor and clerk with authority and directive to act without further consultation. The other declined to support suspension of the rules to permit immediate passage because to do so would foreclose the possibility of public input.

Whether a single approved refuse collector should be selected, to serve every household at an established rate schedule, is a question we, for one, are hardly prepared to decide. Why? Because we don't have enough data to make a sensible decision. Nor has anybody, in public, so far as we know, made any case for such a change. On first thought, we can see a number of problems.

Take our own case, for one. We produce trash at our household and in the business building. We pay the refuse hauler one monthly fee to deal with both. No program of refuse collection by one collector can succeed unless every household is compelled to participate. Yet it would be manifestly unfair to require us to pay for two collections whereas one collection, and one payment, will suffice. Our neighbor, Mr. Moore, carries bagged trash from his household in Brooks court to his place of business in Trux street and pays one fee.

One is constrained to remark that the legislation as submitted was inadequately researched, poorly justified and precipitously presented. To obstruct it was the right thing to do.

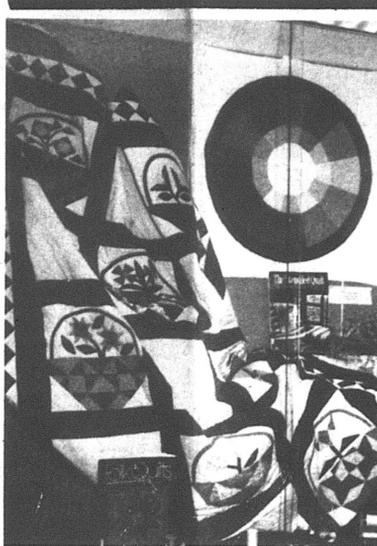

The two councilmen deserve our thanks.

'Be aggressive, about village,' says Dickson to planners

"Plymouth needs to be more aggressive to develop its industrial park," Douglas A. Dickson said Monday night during the monthly planning commission meeting.

Advertising in some of the large cities plus sending out brochures of the advantages that a small community has to offer are two of the projects that must be undertaken, he said.

The village has an opportunity to obtain 75 per cent of money spent on such items from the Private Industry Council based in Fremont.

Dickson said that Mrs. Amy Hardway, who heads HECDEC, has told him she would like to see some of these federal funds be used by villages in Huron county.

Willard Chamber of Commerce has applied for a part of the $33,000 allotted to Huron county to be used for brochures, maps of the area and postage.

Mrs. Timothy Moore, a member of the planning commission, said the Chamber of Commerce is also aware that funds are available and that Chamber officials have discussed applying for a grant for the renovations of the exteriors of buildings around the Square.

Everett Eckstein, the councilman who is a member of the planning commission, moved that $2,000 be applied for to advertise the village as Dickson suggests.

The sum of $500 can be taken from the appropriation of the planning commission funds, which would be the local contribution.

Mrs. Moore said she hopes the newly reorganized Chamber can become more forceful and that more will join. There are now about 27 members. Chamber plans call for finding some project that will benefit all local businesses.

Next planning commission meeting will be Aug. 3 at 7 p.m. in the village hall. When it is hoped that businesses will be represented so as to receive their input.

Jury gets Petty case

Sheriff denies he intended to obstruct justice

The fate of Sheriff Richard H. Petty was put into the hands of the jury in Richland county common pleas court Monday about 2 p.m.

Judge John Reece instructed the jury on the legal intricacies of the charges against Petty and the elements of guilt that the jury must find unanimously to convict.

Earlier, summarized the case for Petty in the final argument for the defense. He said that unless the evidence shows Petty is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, a verdict of not guilty must be returned. "The only thing the state has to prove is criminal intent — and they haven't," he said.

Co-counsel, Gary Schweikart, told the jury Petty is innocent of the accusations and the state failed to show that Petty had purpose to commit any criminal offense.

Referring to Rocky Coss, Highland county prosecutor who is conducting the state's case, Schweikart said "he wants you to make that big leap that Louise Bush plus Richard Petty equals guilty. He wants you to take Louise Bush in the connection and make an inference and then keep adding other inferences to the conclusion that he (Petty) had purpose."

