Army Plays Notre Dame Saturday

NOTRE DAME, Ind. — When people begin to discuss the great rivalries in collegiate football, the Notre Dame-Army series conjures up some dramatic lore. Consequently in this centennial anniversary year of college football it seems appropriate that the Fighting Irish and the Black Knights should once again do battle — the 39th time that the two teams have tussled since the 1913 game in which Notre Dame's Knute Rockne and Gus Dorais popularized the forward pass at the expense of the Cadets.

It is also rather fitting that this Saturday's contest will be played in New York, the scene of 33 of the previous 38 encounters between these two teams. And Yankee Stadium has been the battlefield 21 times out of the 24 games played in New York City.

The Irish hold the series advantage having won 26 while losing only eight with four games ending in deadlocks. Notre Dame has won the last two recent encounters, 17-0 in 1965 and 35-0 in 1966.

Propelled by an awesome offensive performance over Michigan State (42-28) last Saturday, the Irish bring a 2-1 won-lost record into this week's contest. The Cadets, victimized 20-13 by Texas A & M last week, are also 2-1.

FIGHT RESULTS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Oscar Alvarado, 10, Uvalde, Tex., stopped J.C. Morgan, 155, Los Angeles, on disqualification in fifth round when referee ruled that Morgan had hit Alvarado with low blow after being warned.

Suddenly Tough

NEW YORK — Ten months after the Super Bowl, it is Baltimore and New York all over again. But this time the shape of the ball is different and so are the contours of the athletes, and the name of the game. The behemoths of the Colts and Jets are off stage and the lithe and quick Orioles and Mets are on, and the contest starting Saturday is the World Series.

but it is the Mets who have made the World Series and brought a lovely romance to it. They are the little match girls who not only had their noses pressed against the windows all those dreary years but were dropping their matches all over the place as well. Now they're inside, and warm and comfortable and loved a suddenly tough and have people believing in them.

Destiny Time

It's the best World Series that could have evolved from the mish-mash of the major leagues' first experiment at split divisions and pennant play-offs. The Orioles were generally recognized as the best team in the American League and perhaps in both leagues, and it was good that they defeated Minnesota and assured the World Series of some top class.

The Mets have made this World Series a beaut in their own way. They scotched all belief that they are merely a baseball accident who stumbled into the play-offs and bumbled through it, by demolishing a good team, the Atlanta Braves, in three straight. Even as their landsmen, the Jets, defied Las Vegas and the football oracles otherwise by destroying the Colts last January, the Mets, too, may have an appointment with destiny.

If the Mets do not quite withstand scrutiny as a fine baseball team, position by position, it must be remembered that they are unreal to start with. There was great doubt that they could beat the Braves in the play-off. Certainly few predicted it would happen in three straight. But for the Mets it was a breeze.

They never quite finished better than ninth in their seven previous years and Gil Hodges would qualify as the manager of the year if he finished sixth with that miserable outfit. So with virtually the same cast as last year, Hodges had the Mets in close pursuit of the division-leading Chicago Cubs all season, fell 6½ games behind in early September and then in their most hopeless state rallied them to win it all with a ten-game streak at the finish.

Faceless Mets

The surprising rush of the Mets as a team obscured some of the Mets as individuals, and on Monday at Minneapolis when the Orioles had just finished mopping up the Twins, there was a commentary on the facelessness of the Mets as a team. Sure, they were managed by Gil Hodges, and they had done just great, and they'd gotten some fine pitching from Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman, but who played third base for the Mets?

Who plays third base for the Mets? That was a question asked of five of the Orioles after their victory at Minneapolis, and four of the five failed to get a passing mark. "Gee, I dunno," they said.

Among those Orioles who didn't know who plays third base for the Mets were the two Robinsons, Frank and Brooks, intelligent persons but quite unaware that Wayne Garrett had come along in stealth and was doing an outstanding job for Hodges' team. They might not have been quick to remember, either, that the Mets had a new second baseman named Ken Boswell who was very good.

Short Smugness

The Atlanta Braves found out about Garrett and Boswell and their disposition to win ball games in sudden fashion. Young Garrett's home run that wrapped it up for the Mets in three straight was one that he had been saving for a long time, his second homer of the year. Boswell's heroics were quite similar. He hit only three homers all season, then got two big ones in the play-off.

Man for man, the Mets appear to have no business in a Series with the Orioles, hardened pros who have been there before, and with pitching depth calculated to frighten. But the Mets are hard to impress. If the Orioles don't know who plays third base for the Mets, then the Mets are very apt to have no respect at all for the Orioles, and remember that last January in Miami the Baltimore Colts were a pretty smug outfit, too, for a while.

Speediest Trotter Ends Race Career

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The racing career of Nevele Pride, the world's fastest trotter at one mile with a 1:54 4-5 clocking, is believed over.

Mike MacCormac, director of racing at Blue Bonnets, said Nevele Pride had been withdrawn from a $25,000 trot at the Canadian track scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 19.

"It came as a complete surprise to use," MacCormac said. "Stanley Dancer called me and said that the horse pulled up lame and, in the best interests of the horse, it was decided to retire him immediately."
