

Floor pass defense costs two TDs at Lexington

Minutemen romp to 24 to 0 conference victory

Plymouth's airmobility leaks. So badly, in fact, that Tony Dellanides threw 149 yards of passes through it at Lexington Saturday afternoon to lead the Minutemen to a 24 to 0 conquest of Plymouth in a Johnny Appleseed conference game.

Save for the first period, Plymouth never was a factor.

Lexington got on the scoreboard with 4:17 left in the first half, after each side had battled to a scoreless first period.

Indeed, Plymouth put on its best offensive show of the afternoon midway in the first quarter, taking possession at its 20 after a touchback and driving to the Lexington 26 in 13 plays before running out of downs.

Two passes accounted for 21 of the 54 yards. A POOR PUNT, COMING off a snap that trickled on the turf and made into the teeth of a biting wind, carried only 25 yards to the Red 25 and set up the first Lexington score.

Yogi Durbin got home for the final yard after he had contributed a 12-yarder off right tackle.

Lexington required only six plays to negotiate the distance to the end zone. Gregg Ammons, a splendid young placekicker, booted the first of three extra points.

Lexington was to score again in the first half again in the first half on a freak play that got off after time had expired and was the result of a mental lapse by the Red pass defense.

Plymouth had penetrated to the Lexington 22 when, on third down, Kim Carter's pass was intercepted.

From this point, the Minutemen set out for pay dirt. From the Lexington 40, Dellanides threw six straight passes. Plymouth did not mount a pass rush against any of them and Dellanides, who is only a fair passer, had plenty of time to unload.

Even so, on fourth down, his pass was incomplete and Plymouth took over at its 55.

Jeff Wentz intercepted Carter's pass at the 50. A pass interference call against Ron Foreman on the last play of the half gave the Minutemen a life, since another play must be run if the defense is guilty of an infraction.

Everybody in the park knew Dellanides intended to throw. And throw he did. Straight toward Wentz at the goal line.

Mike Hamman had a clear shot at interception but elected to bat the ball instead. When he did so, it caromed into Wentz's arms and he fell over the goal line.

Ammon's place kick was anti-climactic.

PLYMOUTH DID ABSOLUTELY nothing in the last half.

Indeed, its offensive line, a poor thing all season, simply could not do much with the inspired Lexington defense.

The visitors gained only 21 yards on the ground and 44 yards in the air throughout the second half.

After Hughes' pass was intercepted by Ammons late in the third period, Lexington set out from its 20. Durbin tickled 26 yards off right tackle and Scott Coulter, the principal Lexington ball carrier this gloomy afternoon, and Durbin collaborated in fetching the Minutemen to the Plymouth 13.

After two passes to the end zone were incomplete, Ammons set up at his 20 and split the goal posts.

THE MINUTEMEN weren't finished. Early in the final period, they took a punt at their 40 and got an 11-yard run-back.

From the Red 49, Lexington moved 40 yards in five plays, the last one a throw from Dellanides to Rick Compton that covered 11 yards. Compton's 14-yard shot through left tackle set this one up.

Ammons' kick was a gain good.

Plymouth had its second golden opportunity to score late in the game, having advanced from its 40. A 35-yard pass from Carter to Hamman off the shotgun formation contributed to the drive, which brought the Big Red to the shadow of the Lexington goal posts. But with fourth down at the six, Carter's throw to Hamman was dropped.

Lexington simply ran out the clock.

This may have been the Big Red's last chance to win one this year, because it's all uphill and icy from now on.