Coss, in his crisp diction, told the jury Petty "was banking on the police not having enough guts or foresight to search his private office and he did everything he could to conceal the file from his detectives. He's not wearing that uniform proudly. He's hiding behind that badge and uniform. Guilt of men is to be measured by their conduct and not by their profession. There is no reasonable theory of innocence and the defense dares you to convict him because he is the sheriff."

After the jury had deliberated behind closed doors for about 150 minutes, it sent word it needed further interpretation of the law by the judge. This he supplied after court resumed Tuesday at 9 a.m. and the jury returned to its consideration.

In Sheriff Richard H. Petty's explanation that he was playing a hunch sufficient to convince the jury that he withheld a signed confession in an arson case for over two years properly.

In his lawyer's argument that John the Baptist, which is how Prosecutor John Allen is referred

Village native, Mrs. Lantz, 67, dies at Shelby

Born Betty C. Reed, daughter of Bruce and Mary Hoffman Reed, in Plymouth Aug. 27, 1916, Mrs. Glenn S. Lantz, 67, Shelby, died in Crestwood Care center there early Saturday.

She was ill five months. Mrs. Lantz was a member of First Lutheran church there.

Her husband, whom she married Apr. 7, 1939, a daughter, DeLayne, Mrs. Larry Simms, Mansfield; four sisters, Mrs. Beatrice Moor and Doris, now Mrs. Reubin Finkler, Shelby; Mrs. Thelma Brown, North Fairfield, and Mrs. Ruth Steiner, Mansfield, and two brothers, Clarence Reed, Shelby, and John Reed, Findlay, survive.

Her parents and a brother died earlier.

to in the male washrooms of the courthouse, engaged in a kind of jihad against Petty enough to lead the jury to acquit Petty of charges that he obstructed justice? Allen under oath, called as a prosecution witness, stoutly denied the contention by the lead defense lawyer, Gary Schweikart, Columbus, that he aimed to discredit Petty in a power push in the courthouse.

After Petty testified Friday morning, and weathered, but only barely, a scathing cross examination by the prosecutor, Rocky Coss, prosecutor at Hillsboro, appointed in Allen's stead because, Allen said, he wished to avoid any suspicion of conflict of interest, the defense rested.

Summit County Common Pleas Judge John W. Reece, sitting en banc because Richland county's justices had ruled earlier on some evidentiary claims and wished also to avoid conflict of interest accusations, sent the jury home. He told the jurors he had some matters to discuss with the lawyers.

Judge Reece had earlier ruled four times against motions by the defense to dismiss the charges against Petty. In one instance, not in the presence of the jury, Judge Reece said he had heard enough testimony to justify a case against the sheriff.

Schweikart, a huge man who affects a full beard, is no fashion plate. His image is that of a rumped bear. And he speaks as though his mouth were full of marbles. He led his client through a lengthy questioning, some answers to which provoked the judge to say "I want the sheriff to testify fully and to tell the jury what he knows. You (Schweikart) are testifying, not the sheriff. I won't allow that."

Petty on direct examination said he thought the file that was found in a drawer of his desk at Mansfield police directed by Allen enforced a search warrant and that contained the signed confession of Debra Bush Berges to the crime of arson was in fact in the detective bureau. He stoutly denied he ever intended to protect Mrs. Berges, daughter of Mrs. Louise Bush, the Democratic party leader who was campaign chairman in both of Petty's races for the chief law enforcement officer of Richland county. "Absolutely not," Petty said to Schweikart's inquiry.

Petty rose to the rank of lieutenant in the Ohio Highway Patrol and was a station commander. It is an assignment that calls for particular administrative expertise and skill in managing people. Petty could never be a drill sergeant in the military; his voice lacks crispness and authority, a fact it seemed the jury noted. At 50, Petty is older than all save two of the jurors. He came across as the mild-spoken grandfatherly rather than the authoritative law enforcer.

Petty said he was told by Mrs. Bush by telephone while he was in Florida that "Ron Fitch" wanted five big ones from Debbie to keep his mouth shut in regard to the Bowman street fire." He told her to be in his office the following Monday at noon, when he anticipated arrival from Florida, where he was attending a special school.

Then Sylvia Coder, secretary in the sheriff's office, called him in some panic, he said. She said "something was not right and somebody's trying to hang you."

The sheriff, Dale Shetler, of the sheriff's department called him to say "They're picking the lock to your office." Petty said he told him to "locate what they want and give it to them, we've got nothing to hide." Allen told Shetler to tell Petty to get a lawyer and, Petty said, Shetler was told by him to call Robert Whitney to represent him, failing which, to call Kim Murray.

"I nobody asked me to explain why I had the file," Petty told the jury.

He described his shock. "I couldn't hardly believe I had dedicated so many years of my life to law enforcement but people I dealt with every day didn't have the courtesy to say, 'Dick, why?' There was no need to read the lock. The file was in the desk drawer and they could have had it by using."

Petty's aim obviously was to over come any understanding that may have derived from Allen's statements under oath on Thursday. The prosecutor denied that the file was "grandstanding" when he ordered the dead-night intrusion.

Sidebar:

Judge John W. Reece is a non-sensense jurist.

He remonstrated with the gallery Friday. Having summoned the lawyers to a sidebar conversation, he noted some among the gallery chatted among themselves. When he took his chair again, he said sternly, "This is not an audience participation show. When I call the lawyers up here to sidebar, that's a part of this trial, and the conduct of spectators is not expected to change."

Earlier, he has dealt harshly with the defense attorneys.

He has repeatedly warned against what he considers to be efforts by Gary Schweikart, lead counsel for the defense, to inject his own testimony into the trial.

And on July 1, Judge Reece reacted to a question by Dennis Pusateri, also bearded, but balding, and slight where as his colleague is built like an outside linebacker. Directed to Lee Sampson, a parole officer for Fitch, who had said that Fitch's guilty plea to a misdemeanor charge of disorderly conduct could be a parole violation, but the decision whether to proceed with a charge was his alone, the question was "Have you been served with the summons for obstructing justice yet?" Reece sat up as though stung by a bee, "This has reached the point of absurdity," he exclaimed. He directed the stenographer to delete the question and the jury to disregard the question.

Judge runs tight ship; trial watcher: 'not guilty'

Then he turned on Pusateri and said, "Any more shenanigans like that, counselor, and you're going to be reprimanded for it."

THE COTERIE OF courtroom hangers-on, for the most part retirees, almost wholly male, who live in downtown Mansfield and while away their time in the two trial courtrooms, is a shrewd and knowledgeable group.

"This case really turns on who's running what and whom, and when. The prosecutor thinks he ought to have the whole law enforcement business under his thumb. The sheriff doesn't like that."

"When the sheriff was forced by Coss to admit before the jury that neither the Bowman street house nor the Adams street house is located in the sheriff's jurisdiction, it hurt him, I think. And when he was forced to say he was relying only on a hunch, without a piece of evidence to justify it, so that's why he kept the woman's confession with out acting on it, that hurt him, in my opinion."

"Still, I think Petty will walk. Why? There's no younger people on the jury will convict without a smoking gun. The prosecution doesn't deny the sheriff isn't required to move a case until he is damn good and ready so long as the statute of limitations isn't involved. The case is all inference. Think of the sheriff as a judge and bingo, he's finished, the jury will convict. But I don't think they'll do it. I think they'll give him the benefit of the doubt."

"Thus one who has seldom been wrong in more than a dozen trials gives his opinion."

COST TO THE COUNTY for this trial will be high. A prosecutor and his staff is already in the payroll, as are two judges of the common pleas. Yet a substitute prosecutor and a pinch-hitter judge are serving and each, plus his expenses, must be paid.

And these charges that Coss subpoenaed 17 likely witnesses for the prosecution. Coss called only 11. Yet the sheriff's fee for serving the 17 subpoenas must be paid.

IT WAS CLEAR from the outset that each side was playing games.

Schweikart played his string out inch by inch. It came as a surprise to some in the gallery that he did not seek a change of venue after the jury was chosen. It is naive to think that any resident of Richland county could have escaped some knowledge of Petty's predicament. It is similarly naive to believe that, in the absence of jury sequestering, some news of what has transpired out of the hearing of the jury has not leaked to it.

PETTY FIRST SOUGHT the Perry Mason of the Richland county bar, Robert Whitney, to represent him, failing which, he would settle for Kim Murray, another Mansfield lawyer.

But he settled on Schweikart, the Jack Levin of the Franklin county bar.

Win or lose, Petty will soon discover his net worth to be diminished, for Schweikart's fee is bound to be formidable.

Red ink seen in water fund at end of 1988

Only one village fund, that of water, will carry red ink at the end of 1988, according to the budget reviewed Tuesday night during a public hearing.

It will be an estimated $12,519 in the hole, which is just about equal to a 17 per cent increase in water rates by Willard.

The swimming pool will break even with a zero balance next year. But anticipated there will be exactly $1 left at the end of 1987.

Total amount for the general fund, which includes the police department, is dropping by about $10,000 to $220,700 for 1988. It is estimated at $230,470 for this year.

Each fund reflects an anticipated salary raise for village personnel plus higher costs for operation and maintenance.

This year's cost of salaries for the police department was estimated at $116,000, operation and maintenance at $18,800 and capital improvements at $6,050.

For 1988 salaries are estimated at $130,000, operation and maintenance at $20,200 and capital outlay at $4,000.

Ambulance fund includes $64,000 for a new vehicle which might be on the high side.

Estimated revenue in the village income tax is $65,000 for 1988, which is the same figure as for this year. It reflects the business atmosphere in the village. In 1985 $80,492 was collected and in 1986 a total of $77,361. It is hoped the estimated receipts might be figured at a lower figure than will actually come in during 1988.

Dramatis personae

The principal figures in this trial:

Richard H. Pettv 50, in second term as Richland county sheriff.

Dorothy Pettv, his wife, employed as deputy sheriff.

Ronald Fitch, Mansfield, awaiting sentencing for arson in Bowman street there in January, 1984, committed as hireling of Debra Bush Berges, aka, Debra Bush Berges Fenton, Mansfield, daughter of Louise Bush, a leading Democratic party leader in Richland county, whose confession to arson and fraud Petty is accused of covering up; she awaits sentencing after pleading guilty to arson. Earlier this year she was the principal candidate to succeed L. Norman Walker, Mansfield's chief finance officer, forced to resign because he took official funds for travel he did not make.

Ronald Holbrook, prisoner, Ross County Correctional camp, Chillicothe, a former paramour of Mrs. Berges during October of 1984 and involved with Fitch in a burglary ring in 1984.

Sylvia Coder, Petty's administrative secretary, who transcribed Mrs. Berges's statement and told investigators before they obtained a search warrant that if the statement could not be found in the file, it would be in Petty's desk.

Louise Bush, Mansfield, Petty's campaign chairman in 1980 and 1984 and for a generation a leader in the Democratic party in Richland county.

Paul Jones, Mansfield, now a private investigator, formerly detective and No. 2 under Petty.

John Allen, Richland county prosecutor in second term, who coordinated the investigation.

Petragain Petty and led the search of his office. Charles Hooks, arson investigator in Mansfield Fire department, which Petty did not trust.

Dale Shetler, mayor, sheriff's department. Joseph Masi, deputy sheriff who broke the burglary ring involving Fitch, Holbrook and Douglas Rush.

Sheriff testifies, only defense witness

debrauer.

Q. The fact is you never had any intention of prosecuting Debra Berges, is that right?

A. Objection by Dennis Pusateri, counsel for the defense.

Q. No further questions.

J. The fact the witness did not answer may stand.

Two principal aides of Petty testified under state subpoena. Neither Dale Shetler, nor Mick Studemund of his staff nor Capt. Wayne Cairns, Mansfield Police department, was able to testify, with any emphasis that Petty's paperwork and record-keeping of the matter were satisfactory. Cairns swore that four hours before the search warrant was enforced by drilling the lock of Petty's door, Petty told him by telephone he could not recall that he had talked with Mrs. Berges.

Joseph Masi, a former detective who is now chief of the sheriff's patrol division, testified Allen and his associates dealt differently with each functionary of the sheriff's department.

Led by Pusateri, he swore that the prosecutor's office set impossible conditions in a number of cases, cases that Pusateri described as "they wouldn't deal... they would say 'Sorry, we aren't going to wait for you to get up a notch or another two to get the big guy. We want you to bust whoever it is you're turning on now.'"

Coss is worked out handsomely in a somber, well-cut three piece suit. Whereas Schweikart's hair is cut as that of an Australian tennis player, Coss's toupee is right out of a boardroom in Wall Street. His voice is crisp. In olive drab or khaki, he would have six stripes and a swagger stick and the best drilled company in the battalion.

He led Petty into what seemed to be damaging admissions: Q. In neither statement (in the file) did you ask Debbie Berges if she knew anything about your play in connection with the Bowman Street and Adams Street fires?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In fact you don't have a file on the Adams street fire, do you?

A. No, sir. I had it in my head.

Q. Then you lied when Charles Hooks (the arson investigator for the Mansfield Fire department) asked you at the policemen's ball if you knew anything about the Adams street fire?

A. If I said no to Charles Hooks, then I did not tell him the truth. But I can't recall that now.

Q. And you took no action to recover for Washington Mutual insurance Co. the $11,900 paid to Debbie Berges in the Bowman street fire?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you knew that Debbie Berges was in a position of trust and responsibility with the state auditor, yet you said nothing about her record to the state?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That she was guilty of defrauding an insurance company.

A. Yes.

Q. That she was guilty of arson for hire?

A. Yes.

Q. That she was guilty of receipt of stolen property?

A. I'm not sure about that part of it.

At this point, Coss burrowed in like a ferret going after a rabbit. Q. You made a point not to tell anyone in your department that you had had a conversation with Debbie Berges?

A. Dorothy Pettv, Sylvia Coder and Richard Petty knew.

Q. But no other officers of the department?

A. I've tried to reconstruct whether Paul Jones knew. I heard him testify but I'm not sure.

Q. Is this a "wealth of information"?

A. It is to me, it's my case.

Coss turned to Petty's relationship with Louise Bush, mother of Debra Berges.

Petty admitted he often appraised Mrs. Bush as an appraiser in sheriff's sale proceedings. She was paid a fee for this, from the proceeds of each sale.

The sheriff testified Mrs. Bush told him she would support this candidacy for Ohio Senate and that she suggested he might become a federal marshal out of Cleveland.

He said he didn't want particularly to be "marooned in Cleveland, Ohio."

Judge Reece brought down the house by a wry remark. "I don't think any of the rest of us want to either."

They camped at Camp Avery Hand July 1, the night of the torrential rain storm, along with 150 boys from Richland county. Despite the mud, washouts and encounters with skunks who sought the dryer tents, the schedule was not altered. Their leader, Fred Buzard, said he was proud of the boys who managed to enjoy the camping in the worst rain storm they had ever encountered in their lives. Cubs were Korre and Keith Boyer, Matthew and Nathan Buzard, Andrew Classen, Scott Krietemeyer, Gregory Mongold, James and Jeremy Neff and Nicholas Roll.

Cole slaw recipe just the ticket after raspberries

By AUNT LIZ
There's nothing like friends!

Especially when they let you loose in their raspberry patch. Now that I know where it is, and you have to pass the grapes, which can put Papa valley to shame, I am almost ready to go into the poaching business.

It's one of the joys of living in what many would call a "dull" little town. Friends are a great joy even though you couldlobber them at times, but I know and so does everyone else that if we screamed, "Help!" a bunch would come running.

All these happy thoughts came at the same time the raspberries did and I have been rethinking my family history. This all came about because I happened to see that someone in Mesa, Ariz., was looking for stuff on my grandfather's brother, so I wrote to her and received a beautiful letter. I have stuff she does not have. And the more I thought about my family, I realized that family friends made. Even though they were all related by blood, they hated each other. I hate to admit, but it is there. And if it happened in my family, it did the same in many others. Most of it is way back, so you can forget it and get on with it.

I can remember a gal in New Haven years back who came into the office to look at our back files. She was doing her husband's family. She laughingly said two elderly aunts refused to sign marriage dates because they did not jibe with their children's birthdays. We all laughed, but she was up a tree to make the history accurate. Such things have happened for centuries, so just be honest.

What I would like our historical society to do is get on the tail of every name in this town and get them written down, plus all the little stories they can remember. There was the story a long time back of the wife of a rather prominent businessman pretending to be pregnant for the legal length of time, and out came the announcement that she produced something like 14 pounds of a son. The editor simply said she went to the hospital and delivered, and adopted the child.

We knew the husband involved and liked him very much and it was long after he was dead that the story was found in some old papers that were given to us soon before our files began. We knew he had been married several times, but what happened to that first wife no one seemed to know. Apparently that washed up on a happy marriage. These are great stories, shady or not, but part of our history, so write down what you can remember and pass it on to your children and the historical society.

This is what a good historical society is, not just the formal things, but the real living stuff that actually happened. No one need be embarrassed. Even in my family history there is mention that we are related to James, which I consider great. So while you are thinking back like mad, those around your table are waiting to eat.

Just brew up some kind of chops or hamburgers and add some cole slaw. Everyone has his own favorite recipe for it, but this is a slightly different angle.

It is a Swedish version. Chop a small head of cabbage with a green pepper and a chopped onion. It's the dressing that do it. In a sauce pan combine a cup of vinegar with a teaspoon of dry mustard, a cup of sugar, and one teaspoon of turmeric and boil about a minute. Pour over the cut up mixture and chill.

Pig roast set tomorrow to aid Bolen

A pig roast to benefit Tony Bolen, 17, 8 Mill street, severely injured Feb 25 at Route 99 and Townline road 12 north of Willard when the pick-up truck in which he was riding collided with a semi-tractor rig, will be staged tomorrow at LeMar park, 263 Whitley avenue, Norwalk.

Young Bolen was in a coma until June 20. Tickets will be available at the gate.

WHAT GOES UP BETTER COME DOWN.

Man: of the 60 million Americans who have high blood pressure don't know it. You could be one of them. So call the Red Cross and have your blood pressure checked. Because high blood pressure means a high risk of heart attack or stroke. And, unfortunately the law of gravity doesn't affect it.

Portrait of the Great American Investor

Fifteen-year-old Brent Ragon had no idea how soon he'd be using CPR to save someone's life when he completed his Red Cross training at a Youth Safety Seminar.

But, while Brent was riding the train home from that seminar, a man collapsed two rows behind him. "He wasn't breathing, and I couldn't find a pulse," Brent recalls. "I wasn't scared, I didn't have time to be scared. I knew what to do and I did it."

If you were in Brent's place, would you know what to do? We'll teach you. Join us.

Monarchs
Stranger things happen in nature, but few boast the beauty of the migration of the orange and black monarch butterfly (Danaus plexippus). The migration of thousands of monarchs occurs each year during mid-September to October as the colorful butterflies from Canada and the eastern U.S. travel to their wintering area in Mexico's Sierra Madre. The delicate creatures fly from 10-30 miles per hour in a flight path across the U.S. into Mexico.
They seek the moist climate and temperatures ranging from 42° to 60° Fahrenheit found in a four-acre site in Mexico. This moist environment prevents the butterflies from drying up.
Warm weather triggers the return of the butterflies to the eastern U.S. and Canada and they begin moving north as early as February. Females deposit their eggs as they migrate on the abundant milkweed supplies in North America.
The colorful butterfly has a lifespan of about nine months and may travel 2,500 miles during its lifetime.
There are two peak seasons in which Ohioans can observe the annual migration, mid-July and mid-September and October.
The northern butterflies congregate in September on the Canadian side of Lake Erie and stop over in Mentor Marsh and Headlands Beach State Park, which provide undisturbed habitat.
